Federation Calls 'Move a Challenge

Textile Organization Is Planned Similar to Steel Set-up.

The Labor Front.

John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization announced it will form a complete rival labor organization to the American Federation of Labor and chose Sidney Hillman to direct its textile organization campaign.

Striking employes of the Willard Hotel returned to work after a strike settlement negotiated by Assistant Secretary of Labor McGrady.

Conferences were to be resumed today in the Chrysler and Hudson automobile plants as a deadlock continued in strikes of their employes, while 5,800 were thrown out of work in suppliers' plants as a result of the Chrysler sit-down.

Pay increases in a number of factories scattered over the Nation were led by those in the packing industry, where boosts to 100,000 employes amounting to $22,000,000 a year were announced.

Challenge by Lewis.

By William V. Nessly.

A new Nation-wide organization, paralleling that of the American Federation of Labor, down to State, city and local central unions, in effect was ordered set up yesterday by John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization.

The action, taken at a meeting of heads of the unions making up the C. I. O., came as a climax to months of activity by the Lewis organization marked by its campaigns in the automobile and steel industries, and definitely brought creation of an organization that will rival the American Federation, heretofore unchallenged in its control of organized labor in America.

It was so received by William Green, president of the Federation, who made it plain that the organization headed by him will combat the rival plans.

The action was taken by unanimous adoption of a resolution authorizing executive officers of the C. I. O. to issue certificates of affiliation to national, international, State, regional, city central bodies and local groups "whenever it is deemed such action is advisable."

Lewis, at a press conference, said such certificates would be issued to Lewis unions that have been ousted by State Federations and Central bodies, as has been done in Maryland, and at Columbus and Cleveland, Ohio. Meanwhile, John P. Frey, A. F. L. metal trades chieftan, conferred secretly in Pittsburgh with employe representative plan leaders of Carnegie-Illinois in a possible bid for conversion of that organization into an A. F. L. affiliate, the Associated Press said.

Plan Textile Action.

In addition to decision to take this epochal step in the country's labor movement, the C. I. O. heads took these steps:

Set up a Textile Organizing Committee, similar to that operating in steel, to completely organize the textile industry.

Created a similar division to co-operate with the oil field, gas well and refinery workers in an organization campaign in the oil industry. This group will be known as the Petroleum Organizing Committee.

Extended financial and moral assistance to the Industrial Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America in organizing the shipbuilding industry.

Authorized creation of an advisory committee to act similarly with the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers union.

The decision to extend the C. I. O. organization clear down to local bodies was plainly a shock to Green. Apprised of it by reporters, he paused for some moments while he studied the statement issued by the C. I. O.

"I think all those who have been in touch with developments in the organization of the C. I. O. expected this action. It was clearly evident from the beginning that this objective would finally be reached.

"Now it has reached the point

Bea Gottlieb Sped To Hospital After Swallowing Drug

New York, March 9 (AP).—Police tonight reported Beatrice Gottlieb, 30-year-old golf star, swallowed poison at her home in Forest Hills, Long Island, tonight, after a Queens County jury acquitted Carey Phelan, former boxer, of assaulting her last September.

At the Queens General Hospital in Jamaica, where Miss Gottlieb was taken, she was reported in "very poor" condition. She was said to be semi-conscious.

Hospital attaches said they did not know what the poison was. The ambulance was sent to her home about 11:30 p. m., approximately 2 hours after the jury acquitted Phelan of charges of assaulting the woman golfer who once defeated the Duke of Windsor on the links.

Willard Hotel Sit-Down Strike Ended at McGrady Conference

Waiters Jump to Feet at Signal, Cooks Start Fires as Union Group Meets Management.

The Willard Hotel strikers got to their feet a few minutes before 8 o'clock last night and went to work. Their "sit-down" strike was over.

In the main dining room, dark since 6 p. m. the evening before, the candelabra blazed and the three-piece orchestra struck up the "Star-Spangled Banner." The waiters threw their napkins over their arms, resumed their polite manner, and set out to take care of customers. Those in the tap room and cocktail room did likewise.

The cooks down in the huge kitchen reached for their cleavers and spoons, their pots and their pans and the kitchen help started the fires a-burning.

The 15 pickets, their noses red from the growing cold, dipped their placards and started for the hall of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes Alliance to cheer the settlement.

Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward F. McGrady, the Roosevelt Administration's "ace" in the settlement of strikes, had scored another triumph. With his background of great national labor struggles, this was a minor affair. He treated it, however, as if it were a major industrial engagement.

Toward the dinner hour, after a day of telephone calls to both sides, McGrady called to his office a committee representing the strikers. He already knew how far the hotel would go. An hour or so later, he emerged from his office to say that it "was all over."

Like most strikes, this one ended with each side making concessions. The strike leaders were able to say afterwards that they had gained "recognition of the union," while the hotel management was able to say that the union agreed not to press for a "closed shop."

Formal announcement of the end of the strike was made after McGrady had led the strikers' committee to the office of H. P. Somer-

Loyalists Claim 'Proof' 14,000 Italians Aid Foe

3 Black Shirts Captured; 2 Divisions Reported on Rebels' Side.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, March 9.—With insurgent troops pressing toward Madrid from the northeast, the city's defense chief asserted tonight he had proof "a whole Italian division" was participating in the push.

Official sources late tonight reported government forces were resisting stubbornly not one but two Italian divisions in fierce night-fighting south of Alaminos, less than 65 miles northeast of Madrid.

Gen. Jose Miaja, supreme government commander on the central front, declared three Italian prisoners seized in the struggle in northern Guadalajara Province had landed at Cadiz February 22 with an Italian division (usually about

New Art Gallery Urged at Cost Of $4,800,000

Roosevelt Supports Plan to House Smithsonian Treasures Suitably.

By Sidney Olson.

A new $4,800,000 art museum, to be known as the Smithsonian Gallery of Art and to complement the National Gallery of Art bestowed by Andrew Mellon, is proposed in a bill to be introduced soon by Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts.

The proposed gallery has the support of former Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, and President Roosevelt is understood to be sympathetic with the plan, which will make available to the public about $15,000,000 worth of art now stored in the cellars of the Smithsonian Institution.

Formal announcement of the plan

Traffic Experts Begin Classes In Motor Safety at G. W. U.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

(Winner of first prize in the Nation-wide C. I. T. Safety Contest with his 1936 series appearing in The Post.)

Traffic education—acknowledged as a major factor in highway safety—was inaugurated on a large scale at George Washington University yesterday when daily classes in safe driving were opened under nationally recognized traffic experts.

Striking at the District's current traffic problem, the new courses are sponsored by the university's School of Education and the American Automobile Association. The movement has been indorsed by local safety authorities and the Board of Education.

Designed to instruct driving teachers, who, in turn, will pass their safety knowledge on to school children and driving novices, the university classes are in charge of Dr. F. R. Noffsinger, professor of education at Indiana University, and Prof. Amos E. Neyhart, safety authority of Pennsylvania State College.

Academic work, lectures and practical instruction in driving and highway safety are included in the courses. Among Washington "students" is Birch Bayh, head of the physical education department of District public schools, who will conduct a similar course this summer at Roosevelt High School.

Although importance will be attached to motoring and general driving practices, the pedestrian will receive his or her share of instruction, it was pointed out.

Aroused by the number of pedestrian fatalities in Washington in recent months, sponsors of the course have included instruction in pedestrian responsibilities. Sound walking practices will be drilled into the "students" and special lectures will show how traffic authorities are attempting to safeguard pedestrians.

Obligations of the "man behind the wheel" will be taught in practical driving lessons. The AAA has furnished a dual-control instruction car for use on the highway.

But before a "student" is permitted to operate a car—no matter what his driving experience has been—he must first submit to reaction and physical tests in a classroom.

Numerous instruments have been assembled to test vision, distance judgment, sluggishness and general ability to operate an auto. If these tests are passed, academic work begins. Then there are lectures, sound films, charts and graphs.

When the foundation has been laid, actual instruction in the dual-control car begins.

Despite the increasing number of automobile accidents and fatalities, instructors point out, cities can establish greater safety records through public co-operation and a complete knowledge of what they

Judge Denies Maxwell Girl Third Trial

Ignores Lawyer's Plea Three Jurors Were Prejudiced.

Va. Teacher Released on Bond Pending Appeal to Higher Court.

By Frederic B. Tuttle,
A Staff Correspondent.

Wise, Va., March 9.—Judge Ezra T. Carter tonight overruled a motion for a new trial for Edith Maxwell, 22-year-old former mountain school teacher, twice convicted of murdering Trigg Maxwell, her blacksmith father.

The judge, however, allowed Edith to remain at liberty on $15,000 bond, pending an appeal which will be made to the Virginia Supreme Court by Charles Henry Smith, defense attorney, of Alexandria.

As the evening shadows fell across the Blue Ridge Mountains, Judge Carter concluded hearing evidence presented during the last two days, and began to review the case from the bench.

The white-haired jurist held that the contention of the defense that a change of venue would have been necessary for Edith to be tried fairly was untrue.

Calls Law "Correct and Right."

"The law of Virginia is correct and right," said Judge Carter slowly, "and there is no evidence showing that a change of venue would be justified."

With the allegation of the defense that no corpus delicti had been produced, the judge disagreed.

"Trigg Maxwell is dead, there is certainly no doubt of that," he said, and then he took up, one by one, various other objections of the defense at the time of the second trial, which ended December 16, when Edith was found guilty of murder in the second degree and sentenced to serve 20 years.

Supports Jury's Verdict.

Judge Carter said he felt the verdict of the jury had been fair.

As Judge Carter reviewed the case and the courtroom became darker, Edith's face remained pale and her lips set. Her eyes sometimes shifted to the bench and then across the courtroom, from which most of the crowd already had departed.

The objection of the defense to admission of evidence during the trial about the family life of the Maxwells, and tales the neighbors told of quarrels and squabbling between Edith and her father, and between Mrs. Ann Maxwell, her mother, and Trigg, also was overruled by the judge.

He held that the family life was important as background for a possible murder.

Ax Ruled Out as Testimony.

The domestic difficulties at the little house in Pound, where the tragedy occurred July 21, 1935, were important links in the story of Trigg Maxwell's death, the judge held.

As for the instrument of death and the introduction of the small ax into the testimony, Judge Carter reminded the court that he had ruled the ax out as evidence later, and he did not believe it constituted grounds for a new trial.

The same was true of a description of the muddy creek at the rear of the Maxwell house in Pound, Judge Carter held. The creek had been introduced as evidence because the "instrument" of death might have been buried beneath its surface.

In fact, Judge Carter ruled all the evidence admitted into the case and admitted to the record as proper.

Ignores Alleged Prejudice.

He ignored the third objection of the defense that three members of the jury that found Edith guilty last December were prejudiced, and had expressed opinions as to her guilt before they became members of the venire.

It was nightfall when the judge announced his final verdict. Immediately, notice of an appeal was filed by Smith, and Judge Carter, continued Edith's bail.

"Well, it's what we expected," the brunette mountain girl said.

The defense played its trump card today when it introduced eight witnesses who testified as to the prejudices of the three jurors.

They were lean men with hard faces, typical of this mountainous coal-mining country.

The jurors were George Pennington, John Lambert and Eldridge Christian.

Courtroom Packed.

Both Pennington and Lambert live in Big Stone Gap and are carpenters, while Christian is a miner from the village of Inman.

When word went out that Smith was about to introduce eight witnesses who would prove the venire

Broker Indicted On Arson Charges Dies Under Train

New York, March 9 (AP).—A man identified by police as Col. Frank Keech, Wall Street broker, was killed under a subway train late today at Lexington avenue and Fifty-first street.

Col. Keech was under indictment at Newburgh on charges of arson and conspiracy to defraud insurance companies in connection with a fire that swept his palatial home at Tuxedo Park in 1932. He was at liberty in $50,000 bail pending trial.

On February 28 he was arraigned at Newburgh and pleaded innocent.

Indicted with him was his former chauffeur, Charles F. Smith, who testified before the grand jury.

'Change in Court Too Urgent For Delay,' President Warns; Nominates 2 Federal Judges

Both Sides Support One Appointee; Committee Receives Names.

Senate Hearings Will Open Today

Cummings to Speak for Administration; Farley Stumps in N. C.

By Robert C. Albright.

Nominations for two Federal judgeships, to fill existing vacancies on district and circuit benches in Illinois and Missouri, were sent to the Capitol yesterday by President Roosevelt as the Senate set the stage for hearings today on the President's judiciary program.

The President's lower court nominees were J. Earl Major, 50-year-old district court judge at Springfield, Ill., to be judge of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit, and John Caskie Collet, 39-year-old Missouri Supreme Court justice, to be United States district judge for Missouri.

Major was backed for the post by Senator William H. Dieterich, Illinois Democrat, long "noncommittal" on the President's court proposals, who Thursday night at Buffalo, N. Y., viewed the program with sympathy in declaring it "neither violates any provision of the Constitution nor destroys the independence of the Federal judiciary." Dieterich's indorsement of Major had been at the White House for several weeks.

Both Sides Back Collet.

Collet had the support of another Democratic Senator who until recently had been "noncommittal." He was Senator Harry S. Truman, of Missouri, who also broke his silence Thursday night at Jefferson City by announcing he would vote for the President's judiciary program. Collet also was backed by Senator Bennett Champ Clark, of Missouri, an avowed opponent of the court plan. Their indorsement had been at the White House for seven weeks.

Hearings on the judiciary reorganization message are to open at 10:30 a. m. today before the Senate Judiciary Committee, in the Senate caucus room, with Attorney General Homes S. Cummings, principal author of the judiciary bill, on the witness stand. Opponents of the bill informally have designated Senator Tom Connally, of Texas, and Senator Edward R. Burke, of Nebraska, to cross-examine Cummings "so that all of the facts may be known."

The Senate will not be in session today, so it was considered likely the committee hearings may run far into the afternoon. Administration testimony will continue for the remainder of the week, with Robert H. Jackson, assistant to the Attorney General, following Cummings. Opposition testimony will begin Monday, when Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, will be the first witness. Wheeler at that time will advance his proposed constitutional amendment for Congressional overriding of court invalidations, as a substitute for the President's court plan.

League Ends Session.

Meantime, Postmaster General Farley yesterday led an Administration stump in the South for the President's program, speaking twice in North Carolina. Pleading for Democratic party "loyalty" on the court issue, and directing his shafts at "members of my party who refuse to go along," Farley told a student nonpartisan organization at the University of North Carolina, at Chapel Hill:

"I have no doubt in the world that if the matter could be put to a popular vote, the President would be sustained and those people of his own party who oppose his plan would find themselves as lonesome as did the others who cast their lot with the Liberty League last November."

Word that Major and Collet would be named to the Illionis and Missouri lower court vacancies had reached the Capitol in advance of Mrs. Simpson Arrives at New Haven in France

By the Associated Press.

Monts, France, March 9.—Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson arrived today at her new retreat, 400-year-old turreted Chateau de Cande, for an indefinite stay.

Accompanied by her Riviera hosts, Mr. and Mrs. Herman L. Rogers, Mrs. Simpson drove up to the chateau in the front seat of a low-slung sedan.

Twenty-two servants, headed by an English butler, lined up with their uniforms resplendent in the soft, red glow of chandeliers shining out under the castle's irregular, high-pointed, blue slate roofs and turrets.

Discussing their plans, Rogers said the party would be at the chateau for "at least a month."

"Beyond that, we have made no arrangements and shall just take things quietly."

Some members of the house party hinted "a very distinguished person" may come to the chateau. They declined to disclose this person's identity, but some mention was made it might be "one of the duke's entourage."

Ex-SEC Chief Named to Head Maritime Unit

Kennedy to Return to U. S. Service; Nominated by Roosevelt.

Joseph P. Kennedy, who, as chairman, guided the Securities and Exchange Commission through its difficult first 15 months of existence, is returning to the Government service to be chairman of the new permanent Maritime Commission. His appointment was announced yesterday by President Roosevelt.

With him on the permanent commission will be the following, whose nominations were sent to the Senate along with that of Kennedy:

Thomas M. Woodward, of Pennsylvania, for the remainder of the unexpired term of three years from September 26, 1936. He succeeds Admiral Montgomery M. Taylor, who has served temporarily

Rear Admiral Henry A. Wiley, U. S. N., retired, for a term of four years from last September 26. He was given a recess appointment at that time.

Edward C. Moran, jr., former Representative from Maine, for a term of five years.

Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, U. S. N., retired, for a term of six years.

Kennedy will serve the remainder of the unexpired term of two years from September 26, to which George Landick, jr., was appointed temporarily.

Will Direct Ship Subsidies.

The five-man commission, taking over the administrative setup created under the temporary board, will have charge of the distribution of millions of dollars in direct ship subsidies, which will replace the present system of ocean mail subsidies, expiring July 1. Thereafter the subsidies will be granted on operation and construction costs and will be based on the differences between foreign and American costs.

With the nominations, the President sent to Senator Royal S. Copeland, chairman of the Commerce Committee, facts relating to the ownership by Mr. Kennedy of 11 shares of Todd Shipyards, Inc., which it is the new chairman's intention, the President wrote, to dispose of.

Mr. Roosevelt wrote that when on February 26 he asked Kennedy to take the new post, the former S. E. C. head had told him of ownership of the stock, which had been

N. Y. Rejects Amendment On Child Labor

Party Lines Split in Roosevelt Home State as Bill Is Defeated.

By the Associated Press.

Albany, N. Y., March 9.—Ratification of the Federal child labor amendment by President Roosevelt's home State was overwhelmingly rejected today by the Assembly after bitter debate that raged nearly four hours.

The final vote of 42 ayes to 102 noes split party lines wide open, 41 Democrats joining 61 Republicans in opposing the proposal, despite repeated appeals by Democratic Gov. Herbert H. Lehman and the President.

Thirty-three Democrats and nine Republicans cast affirmative ballots.

The Democratic-controlled Senate ratified five weeks ago.

Twenty-eight States already have ratified. Approval of 36 is required to amend the Constitution.

Gov. Lehman expressed "deep disappointment" at the rejection.

"The child labor amendment was passed by overwhelming vote in Congress as a nonpartisan measure to protect the children of America against exploitation," he said.

It was the second time in as many years that the Assembly rejected the proposal, voting 110 to 35 against the measure when Democrats controlled the House in 1935.

Nearly two score Democrats rose to speak in the tense Assembly chamber, jammed to capacity with spectators, in the four-hour discussion that preceded the vote.

Democratic Assembly Leader Irwin Steingut, summing up for the administration forces, said "It is unthinkable that our State will fail to ratify the amendment."

Votes Against Measure.

Republican Floor Leader Irving M. Ives termed the measure "nonpartisan," but voted against it.

"I assume that, in opposing the proposition before us I may be accused of being a Bourbon and a Tory and reactionary," Ives said. "If to defend the sanctity of the home one must be a Bourbon, I am then a Bourbon. If to fight for religious liberty one must be a Tory, I am then a Tory. If to uphold academic freedom one must be reactionary, I am then reactionary."

Immediately after rejecting the proposal for ratification, the larger branch of the Legislature likewise beat down a motion to lay the measure on the table for further

2 Bandits Rob Taxicab Driver On Tour, Then Shoot His Wife

Two colored holdup men last night shot and wounded Mrs. Lillian Laurell, 39, of 17 T street northwest, after they had forced her cab driver husband to take them on a two-hour drive that led to Anacostia, T. B., Md., and finally to his door.

The woman was shot when she attempted to pick up a telephone to summon police after the holdup men had forced her husband to lead them into his home. She was in an undetermined condition at Sibley Hospital last night, suffering from two bullet wounds in the leg.

According to the story the driver, Sylvester E. Laurell, told police, the two men entered his cab at First and B streets southeast.

Pulling guns, they forced him to drive to Anacostia, then to Maryland. Near T. B., after asking him to pull off the main road, they robbed him of $5.60—the amount he had with him.

One of the men, disappointed, asked Laurell whether he'd been driving all day. Laurell said he had and finally admitted that he'd left the rest of his earnings at home.

"O. K., take us to your home then," the determined bandit told Laurell.

With drawn guns the two men followed the cab driver to the steps of his home. When Mrs. Laurell answered the door they entered the house.

The men fled after the shooting. Laurell took his wife to the hospital in his cab.

Declares Tribunal Needs Young Blood

'Fireside Chat' Delivered From Oval Room in White House.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Adopting a conciliatory tone toward those Democrats rebelling against him, President Roosevelt last night urged approval of his Supreme Court reorganization plan as necessary to save this country from the potential danger of an economic collapse similar to that of 1929.

Addressing the Nation in the first "fireside chat" of his second term, President Roosevelt contended that "recovery is speeding up to a point where the dangers of 1929 are again becoming possible, not this week or month, perhaps, but within a year or two."

National laws, he declared, are needed to complete the program on which he has been working to make the American economic system "bomb-proof against the causes of 1929." In order to complete "our program of protection in time," the President said, "we cannot delay one moment in making certain that our National Government has power to carry through."

"Period of Quiet Crisis."

The courts, he said, have cast doubts, however, on the "ability of the elected Congress to protect us against catastrophe by meeting squarely our modern social and economic conditions." He contended that the present is a period of "crisis—quiet crisis"—in the Nation's ability to proceed with that protection.

The President departed from the prepared text of his speech at two points. The first instance was at the conclusion of his denial that his plans are "an attack on the court," when, after a momentary halt, he added:

"The court itself can best undo what the court has done."

Again, at the end, he said, "You and I will do our part," in further emphasis upon the preceding statement that "I seek to make American democracy succeed."

The Supreme Court, Mr. Roosevelt asserted earlier in his speech, has in recent years "more and more often and more and more boldly asserted a power to veto laws passed by the Congress and State Legislature" and "in the last four years the sound rule of giving statutes the benefit of all reasonable doubt has been cast aside."

"The court has been acting not as a judicial body, but as a policy-making body," the President asserted and further on in his address he characterized it as "a third House of the Congress—a super-Legislature."

"When the Congress has sought to establish national agriculture, to improve the condition of labor, to safeguard business against unfair competition, to protect our national resources and in many other ways to serve our clearly national needs," Mr. Roosevelt asserted, "the majority of the court has been assuming the power to pass on the wisdom of these acts of Congress—and to approve or disapprove the public policy written into these laws."

Minority Opinions Quoted.

In substantiation of that accusation the President quoted excerpts from the minority opinions of the Supreme Court in several New Deal cases. The time had come, he said, "Where we must take action to save the Constitution from the court and the court from itself" to the end that there might be restored in this country "a government of laws and not of men."

Despite this indictment of the Supreme Court, the President declared he was not attacking the court, but only seeking to restore it to "its rightful and historic place in our system of Constitutional Government and to have it resume its high task of building anew on the Constitution 'a system of living law.'"

He disclaimed any desire to weaken the independence of the judiciary, asserting that an independent judiciary as proposed by the framers of the Constitution meant "a Supreme Court that will enforce the Constitution as written—that will refuse to amend the Constitution by the arbitrary exercise of

Senator Avers Detectives War Against Control

La Follette Says Agencies Combine to Defeat State Regulation.

By the Associated Press.

Senate investigators contended yesterday that private detective agencies which normally were bitter business rivals worked together on occasion to combat efforts of State Legislatures to regulate them.

Chairman La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, of the Civil Liberties Committee, commented that their opposition had resulted to date in a "batting average of 1,000 per cent." He said they had been successful in defeating proposed legislation in Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and New York.

W. Sherman Burns, of New York, treasurer of the Burns Detective Agency, testified his company did not object to regulation so long as it was "not prohibitory nor confiscatory." He said it was opposed, however, to disclosing the identity of its undercover employes, which he said would be required by most of the legislation.

Reads Correspondence.

La Follette read into the record inter-company correspondence of the Burns agency which, he said, showed the "brunt of the load" of opposition to the bills was borne by the Railway Audit & Inspection Co. and the Pinkerton Detective Agency, competitors of Burns.

La Follette said the agencies retained an attorney to work against legislation in Massachusetts and the Boston Burns manager was active in combating it.

La Follette offered a mass of evidence in an effort to show the Burns agency had frequently violated its avowed 'general policy" of refusing to "disrupt" labor organization activity or provide strike-breakers to industrial clients.

"Under-Cover Man" Talks.

Robert W. Coates, a Pittsburgh under-cover man for Burns, testified he had engaged in "stool-pigeon" work on labor trouble assignments in Connellsville and iPttsburgh, Pa.

At Connellsville, he said, he investigated the activities of "Communists" and labor "agitators" for the Capstan Glass Co. prior to a strike at the plant in 1935. In Pittsburgh, he added, he conducted similar investigations for the Haller Baking Co. and the Master Bakers Association, of which the Haller Co. was a member.

Music Federation Will Give Recital

The District of Columbia Federation of Music Clubs will present members of the junior department in a recital on Saturday evening at 8 o'clock in the Salle de Recital, 1325 G street northwest, under the direction of Gertrude Lyons, junior State counselor. A program of classic and romantic music will be given.

The participants are: Eulalee Ball, Margaret Curtis, Elizabeth Cramer, Paul Cramer, Jane Gass, Lisa Inazawa, Eleanor Morrison, Mary Clinta Nims Norris, Margaret Omeara, Fred Powell, Elaine Putnam, Majorie Reed, Olive Rickard, Gwendolyn Sutton, Ruby Lee Williams and Jean Elizabeth Wood.

Death Gun Traced To Schultz Aide

Hackensack, N. J., March 9 (AP).—Prosecutor John J. Breslin, guarded tonight the identity of a Dutch Schultz gangster to whom he said he had traced one of the guns used in the murder of R. Norman Redwood, "sandhog" union leader.

A former New York gun dealer, Moe Saraga, expressed fear for the safety of his wife and children after revealing, Breslin said, that the murder gun was in a lot he sold in April, 1933, to a lieutenant of the slain Schultz.

Saraga, held without bail as a material witness, was taken off the Queen Mary early today as he returned by police request from a European business trip. The witness, Breslin said, admitted supplying machine guns, pistols, bullet-proof vests and other weapons to Arthur (Dutch Schultz) Flegenheimer and his gang of beer runners and racketeers.

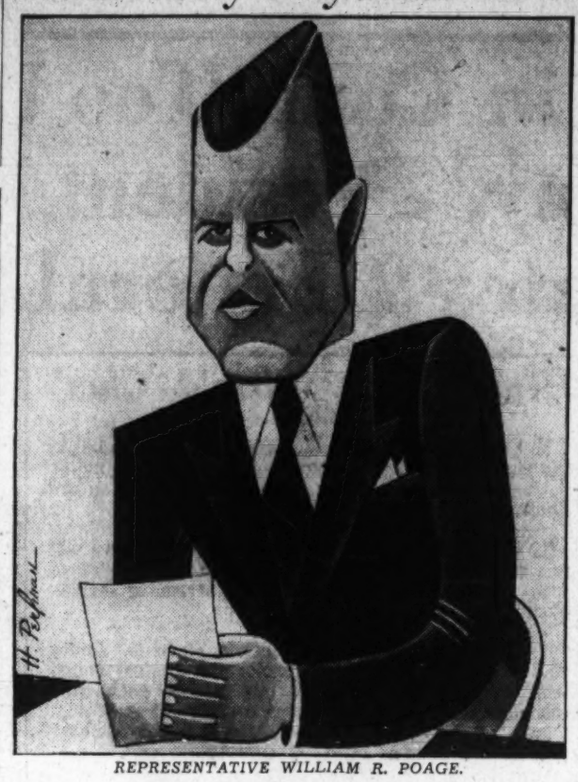

150 Fansteel Strikers Return as Plant Opens

Waukegan, Ill., March 9 (AP).—The Fansteel Metallurgical Corporation, in nearby North Chicago, from which sit-down strikers were evacuated with tear and nausea gas after occupying the plant for 10 days, resumed operations today.

Robert J. Aitchison, president of the corporation, said more than half of the plant's 300 workers had returned to their jobs.

New Faces in Congress

Poage, 38-Year-Old Bachelor, Will Marry Only a Texas Girl

REPRESENTATIVE WILLIAM R. POAGE.

Freshman Congressman Is Stanch Booster of Lone Star State Where He Was Born, Educated; Served 11 Years in Legislature.

Blue-eyed, 38-year-old William Robert Poage will marry only a home State product.

"I would indeed be hard to please if I could not find a Texas lass to wed," he said.

Speaking in a soft drawl, the freshman Congressman from the Lone Star State revealed he still yearns for the wide cow country where he spent his childhood and received his early education.

Graduated from Baylor University in geology, Poage spent two years teaching before he studied law.

"I wanted to be an active participant in the life of the community," he said. "The quiet inaction of the classroom did not appeal to me."

Admitted to the bar in 1924, the rangy Texan, who said his family had "a flair" for politics, decided to run for public office and in 1925 "dropped in" on the State Legislature.

Member of the Assembly until 1929, Poage ran for the State Senate in 1931, was elected, and served until this year.

Representative Poage has three "outstanding interests:" The farm tenancy bill, the maintenance of peace, widening the scope of the social security act.

"I'm sick and tired of the Government molly-coddling people to the point where they cease to be self-reliant," he said. "Nobody but a lawyer should have clients."

He believes that tenants should be encouraged to pick out their own homesteads but that the Government should not be permitted title to the land. "Washington should cease playing the role of the wet-nurse" he stated.

Poage's second slogan is "peace but preparedness." War should be made unwelcome for those who seek to make a profit and for those who take up the arms of aggrandizement, he feels.

As for social security . . . It's sound and I'm heartily in favor of it. Under its present provisions, however, 50 per cent of the people are not eligible to benefit. It should be extended to reach the farmers and small business men," he said.

The New Deal has done "tremendous good" he feels, though many of its bad features should oe scrapped. He denounced the theory of "prosperity by scarcity" and said he will oppose any revival of the national recovery act.

consideration. The vote was 38 ayes and 105 noes.

The action definitely killed the Kleinfeld measure on which today's Assembly action was taken, but leaves open for possible future debate a similar bill sponsored by Assemblyman William T. Andrews, Harlem Democrat.

Ratified by 28.

By the Associated Press.

Twenty-eight States have ratified the child labor amendment.

Since the beginning of the year, four legislatures—Nevada., New Mexico, Kentucky and Kansas—have approved the amendment. Three states — North Carolina, South Dakota and Texas—have rejected the proposal in 1937 sessions.

The amendment was submitted in 1924. The number of States ratifying has varied. A number of legislatures first rejected the proposal, later approved it and in some instances reconsidered ratification and finally turned it down.

Those States which were on record today as ratifying follow: Arkansas, California, Arizona, Wisconsin, Montana, Colorado, Oregon, Washington, North Dakota, Ohio, Michigan, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Illinois, Oklahoma, Iowa, West Virginia, Minnesota, Maine, Pennsylvania, Wyoming, Utah, Idaho, Indiana, Kentucky, Nevada, New Mexico, Kansas.

N. Y. Assembly Receives Bill to Ban Sit-Downs

Albany, N. Y., March 9 (AP).—Sit-down strikes would be outlawed in New York State under a bill proposed in the Legislature last night by Assemblyman James J. Wadsworth (Republican).

Reorganization Plan May Take 3 Years, Claim

Testimony that it may take three years to work out departmental shifts and eliminations if President Roosevelt is granted full Government reorganizing powers he seeks of Congress, was received yesterday by the Joint Congressional Reorganization Committee now studying the President's plan.

With members of the President's Committee on Administrative Management on the witness stand, it was learned that cross-questioning Senators were told that a three-year study may be needed before the reorganization plan can be worked out to the satisfaction of the Senate.

The joint committee now has before it two preliminary drafts of bills that would give the President power not only to establish two new executive departments, but also to make shifts and eliminations in bureaus. The committee still is awaiting the so-called "Administration draft" that presumably will be offered by Senate Majority Leader Robinson.

Meanwhile, it was learned that the joint group will be asked to hold hearings on the reorganization report being made by Brookings Institution for Senator Harry Flood Byrd's special Senate reorganization committee. The Brookings report, only part of which has been published, conflicts in many features with the President's committee report.

If the joint committee's hearings are confined to the President's own recommendations, the Byrd committee may hold independent hearings on the Brookings report later in the session, it was reported.

To date, testimony on the President's plan has been taken only from members of the President's committee, headed by Louis Brownlow.

Lewis Forms Group to Rival A. F. L. Unions

where it plans to function as a rival organization of the American Federation of Labor."

Green Plans Parley.

Asked what action, "defensive or offensive," would be taken, whether the executive council or a convention should be called, he replied that would be determined after consultation with other members of the Federation.

He had just completed a two-day conference with leading organizers of the A. F. of L. from all parts of the country. He pointed out that in addition to its international unions the Federation now has almost 800 Central Labor Unions, with 48 State Federations, and 900 Federal and 108 national unions, whose dues are paid direct to the national Federation.

Lewis announced the Textile Workers Organizing Committee will be headed by Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, as chairman, with these associates:

Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers; Francis J. Gorman, president of the United Textile Workers; Emil Rieve, president of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers; Charles Weinstein, of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers; T. F. Burns, vice president of the United Rubber Workers, and a member from the Ladies Garment Workers Union, not yet named. Lee Pressman will act as counsel, and W. D. Locke as director of research. Offices will be in New York.

"Ample finances" for the drive are available, he said, pointing out that the similar plans for organizing steel fixed $500,000 as the minimum amount to be provided by the C. I. O.

Maryland probably will be among the first States to receive the new certificates of affiliation, he said, since Lewis unions have dropped from the Federation organization in that State. He said no specific plans had been made with regard to Government employes. New bodies that are organized will not be affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, though all of the 15 unions making up the C. I. O. still are officially listed by the Federation as affiliates though they are suspended or "dual unionism" and "insurrection."

Reminded of Green's plans to organize the oil workers, which also are to be sought by the C. I. O. forces, Lewis replied:

"Really, I don't want to discuss that. I know nothing of less consequence than what Mr. Green plans."

Reporting that "so many workers in so many industries" have asked C. I. O. affiliation that he couldn't enumerate them, Lewis declared:

"The C. I. O. has caught the imagination of the workers, and our concrete accomplishments give them assurance that we can benefit them."

Of the strike in Chrysler automobile plants Lewis said "there has been a complete collapse of the company union." He said 103 of 124 company union officials have resigned "and asked that the United Automobile Workers (the Lewis union) be designated the bargaining agency."

Calls Strike Complete.

Earlier, Homer Martin, president of the U. A. W. A., had said here that "the strike is complete; fifty thousand men are out." He said it was demonstrated that the union had a majority of the company's employes. His union is insisting on recognition as the sole bargaining agency for all the employes.

The C. I. O. yesterday named Charles P. Howard, president of the International Typographical Union; Philip Murray, vice president of the United Mine Workers, and Harvey Fremming, president of the Oil Field, Gas Well and Refinery Workers to direct the drive in oil fields, refineries and gasoline stations. Potential membership was placed at 1,000,000.

Lewis said Fremming had reported rapid progress in organizing five of the Standard Oil companies.

He declared the Industrial Marine and Shipbuilding Workers would be supported in their struggle with the Electric Boat Co. He said the company has a virtual monopoly in the building of submarines for the Government, and said it must recognize "the principle in our major laws" on labor relations.

The C. I. O. made public its agreement with the textile workers union for the membership drive. It provides the organizing committee will have power to fix dues and initiation fees, take over all the dues received, if necessary, along with all the funds of the present union, the officers of which place themselves under orders of the committee. The C. I. O. agrees to contribute whatever money the campaign requires and will determine all the details incident to the campaign, as well as its termination.

in his family 20 years. It pays $2 a year, Kennedy wrote, and sells at about $55 a share. His holdings amount to only about ½ of 1 per cent of the total outstanding.

Ruled Eligible.

The President advised Solicitor General Stanley Reed of the situation, but was told in return that "in my opinion Mr. Kennedy is eligible to appointment as a member of the commission and may be designated by you as chairman.

The President's letter to Copeland added:

"However, in order to avoid any difference of opinion as to his right to lawfully qualify while still the owner of the stock in question, it is Mr. Kennedy's purpose to dispose of the stock prior to qualification.

"I wanted you and your committee to be in full possession of these facts."

Kennedy, now 48, New York and Boston financier, has been one of the outstanding figures in the Roosevelt Administration. With a huge fortune, made chiefly in the stock market, he met with considerable opposition, which he had expected, when he accepted the position on the commission to regulate the issuance and trading of securities.

But at the end of his first year, so effectively had he worked, he was re-elected to the chairmanship by the commission, and was being acclaimed alike by professional Wall Street traders, bankers, and liberals. His first year had seen a record-breaking increase in security flotations.

Nomination Is Surprise.

The nomination of Kennedy, New York financier, who left the Securities Commission September 23, 1935, to return to private business, came as a surprise to many officials, although he had been a frequent caller at the White House in recent weeks. He was there again yesterday, but made no comment to reporters afterward.

The temporary maritime commission continued to function yesterday, announcing pay increases for 1,344 officers and men aboard 36 vessels operated by five Government-owned steamship lines.

The five ship lines affected are the American Hampton Roads, the Yankee-France, the American Republics, the Oriole and the American Pioneer.

New Art Gallery Urged at Cost Of $4,800,000

was to have been withheld by Dr. C. G. Abbot, institution secretary, until the bill had been introduced in the next day or so, as soon as it had cleared the Budget Bureau, but newsmen got wind of it yesterday.

Compared to Luxembourg.

The Smithsonian Gallery is to bear the same relationship to the National Gallery, said Dr. Abbot yesterday, that the Luxembourg Gallery holds to the Louvre in Paris, or the Tate Gallery to the National Gallery in London.

The architectural plan is to build the new gallery between Twelfth and Fourteenth streets northwest, and between Constitution avenue and North Mall drive. Thus it will serve as a right wing of a trio of museum buildings, with the Mellon or National Gallery as the left wing and the National Museum in the center. The three buildings will extend in close relationship from Fourteenth street to Seventh street along Constitution avenue and North Mall drive.

Only the center portion of the Smithsonian Gallery will be built with the $4,800,000. Two wings are to be added as needed in the next several decades, it was explained.

To Acquire Modern Art.

The new gallery would include the National Portrait Gallery suggested last year by Senator Walsh in a bill which failed of final action.

Its primary function, besides the display of the Smithsonian collections of art, ceramics, glass, tapestries and sculptures, will be the acquisition and exhibition of contemporary art.

Dr. Abbot pointed out that for 30 years the Smtihsonian has had but 10,000 square feet of space in which to display its $15,000,000 collections, and as a result three-fourths of the paintings and exhibits have remained in storage. Furthermore, the situation has discouraged those who wished to endow the gallery or bestow gifts of paintings, sculpture or objects d'art.

Twenty Times Present Space.

In the contemplated gallery there will be about 200,000 square feet of exhibition space, about 20 times the present total.

The plan for the new museum was worked out with the approval of the President, with Dr. Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Board, with Dr. Abbot and Dr. Alexander Wetmore, of the Smithsonian, with C. J. Peoples, director of the Procurement Division of the Treasury, with Edward Bruce, chief of the Treasury Department art program, and with other officials.

Senator Walsh's bill provides for a commission to be called the Smithsonian Gallery of Art Commission. This will consist of:

The secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, the director of Procurement of the Treasury, the chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Board, the chairman of the National Commission of Fine Arts, and the chairman of the National Gallery of Art Commission.

Traveling Galleries Provided.

The commission will receive $40,000 for expenses. The director's salary and costs of exhibitions, gallery expenses, etc., are to be met by annual appropriations by Congress. One rather radical departure in its administration will be the provision for traveling exhibitions of its art treasures to proceed from city to city throughout the country in order to make art more widely available.

The proponents of the bill noted that nearly every city of major importance in the country has a finer art gallery than Washington, at this time, but that the proposed National Gallery and the new Smithsonian Gallery will lift the city's art collections toward the top rank.

U. S. Explorer Is Safe After Bearers Flee

Psychologist Makes Way Back to Guiana Capital From Jungle.

By the Associated Press.

Georgetown, British Guiana, March 9.—Exhausted and worn, J. G. Le Van, American psychologist and explorer, reached Georgetown today, ending almost a month's struggle to find his way out of the desolate grassy savannas after superstitious porters, frightened by his scientific research, deserted him.

Le Van's porters, fearing he was a "Kenaima," or evil spirit, fled in terror when he dug up the skeletons of warriors killed in battle 300 years ago.

Alone in the trackless grasslands, Le Van let his horse pick its way to a small inland village, where he was cared for temporarily. When he finally reached Georgetown, he had lost 30 pounds and was exhausted from the long trek.

Indians of the South American hinterland are "psychologically better than civilized people," Le Van declared after his long scientific journey among the uncivilized tribes.

The explorer said he found no traces of neurosis and no recollection of insanity for the last 85 years in the 300 villages which he visited on the 3,000-mile adventure.

Le Van was in an isolated, seldom-visited section of British Guiana, near the juncture of the Brazil, Venezuela and Guiana borders, when his terrified porters deserted him.

He had set out, accompanied by natives, from the Brazilian border last October.

"Civilized people can learn a lot from Indians in the British Guiana hinterland," Le Van declared.

"I find no neurotism or psychotism, only four suicides in living memory and no insanity as far as 85 years back.

"Apparently the Indians are able to live without mental strain. According to the Western impression, their life, based on a tour of 125 villages, is an example of perfect Communism in practice."

Referring to the trials of his trip, Le Van said he once had to go nearly a fortnight without regular food because he insisted upon pushing forward during the equivalent of Indian Christmas, a celebration of the birth of the rain and sun gods for the planting season.

Le Van found skeletons, some with heads bashed in, and rare weapons in excavation of a cemetery alongside some old battlefields, he continued.

His Indian porters, learning the contents of the boxes he retained, thought him a devil and deserted. Another long period without food resulted, but his horse led him to the settlement where he found care and rest.

Le Van brought back a fine collection of Indian work, including a stone mortar believed to be several thousand years old.

C. L. Nordsieck, Naval Hero, Dies

Bluefield, W. Va., March 9 (AP).—Charles L. Nordsieck, 40, of Bristol, Va., former sea captain who was voted the Congressional Medal of Honor for his part in the bombardment of Vera Cruz, died in a hospital here today.

Nordsieck made several crossings of the Atlantic during the World War in command of a cargo ship, and prior to the war served as senior lieutenant in the U. S. Merchant Marine.

Surviving are his wife and a daughter.

Funeral services will be conducted in the Bluefield Lutheran Church at 5 p. m. Wednesday, with burial in Arlington Cemetery, at Washington.

Morgenthau Sister Is Granted Divorce

Reno, Nev., March 9 (AP).—Mrs. Ruth M. Naumberg, sister of Henry Morgenthau, jr., Treasury Secretary, won an uncontested divorce decree today from George W. Naumberg, wealthy retired New York banker.

The decree was granted at a private trial on grounds of cruelty.

The former Ruth Morgenthau was Naumberg's second wife. She was married to him April 30, 1917. They have three children, George, jr., 18; Philip, 17, and Ellin, 13. Custody and property rights were settled out of court.

Naumberg, a Harvard graduate, was assistant chief of the cotton section of the War Industries Board during the World War.

Britain Moves to Control Ships in Spain Blockade

London, March 9 (AP).—A bill to require British shipping bound for Spain to comply with the European non-intervention committee's naval control scheme was introduced in the House of Lords today by Viscount Plymouth. Enactment was expected by Saturday, when the patrol is scheduled to begin.

Similar action must be taken by the 26 other nations belonging to the committee.

Edith Maxwell Plea for New Trial Refused unfair, the courtroom became packed.

There were miners in overalls, with coal grime on their faces, taking the day off for court. There were old, bearded men who chewed tobacco. There were dignified gentlemen here and there in winged collars. In one of the rows near the front were several young women, about the age of Edith, who eyed her curiously, and interspersed in the crowd were little old ladies in bonnets and calico.

Preacher Testifies.

Smith's first witness was George Willis, an electrician of Inman, who said that when Christian came from serving on the jury he said, "I think she'll get a new trial," and failed to explain what he meant.

Charles Roberts, a miner from Inman, then told how he and Christian discussed the Maxwell case in "the Hollow" near Inman, and how later they nearly came to blows when Christian found out that Roberts had filed an affidavit.

"Twenty-five years are not enough," Roberts quoted Christian as saying after the first trial. "She ought to have had more."

When Charles Phillips, a Baptist preacher of the hill country, took the stand, he substantiated the story. He remained unflurried under the cross-questioning by Special Prosecutor Oscar Vicars and Commonwealth's Attorney Fred Greear.

Tells of Cafe Talk.

Richard Collins, of Kingsport, Tenn., and "Bud" Ruth, of Big Stone Gap, both told of hearing Pennington talk in a cafe. Bob Edens, the cafe owner, substantiated the story.

The last defense witness called to the stand was grizzled Mack Haynes, a Big Stone Gap carpenter, who said Lambert and he had talked the case over.

The Commonwealth struck quickly in rebuttal. It put on the stand Lambert, Pennington and Christian. All denied ever having discussed Edith and the death of Trigg Maxwell. They denied having formed any opinion about the case before they were sworn in as jurors.

Character Witnesses Called.

Lambert and Pennington were elderly men with white hair and unshaven stubble. They both were proud, they said, of their reputations for veracity. Christian was a black-bearded miner.

"I never did express any opinion to anyone," he said, under cross-examination by Smith.

Then the Commonwealth, as the time drew near for the case to go to the judge, introduced almost a score of character witnesses, who testified as to the "good reputations" of the jurors, and tended to discredit the defense witnesses.

Mrs. Thenia Lambert, bespectacled wife of Lambert, had to be helped into the courtroom on the arm of a deputy.

Beauticians Battle to Hear True Story of Mrs. Simpson

New York Throng Decides Windsor's Fiancee Means More to Them Than Nude 'Air Baths' or Vegetable Coiffures.

By the United Press.

New York, March 9.—Some 2,500 beauty experts tonight settled the question whether vegetables in your girl friend's coiffure, the Greta Garbo haircut, "air baths" in the nude or Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson is the most important thing in a beauty expert's life.

It turned out to be Mrs. Simpson.

Before the verdict was in, however, several hundred hair-pulling, punch-throwing hairdressers and manicurists had mauled and marred each other's make-up in a free-for-all fight to get into the Hotel Pennsylvania ballroom and hear about Mrs. Simpson from Mme. Gail, self-confessed expert.

Until she stepped to the rostrum to tell about it, everything was as smooth as a frog's neck at the annual beauty shop owners' convention.

The "air bath" was getting a lot of attention from certain types of observers. It is a simple way for young ladies to stay healthy, offered by Dr. Howard V. H. Inches, a dashing young man who conducts Cook's tours on the side.

Inches advocates having young ladies disrobe and stand in front of an open window every night and morning.

"It will prove stimulating," he explained.

"Any woman," Mme. Gail began, "who can hold her man at 41—or, if necessary, get another one—must have charm."

"That's what I came here to hear about," a blonde young lady from Utah panted into the ear of a married usher, "and by golly, I'm going to hear it or else——"

"You bet, sister—and here goes," said a delegate who had come "all the way from Oregon."

The delegate from Oregon had gone back a few steps for a running start, and she hit the usher amidships, taking him out of the play like a bum going out of a Delancey street bar.

By the time the usher had picked himself up, 20 detectives and a flock of hotel hired hands were trying to pry apart a mass of beauticians working out on each other make-up.

House Committee Forces Ballou to Give Pay Report

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, yesterday made a futile attempt to posptone action on an order of Chairman Collins, of the House sub-committee on District appropriations, but before the end of the day he had capitulated.

The trouble arose over the failure of the school board to submit in proper form a report on the outside occupations for pay of school teachers as requested by Collins.

When the sub-committee chairman sent it back for correction, Dr. Ballou explained that he would have to wait until the next meeting of the Board of Education to get authority to furnish the information. That, he said, would be in ten days or so.

Collins, it is reliably reported, barked that the superintendent had better not wait that long or else he might be summoned before the sub-committee.

The chairman admitted yesterday that he had threatened to bring pressure, but he denied that he had spoken of a jail term or contempt of the House.

At any rate the amended report was submitted before the day ended.

Mrs. Roosevelt Admits Telling Fibs as a Child

'Habit of Lying' Ended With Disappearance of 'Fear,' First Lady Says.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, March 9. — Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt recalls in her autobiography that she was a naughty little girl who told fibs.

She also tells how, as a very young girl, she insisted on sampling a glass of beer, and never has cared for it since.

Writing in the April issue of the Ladies Home Journal, the President's wife says her childhood "habit of lying" made her a great trial to her mother.

One of her earlier recollections is of attending a convent in France, where she was treated with aloofness by the other little girls.

"One of the girls swallowed a penny," she recalls. "The excitement was great; every attention was given her, she was the center of everybody's interest. I longed to be in her place. One day I went to one of the sisters and told her that I had swallowed a penny. I think it must have been evident that my story was not true, but I could not be shaken, so they sent for my mother and told her that they did not believe me. She took me away in disgrace. Understanding as I do now my mother's character, I realize how terrible it must have seemed to her to have a child who would lie . . .

"She did not understand that a child may lie from fear; I myself never understood it until I reached the age where I suddenly realized that there was nothing to fear."

The beer episode occurred in Germany. Concerning it she writes:

"We often went to the cafes and the older people drank steins of beer with the delicious-looking foam on top. I saw little German children drinking it too. I begged my father to let me have one of the small mugs like the other children. He refused for a while and then said: "Very well, but remember if you have it, you have to drink the whole glass."

"I promised without a suspicion of the horror before me. When I took my first taste, instead of something sweet and delicious, I found I had something very bitter which I could hardly swallow. I was a disillusioned and disappointed child, but I had to finish the glass."

Glass Regains Strength At Home; Prepares Talk

By the Associated Press.

J. W. Rixey Smith, secretary to Senator Carter Glass, said yesterday the Senator is recovering strength at his home here and is expected to return to his office before the end of the week.

The Senator recently passed his seventy-ninth birthday anniversary. While at home he has summoned members of his staff for dictation of correspondence and to keep him informed of developments on Capitol Hill. He also has been at work on a speech on the President's judiciary proposal, to which he is opposed.

Senate Passes Copeland Food And Drug Bill

Provides for Injunctions to Halt False Advertising; Includes Cosmetics.

By the Associated Press.

The Copeland pure food, drug and cosmetics bill, representing a new approach to a regulatory problem which has stirred controversy for years, won the approval of the Senate yesterday.

The chamber rejected all major amendments, including a wholesale revision, and sent the bill to the House in substantially the same form as approved by the Senate Commerce Committee.

The measure would widen the scope of present food and drug law by subjecting cosmetics to Federal regulation for the first time and by prohibiting "false advertising" of foods, drugs, therapeutic devices and cosmetics.

Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York, author of the bill, contended that it would also tighten existing regulations covering misbranding, adulteration and fraudulent practices.

The bill provides for Nation-wide Federal injunctions instead of criminal prosecutions against violations. Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, questioned this method of enforcement, contending the injunctive process would enable the courts to "control execution" of all sections of the law. Senator Copeland defended the method on the ground it would enable enforcement officers to halt sales of an illegal article simultaneously throughout the country.

U. S. Highway Aid For District Urged

Inclusion of the District in the benefits of future Federal aid highway legislaiton has been urged by the Keystone Automobile Club. The club advisory board has given indorsement to the bill introduced by Senator William H. King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, which would bring this about.

In a letter to Senator King, the Keystone board pointed out that "the District of Columbia is the only political subdivision within the United States not participating in the apportionment of highway funds to be matched as provided for under the permanent legislation of the Federal Government."

In urging passage of the remedial legislation, Keystone stated that during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1936, local motorists paid into the Federal Treasury $2,117,544 in various taxes.

Husband Slayer Convicted by Jury

Los Angeles, March 9 (AP).—A jury convicted Helen Wills Love today of second-degree murder for the killing of Harry Love, 46-year-old broker, whom she claimed as her clandestine husband.

The verdict carries a penalty of from five years to life imprisonment.

Jury deliberations were halted temporarily this afternoon while Judge Frank M. Smith declared a woman member of the jury in contempt of court for intoxication.

An hour and a half after the jury retired Harry Joannes, foreman, told Judge Smith that Mrs. Mary Plettner was apparently drunk and in no condition to decide upon the fate of a woman the State demands be sent to the gallows.

Dr. Benjamin Blank, county physician, gave Mrs. Plettner a sobriety test and told the court she was intoxicated.

U. S. Backward On Alien Rules, Reynolds Says

Senator Assails 'Laxity' of Laws in Speech Before D. A. R.

A plea to preserve America for Americans was voiced yesterday by Senator Robert R. Reynolds, of North Carolina, in an address before the thirty-sixth State conference of the D. C. Daughters of the American Revolution.

Declaring that the United States "is the most backward country in the world when it comes to keeping tab on visitors from foreign shores," Senator Reynolds further pointed out that all our laws regarding the registration, deportation and restriction of aliens are far too lax.

"Every immigrant in this day in time either joins our ranks of the unemployed, or usurps a job that rightfully belongs to a man or a women born in this country," he asserted. In this connection he stated, also, that one out of every seven unemployed pedsons here is an alien. "It has been estimated that in 1935 aliens on U. S. relief rolls saved enough money to send back to their relatives across the water $250,000,000," he said. "We must enact laws to keep America for Americans; we must strengthen immigration and deportation laws in order to accomplish this."

Law Tightening Sought.

He mentioned that he and Representative Joe Starnes, of Alabama, were supporting measures in Congress to prohibit Government employment of aliens; to tighten up immigration and deportation laws, and to register every alien who lands on U. S. shores.

Senator Reynolds stressed particularly the importance of deporting undesirable foreigners. He said at present there are 3,500 aliens whose records are on file at the Department of Labor and for whom warrants for deportation have been issued. "Yet they are not deported," he averred. "Why? Well, chiefly because somebody is ignoring their records and is working to keep them in this country despite their undesirability." Among the entire number there may be a 100 who would make good American citizens, the Senator said. "The others should be deported without further consideration."

Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, State regent of the District D. A. R., introduced the speaker. She presided at both sessions yesterday and at the annual banquet held last night at the Mayflower Hotel.

Reports Are Heard.

The order of business at the morning and afternoon sessions included the reading of minutes of Sunday and Monday meetings; a report of the special committee on by-laws; a report of the District C. A. R., and a final statement from the resolutions committee.

There was also a report of the Chapter House Corporation. New officers for the corporation include the following: President, Mrs. Harry C. Grove; vice president, Mrs. John M. Beavers; recording secretary, Mrs. Gertrude Moser; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Ralph Griswold; treasurer, Miss Phebe Stine; custodian of files, Mrs. Jason Waterman.

At the banquet last night, Miss Earline White, first vice president of the Business and Professional Women's Club, was the speaker. Music for the occasion was furnished by the United States Navy Band Orchestra; Watson Ahlenfeld, bass; Earl Nalls, tenor, and Miss Jewell Downs, pianist.

Other entertainment included a showing of "The Servant of the People," a patriotic film stressing the importance of the Constitution.

Michael Burrows, Navy Bureau, Dies

Michael R. Burrows, 45, assistant registrar of the Bureau of Navigation, died unexpectedly yesterday morning of a heart attack at his home, 916 Twenty-third street northwest. He had been employed in the Navy Department for 20 years without a day of sick leave.

He was born September 1, 1892, in New York City, and entered the Naval Reserve as a chief yeoman during the World War, transferring to civil occupation shortly afterwards. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth C. Burrows, who works in the judge advocate general's office in the Navy Department, and son, Donald Lane Burrows.

Funeral services will be at 11:30 a. m. tomorrow in Arlington Cemetery with military honors.

Hush-Hush or Health?

139 Syphilis Deaths in D. C. Outnumber Traffic Fatalities

Year's Record Shows 9,146 Cases of Social Disease Reported Here to Health Bureau; 25 Children Under 5 Succumbed.

By Gerald Gross.

Illustrating the venereal disease situation in this city of 619,000 population, about one-third colored, cannot be done with statistics, convenient catch phrases or any other such handy means.

It is altogether probable that three persons on your crowded street car coming to work this morning were syphilitic and as many more had gonorrhea, but such "scare" type of exposition long since lost its effectiveness.

Compilations by the United States Public Health Service show that, during last December, the District Health Department's social hygiene clinic alone treated more new cases of the inseparable twins than were reported by the entire cities of Akron, Denver, Kansas City, Mo.; Omaha and St. Paul combined.

Yet figures, if they don't lie, do sometimes produce a distorted image, therefore it is advisable to take them open mindedly. Similarly, the logical inference that the number of diseased foodhandlers must be pretty high in this city, whose health laws do not require their physical examination should not bring hasty conclusions.

Case Histories Needed.

To form a picture of the Capital's foremost public health problem, one must go down to the clinics, draw out case histories from the social workers, learn what are the problems of the dispensary heads, hear the private physician's side, determine the part being played by the Central Auditing Bureau for Hospitals—in short, one must march to the front instead of remaining behind the lines bulwarked with figures and theories.

Here, as elsewhere in the United States, private practitioners are woefully delinquent in the reporting of new cases of syphilis and gonorrhea coming to them for treatment. Health Officer George C. Ruhland deplores this condition. Leaders in the local profession do not deny it exists.

As for mortality rates, the combined handicaps of negligence on the part of many physicians to certify that his patient died of syphilis and the frequent difficulty of determining whether death was caused by venereal infection or one of its myriad by-products are simply too much for the Public Health Service. It does not attempt to keep a syphilis mortality table.

During 1936 a total of 17,389 cases of preventable, communicable diseases was reported to the District Health Department—measles, diphtheria, meningitis, scarlet fever, tuberculosis, whooping cough, etc. More than half, or 9,146, was accounted for by the so-called venereal infections, an all-time record for Washington. Syphilis and gonorrhea were fairly evenly divided. The percentage of chancroid, a relatively innocuous condition, was too small to merit serious consideration.

139 Syphilis Deaths.

In the same 12-month period, 139 syphilis deaths were reported to Health Officer Ruhland, a figure well in excess of the number of traffic fatalities. Thirty-eight of these were white cases, 101 colored. In addition, two colored persons succumbed to gonorrhea, which maims and sterilizes but rarely kills.

Twenty-five of the deaths were of children under the age of 5, 20 of whom were colored. These innocent victims of a horrible curse did not acquire the disease "in venery," as a physician might put it.

Up to February 15 of this year 441 cases of syphilis and 505 of gonorrhea had been reported. Up to February 27 the number of deaths, all from syphilis, stood at 31. All but eight were colored.

Prospects are quite bright that the death-dealing, brain-crippling, body-disfiguring, baby-killing micro-organism known as the spirochete is diabolically determined to keep up with the District automobiles again this year in the claiming of human life.

Still examining Health Department records, 28 babies under the age of 1 year were reported to be suffering from syphilis in 1936. In addition, there were 24 cases in the 1-4 year age group; 35 in the 5-9 year group, and 64 between the ages of 10 and 14.

16 Infants Infected.

For gonorrhea, the figures were 16 in the infant class; 101 between the ages of 1 and 4; 182 in the 5-9 group and 137 in the 10-14 category.

Among these children, as with adults, the preponderance is colored.

There, in brief outline, is the city record picture. Undoubtedly it helps give one an idea of the wide prevalence in our midst of two distinct diseases which are highly contagious yet it leaves much unsaid and unexplained. it is a model of understatement.

"If two-thirds of your reports are made by private physicians, you have good reporting," the investigator was told by Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon general of the U. S. Public Health Service and leader of the Nation-wide drive against syphilis.

Of the 9,146 reported cases of venereal disease in 1936, only 2,459—slightly less than 27 per cent—came from private practioners. This in spite of the fact that the District health code makes syphilis and gonorrhea just as reportable as diphtheria or measles.

Dr. Thomas C. Thompson, director of the Health Department's social hygiene clinic on a part-time basis, is among the physicians who believe that private practitioners are taking care of the majority of the untold thousands now being treated in Washington. Yet his I street clinic alone reported more new cases in 1936 than did all the city's doctors combined, the figures being 2,722 to 2,459.

Anomalous Situations.

This is but one of the anomalous situations not depicted by Dr. Ruhland's record book.

Another is the fact that persons being treated in such Federal institutions as Mount Alto Hospital, Walter Reed Hospital, Naval Hospital and the Old Soldiers Home are not "recognized," even though most of them circulate among the populace just as certainly as the sufferer without military or naval status. For some reason or another, cases detected there are not reported to the District health officer.

There is evidence, too, that the District's own public welfare institutions are lax in notifying the Health Department of new cases of syphilis and gonorrhea in their midst. It is just a matter of time whether it be a day or 10 years, until the greater part of the individuals within those institutions —Receiving Home for Children, reform schools, workhouse, etc.— will be back in society again. Hence the vital importance of acknowledging the incidence of communicable infection in their midst, not to mention the necessity of treatment, which will be dealt with in a later article.

So much for the more important factors that help make a travesty of "official" mortality rates on the infections in question. Taking into account the fact that syphilis is often misdiagnosed and its deaths frequently attributed, innocently or willfully, to something else, and the probability that the number of active venereal cases in the Capital that have not been recognized exceeds or surpasses the total under treatment—well, one wonders if it isn't about time to throw restraint to the winds and call out the National Guard or something.

Duplications Possible.

It should be pointed out, of course, that duplications in reporting undoubtedly exist. A case will be discovered by a private doctor who, let us assume, notifies the Health Department. The patient, after a few treatments, stops coming because he can't afford to pay the fees or for some other reason. Without notifying the physician, he transfers to a clinic which does not know and is not told that his infection has been reported. When the clinic receives a blood test positive from its laboratory, the case is reported once more.

If the individual gave his true name both to the private physician and the clinic, the Health Department will consolidate the reports, preventing duplication. However, the physician in the first place may have reported by number instead of by name, so that duplication would be inevitable. Or the patient may have given the clinic a fictitious name.

From the foregoing, based on first-hand information, it can be readily seen that a quantitative appraisal of venereal disease problem facing the Nation's Capital must be sheer speculation.

But go down to your Health Department clinic at 512 I street northwest, to your dispensaries at Gallinger, Providence, Georgetown, Episcopal and the other hospitals and you will be confronted not by academic conjecture but by the real thing.

McNutt Praises U. S. 'Altruism' In Philippines

Quezon, on Visit to D. C., Reminisces With Congressmen.

President Manuel L. Quezon of the Philippine Commonwealth and members of the Congressional party who attended his inauguration reminisced over the event at a party given at the Mayflower Hotel last night by former Senator and Mrs. Harry B. Hawes.

Former Gov. Paul V. McNutt, recently appointed High Commissioner of the Philippines, described the granting of independence to the Philippines as "the finest example of altruistic effort on the part of a civilized nation."

Senator Josepr Robinson, of Arkansas, characterized President Quezon as "the most amiable personality I have ever encountered" and predicted increasing development of the strong friendship between the people of the United States and the Philippines.

Armed Bandit Gets $4 in Store Holdup

An armed colored bandit held up the manager of a High Ice Cream store at 1213 Fourth street southwest yesterday and escaped with about $4.

Irene Thompson, 30, the shop manager said the man came into the store and asked for ice cream. When she turned around she was confronted by a pistol and the command: "Hand it over." The robber escaped on foot, she said.

Whitman Conn Death Inquiry Closed by Jury

Inquirers Unable to Place Time and Manner of Fatal Injuries.

A coroner's jury yesterday returned a verdict of "death as the result of injuries received—time, place and manner unknown," as a sequel to the death January 3 of Whitman P. Conn, 36, editor of The Constructor, contractors' trade journal, and former Washington Post reporter.

Evidence introduced that Conn was injured in a "friendly boxing bout" and that he received head cuts from a filing cabinet in his office was not substantiated. There were no witnesses to the supposed accident.

Dr. Joseph Burton Glenn, family physician, told of being summoned to the Conn home December 18. The patient was suffering from severe headaches and giddiness, he said, but no immediate diagnosis was made. That night, however, Conn lapsed into a comatose condition and was removed to Garfield Hospital, Dr. Glenn said. There Dr. Harry Carr, brain surgeon, removed a clot on his brain, but the patient never regained consciousness. A second operation was equally unsuccessful, and Conn died January 3.

Dr. Joseph D. Stout, neurologist, testified death was due to "cerebral homorrhage." Conn had told him of striking his head against the sharp edge of a filing cabinet, he said.

Mrs. Catherine Conn, the wife, told of a deep head cut her husband had received. "He told me he had struck his head against a filing cabinet. Shortly after he was complaining of severe headaches," she said.

Chrysler Denies U. A. W. A. Sole Parley Rights

Murphy to Take Command of Mediators; Firestone Talks Collapse.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, March 9.—Chrysler Corporation executives, in a peace parley behind picket-held factory gates, persisted tonight in refusal to recognize the United Automobile Workers of America as the sole bargaining agency for 67,000 employes.

"The answer is still 'No,'" company representatives informed the union before today's conference adjourned. The meeting will resume at 10 a. m. Wednesday.

Another crisis continued when L. S. Buckmaster, president of Firestone Local, United Rubber Workers of America, announced tonight in Akron, Ohio, that negotiations had collapsed between the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. and the union in a labor dispute which closed the Firestone plants last week making 10,000 employes idle.

Gov. Frank Murphy, whose mediation efforts were successful in last month's General Motors strike, left Palm Beach tonight by train for Detroit, where he was expected to take charge of mediations.

Union representatives described today's meeting as "peaceful, but no closer to a decision."

The union, trying to enforce its demand by sit-down strikes, was in control of all of Chrysler's automobile production plants in the Detroit area, including the Highland Park unit, where the conference was held. Approximately 55,000 Chrysler workers were idle.

"Situation Unchanged."

B. E. Hutchinson, chairman of the Chrysler finance committee, said, "The situation has not been changed because of strikes at the plants."

The corporation's refusal to grant exclusive bargaining rights to the union led to the strikes yesterday. Richard T. Frankensteen, U. A. W. A. organizational director, telephoned shop stewards the code phrase, "My hand is up," and thousands sat down at their jobs.

Although a sufficient number to control each unit remained in the plants tonight, company police maintained their regular patrols, frequently in company with union guards, and maintenance men and janitors continued their work.

Outside, union picket groups divided their time between the Chrysler plants and those of the Hudson Motor Car Co., not far away on Detroit's East Side. A "sit-down" throwing 10,000 Hudson workers out of employment preceded the Chrysler strikes by a few hours. Conferences with Hudson officials whom the union accused of "stalling" in previous negotiations, will be resumed tomorrow.

Briggs Operations Curtailed.

Operations in two plants of the Briggs Manufacturing Co. which supplies bodies to Chrysler divisions were sharply curtailed with 7,500 out of work, and the corporation issued "stop" orders to other suppliers with whom Hutchinson estimated Chrysler spends $50,000,000 monthly.

The Chrysler plant at Newcastle, Ind., closed, but Hutchinson said other units at Evansville, Ind., Los Angeles, Calif., Marysville, Mich., and Windsor, Ont., probably would continue operations until parts supplies are exhausted.

"It should be made clear," Hutchinson said, "that we have dealt with the U. A. W. A. in the past, are dealing with them now, and will continue to deal with them in the future. The men are out of work of their own choosing."

Workers in two General Motors units at Flint—the Chevrolet Motor assembly department and the Fisher Body Plant No. 1 press and metals department—where sit-down strikes occurred yesterday, returned to their jobs today pending negotiations.

Debate National Wage.

Negotiations between the union and General Motors on issues remaining from the general strikes of last month will be resumed here tomorrow, with the question of a national minimum hourly wage still to be settled.

The Chrysler sit-down strikers made no attempt to erect barricades in the plants, except at the Highland Park unit where an entrance gate was blocked this morning to prevent K. T. Keller, corporation president, from entering.

After strike pickets refused Keller's "command" to "open this gate," the executive drove away, saying, "from now on they deal with the courts."

Frankensteen, who arrived later, telephoned Herman L. Weckler, vice president of Chrysler, to express regret at the incident. He ordered removal of the barricade and assured Weckler the executives and their staffs would be permitted to enter. An afternoon conference then was arranged.

Meat Packers Boost Pay Rolls To Record High

'Big Four' Announce Rise of $22,000,000 for 92,000 Workers.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 9. — The "Big Four" packing houses today raised the pay of their employes to the highest point in their history.

More than 92,000 men and women working for the huge meat processing firms here and at other points scattered from New York to Los Angeles benefited to the extent of more than $22,000,000 a year. Similar increases were granted by smaller packers.

Wage increases of 9 cents an hour, effective next Monday, were posted for all employes paid by the hour and on piece work basis by Armour & Co., Wilson & Co., Swift & Co., and the Cudahy Packing Co.

Announcements stated proportionate advances were agreed upon for plant employes in other classifications.

Officials reported the new basic wage scale would be 62½ cents an hour.

It was the second pay boost for those on the packers pay rolls within five months and the fifth since 1932. The basic schedule represented a gain of 26½ cents over the low of 36 cents an hour in effect five years ago.

The companies acted after negotiations between representatives of the management and the employes.

President R. H. Cabell of Armour & Co., commented:

"Our employe's wages are now at an all-time peak and livestock prices, too, are very high. Meat prices reflect the price of livestock and the cost of preparation, and while we expect to see an advance in the price of meat to meet these new conditions we do not believe the advance will be out of line with growing consumer income."

Harvester Increase.

Chicago, March 9 (AP).—A wage increase of approximately $5,500,000 annually for employes of the International Harvester Co. was announced tonight by Sydney G. McAllister, president. The increase was scheduled to become effective March 15.

Pittsburgh, March 9 (AP).—The union committee conferring with the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. reported tonight the concern agreed to raise the minimum pay rate of 1,500 employes at its East Pittsburgh plant by 6 cents an hour.

Adventists' World Conference Opens Sessions in Takoma Park

International Leaders of Church Group Convene in Maryland for Study of Questions Affecting Body.

Coming to Washington to discuss means for spreading their gospel to all parts of the earth, Seventh Day Adventist leaders met yesterday in their world general conference at Takoma Park. Sessions wil be held through Friday.

The Adventist sect, an offshoot of Baptistism, originated in 1884. In that year a Baptist preacher from New England named Miller predicted the end of the world. His prophecy caused much discussion and his followers claimed the date he had named was right, but the event, the end of the world, was wrong. On the date, they said, something had happened in heaven—Christ had become the "high priest of the people of the world and the representative of the people of the earth before the throne of God."

Membership of 500,000.

Growing since then, and at present gaining converts at the rate of 20,000 a year, the sect now has 500,000 members, living in 353 nations, and speaking 580 languages.

With properties worth $57,000,000, scattered throughout the world from Burma to Takoma Park, the general conference spends $7,000,000 annually on missionary work.

The Rev. W. G. Turner, newly elected vice president, has just returned from the mission in New Guinea, where, the says, remarkable work is being done.

The government of New Guinea has been so impressed by the improvement made in people formerly savage that a member of the Adventist mission there may be invited to sit in the legislature.

First curing cuts, sores and other physical ills, and thus gaining the natives' confidence, the missionary carries out an educational program including, among other things, instruction in cleanliness, housing and the Bible.

Once Savages, Now Teachers.

These methods have been so successful, says the Rev. Mr. Turner, that tribesmen who 10 years ago were warring heathens are now teachers in elementary schools.

One young savage, who had his first meeting with civilization 10 years ago, recently passed a medical examination in the Fiji Islands. He now knows almost as much about medicine as a qualified white physician.

By way of preparing its people for the coming of the Savior, the general conference committee yesterday was considering a resolution which would ban motion pictures with a "salacious content."

Such pictures, it was stated, tend "to arouse unwholesome emotions, to break down morality" and "to lower the standards of the denomination."

McGrady Ends Willard Hotel Waiters' Strike

Terms to Be Settled at Conference Tomorrow, Says Management.

ville, managaing director of the Willard Hotel.

On the way into the hotel, McGrady had told the picketers to stop their parading and go to their hall. They did so with a whoop.

Somerville, after a brief talk with McGrady and strike leaders, issued this statement:

"I am pleased to announce that the strike at the Willard has been called off by the union.

"I appreciate the patience and consideration shown to the management of the Willard, not alone by its regular guests, but by the public in general in this most trying situation. We are doubly appreciative for the co-operation of Mr. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor.

"The strike is called off on the following conditions:

"1. Strike to be called off immediately.

"2. Everybody returns to their old positions at once.

"3. There will be no discrimination or penalties against any worker.

"4. The union agrees not to press for a closed shop.

"5. The management will meet with the union at 1 p. m. Thursday, March 11, 1937, and it holds itself ready to discuss any problem concerning their employment, including wages, hours of labor and arbitration, with the duly constituted representatives of the union.

"8. The management will not press any court cases until after the first conference has been held with the understanding that if an agreement is reached all court cases will be dropped."

L. Gardner Moore, president of the Hotel Association of Washington, who was present when the settlement was announced, issued this statement:

"It is a matter of gratification to the members of the Hotel Association of Washington that the strike at the Willard has been called off by the union, with terms of settlement satisfactory not only to the Willard, but to the oher hotels in Washington.

"The hotels are deeply appreciative of the understanding and interest manifested by the public during the strike in the stand by the Willard and associated hotels for an 'open shop.' We are glad that the union has agreed with the hotels on this point."

Miguel Garriga, international representative of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes International Association, chief spokesman for the strikers, had this to say:

"We got union recognition. We are the only agents for employes in the hotel and on our terms of hours and wages.

"We believe that at present it would not be fair to insist on a strictly closed shop."

In calling the strike, which caused 103 employes to sit down at their jobs, Morris L. Verbov, the union business agent, said that the Willard had "intimidated and coerced" employes who belonged to the union.

A significant development in the day was a meeting of the executive board of the Central Labor Union. At its conclusion President John Locher said:

"We took no action on the merits of the strike at the Willard.

"We did, however, adopt a resolution condemning the sit-down tactics emphatically."

The Mayflower Hotel also had a labor uprising in the course of the day, but, according to a statement issued by Manager Ralph Pollio, it was in no way comparable to the sit-down strike at the Willard.

"At the Mayflower," said Pollio, "the chambermaids, without union affiliations, requested a different distribution of work and an adjustment of the wage scale.

"The management, feeling that the requests were reasonable, met them. All this was carried out in an orderly manner and without interruption of business. On the other hand, the Willard is confronted, under a voluntary raise of wages, with a union demand for a closed shop with respect to which the Mayflower is in entire sympathy with the Willard."

Court Changes Vital to U. S., Says Roosevelt

Declares in Fireside Chat That Tribunal Needs Younger Blood.

judicial power—amendment by judicial say-so."

"It does not mean," he declared, "a judiciary so independent that it can deny the existence of facts universally recognized."

And in words which the President termed "bluntness" he replied to contentions that he was seeking to "pack the Supreme Court."

"If by that phrase 'packing the Court'," vigorously asserted Mr. Roosevelt, "it is charged that I wish to place on the bench spineless puppets who would disregard the law and would decide specific cases as I wished them to be decided, I make this answer: That no President fit for office would appoint, and no Senate of honorable men fit for their office would confirm, that kind of appointees to the Supreme Court.

"But if by that phrase, the charge is made that I would appoint and the Senate confirm justices worthy to sit beside present members of the court who understand those modern conditions—that I will appoint justices who will not undertake to override the judgment of the Congress on legislative policy—that I will appoint justices who will act as justices and not as legislators—if the appointment of such justices can be called 'packing the court,' then I say that I and with me the vast majority of the American people favor doing just that thing—now."

Refers to Platform.

Mr. Roosevelt undertook to justify his proposal in view of the promise of the Democratic platform that he would proceed within the Constitution, and that if that were found impossible he would seek clarifying amendments to the Constitution. He argued he was doing exactly that. He said that by a process of elimination he had reached the conclusion that, short of an amendment to the Constitution, the only method of advancing his program which was clearly constitutional was the one he has proposed to "infuse new blood into all our courts."

As for achieving the end by a constitutional amendment, the President contended that a diversity of proposals for amendments existed; that there is "no substantial group within the Congress or outside of it who are agreed on any single amendment," and that it would take too long, even if 13 States with 5 per cent of the Nation's population did not thwart the desire of the other 35 States.

Would "Restore Balance."

He insisted that his only purpose was to restore "the balance of power between the three great branches of the Federal Government," which he argued "has been tipped out of balance by the courts in direct contradiction of the high purposes of the framers of the Constitution."

"You who know me will accept my solemn assurance that in a world in which democracy is under attack," the President said, "I seek to make American democracy succeed."

His radio broadcast last night, delivered by the President sitting in the oval room on the second floor of the White House, was, as he explained at the outset, a continuation of his discussion of the Supreme Court reorganization plan last Thursday night before the Democratic Victory dinners.

But there was a vast difference between the two addresses—a difference so great as to suggest in places that they were written by different persons. Instead of pitching his appeal chiefly on emotional grounds, as he did last week, the President last night undertook to reason with the country. The belligerent tone displayed by the President on Thursday night was lacking in last night's address.

Two Opposing Groups.

But it was particularly apparent in his references to those who opposed his plan. Whereas on Thursday night the President termed the criticism of his plan as "this new roar" from "substantially the same elements of opposition" which he had in last year's campaign, last night he held that "two groups oppose my plan on the ground that they favor a constitutional amendment."

One group, he continued, included those who "fundamentally object to social and economic legislation along modern lines," and comprised those who last fall "tried to block the mandate of the people." But Mr. Roosevelt last night conceded there was a second group, composed, as he said, "of those who honestly believe the amendment process is the best, and who would be willing to support a reasonable amendment if they could agree on one."

The first group, he contended, was "making a last stand" by seeking to "kill off by delay the legislation demanded by mandate." To that group, Mr. Roosevelt declared that "I do not think you will be able to fool the American people as to your purposes."

To the second group enumerated by him he declared that "we cannot rely on an amendment as to the immediate or only answer to our present difficulties" and he warned them that when the time for action arrives "you will find that many of those who pretend to support you will sabotage any constructive amendment which is proposed."

"Look at these strange bed fellows of yours," he warned and then asked: "When before have you found them really at your side in your fights for progress."

Asks Younger Blood.

Interspersed throughout the President's speech were many of his arguments on behalf of the Supreme Court reorganization plan, which he undertook to sustain with citations to precedents and excerpts from the Constitution and minority opinions of the Supreme Court. He spoke several times of the need for infusing younger blood into the Federal judiciary and asserted his purpose was to provide "a reinvigorated, liberal-minded judiciary necessary to furnish quicker and cheaper justice from bottom to top."

But in no place did he advert to his original contentions that the appointment of new judges was necessary because of congested Federal court dockets. This was the thesis of the President's message to Congress on February 5, submitting his plan. It now has apparently been definitely abandoned, since it was not mentioned last Thursday night, either.

Text of President Roosevelt's Fireside Chat Urging Supreme Court Change

Text of President Roosevelt's fireside chat to the Nation last night in behalf of his plan for reorganizing the Supreme Court:

Last Thursday I described in detail certain economic problems which everyone admits now face the Nation. For the many messages which have come to me after that speech, and which it is physically impossible to answer individually, I take this means of saying "Thank you!"

Tonight, sitting at my desk in the White House, I make my first radio report to the people in my second term of office.

I am reminded of that evening in March, four years ago, when I made my first radio report to you. We were then in the midst of the great banking crisis.

"Soon after, with the authority of the Congress, we asked the Nation to turn over all of its privately held gold, dollar for dollar, to the Government of the United States.

Today's recovery proves how right that policy was.

Vote Was Four to Five.

But when, almost two years later, it came before the Supreme Court, its constitutionality was upheld only by a five-to-four vote. The change of one vote would have thrown all the affairs of this great Nation back into hopeless chaos. In effect, four justices ruled that the right under a private contract to exact a pound of flesh was more sacred than the main objectives of the Constitution to establish an enduring Nation.

In 1933 you and I knew that we must never let our economic system get completely out of joint again—that we could not afford to take the risk of another great depression.

We also became convinced that the only way to avoid a repetition of those dark days was to have a Government with power to prevent and to cure the abuses and the inequalities which had thrown that system out of joint.

We then began a program of remedying those abuses and inequalities—to give balance and stability to our economic system—to make it bombproof against the causes of 1929.

Today we are only part way through that program—and recovery is speeding up to a point where the dangers of 1929 are again becoming possible, not this wee or month perhaps, but within a year or two.

National Laws Needed.

National laws are needed to complete that program. Individual or local or State effort alone cannot protect us in 1937 any better than ten years ago.

It will take time—and plenty of time—to work out our remedies administratively even after legislation is passed. To complete our program of protection in time, therefore, we cannot delay one moment in making certain that our National Government has power to carry through.

Four years ago action did not come until the eleventh hour. It was almost too late.

If we learned anything from the depression we will not allow ourselves to run around in new circles of futile discussion and debate, always postponing the day of decision.

The American people have learned from the depression. For in the last three national elections an overwhelming majority of them voted a mandate that the Congress and the President begin the task of providing that protection—not after long years of debate, but now.

Doubt Cast On Congress.

The courts, however, have cast doubts on the ability of the elected Congress to protect us against catastrophe by meeting squarely our modern social and economic conditions.

We are at a crisis in our ability to proceed with that portection. It is a quiet crisis. There are no lines of depositors outside closed banks. But to the far-sighted it is far-reaching in its possibilities of injury to America.

I want to talk with you very simply about the need for present action in this crisis—the need to meet the unanswered challenge of one-third of a Nation ill-nourished, ill-clad, ill-housed.

Last Thursday I described the American form of Government as a three-horse team provided by the Constitution to the American people so that their field might be plowed. The three horses are, of course, the three branches of Government—the Congress, the Executive and the courts. Two of the horses are pulling in unison today; the third is not. Those who have intimated that the President of the United States is trying to drive that team overlook the simple fact that the President, as Cihef Executive, is himself one of the three horses.

It is the American people themselves who are in the driver's seat.

It is the American people themselves who want the furrow plowed.

It is the American people themselves who expect the third horse to pull in unison with the other two.

I hope that you have re-read the Constitution of the United States. Like the Bible, it ought to be read again and again.

"Easy to Understand."

It is an easy document to understand when you remember that it was called into being because the Articles of Confederation under which the original thirteen States tried to operate after the Revolution showed the need of a National Government with power enough to handle national problems. In its Preamble, the Constitution states that it was intended to form a more perfect Union and promote the general welfare; and the powers given to the Congress to carry out those purposes can be best described by saying that they were all the powers needed to meet each and every problem which then had a national character and which could not be met by merely local action.

But the framers went further. Having in mind that in succeeding generations many other problems then undreamed of would become national problems, they gave to the Congress the ample broad powers "to levy taxes * * * and provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States."

That, my friends, is what I honestly believe to have been the clear and underlying purpose of the patriots who wrote a Federal Constitution to create a National Government with national power, intended, as they said, "to form a more perfect Union * * * for ourselves and our posterity."

For nearly twenty years there was no conflict between the Congress and the court. Then, in 1803, Congress passed a statute which the Court said violated an express provision of the Constitution. The Court claimed the power to declare it unconstitutional and did so declare it. But a little later the Court itself admitted that it was an extraordinary power to exercise and through Mr. Justice Washington laid down this limitation upon it: "It is but a decent respect due to the wisdom, the integrity and the patriotism of the Legislative body, by which any law is passed, to presume in favor of its validity until its violation of the Constitution is proved beyond all reasonable doubt."

But since the rise of the modern movement for social and economic progress through legislation, the court has more and more often and more and more boldly asserted a power to veto laws passed by the Congress and State Legislatures in complete disregard of this original limitation.

In the last four years the sound rule of giving statutes the benefit of all reasonable doubt has been cast aside. The court has been acting not as a judicial body, but as a policy-making body.

When the Congress has sought to stabilize national agriculture, to improve the conditions of labor, to safeguard business against unfair competition, to protect our national resources, and in many other ways, to serve our clearly national needs, the majority of the court has been assuming the power to pass on the wisdom of these acts of the Congress—and to approve or disapprove the public policy written into these laws.

Quotes Justice Hughes.

That is not only my accusation. It is the accusation of most distinguished justices of the present Supreme Court. I have not the time to quote to you all the language used by dissenting justices in many of these cases. But in the case holding the railroad retirement act unconstitutional, for instance, Chief Justice Hughes said in a dissenting opinion that the majority opinion was "a departure from sound principles," and placed "an unwarranted limitation upon the commerce clause." And three other justices agreed with him.

In the case holding the AAA unconstitutional, Justice Stone said of the majority opinion that it was a "tortured construction of the Constitution." And two other justices agreed with him.

In the case holding the New York minimum wage law unconstitutional, Justice Stone said that the majority were actually reading into the Constitution their own "personal economic predilections," and that if the legislative power is not left free to choose the methods of solving the problems of poverty, subsistence and health of large numbers in the community, then "government is to be rendered impotent." And two other justices agreed with him.

In the face of these dissenting opinions, there is no basis for the claim made by some members of the court that something in the Constitution has compelled them regretfully to thwart the will of the people.

In the face of such dissenting opinions, it is perfectly clear, that as Chief Justice Hughes has said: "We are under a Constitution but the Constitution is what the judges say it is."

"Third House of Congress."

The court in addition to the proper use of its judicial functions has improperly set itself up as a third House of the Congress—a super-legislature, as one of the justices has called it—reading into the Constitution words and implications which are not there, and which were never intended to be there.

We have, therefore, reached the point as a Nation where we must take action to save the Constitution from the Court and the Court from itself. We must find a way to take an appeal from the Supreme Court to the Constitution itself. We want a Supreme Court which will do justice under the Constitution—not over it. In our courts we want a government of laws and not of men.

I want—as all Americans want—an independent judiciary as proposed by the framers of the Constitution. That means a Supreme Court that will enforce the Constitution as written—that will refuse to amend the Constitution by the arbitrary exercise of judicial power—amendment by judicial say-so. It does not mean a judiciary so independent that it can deny the existence of facts universally recognized.

How then could we proceed to perform the mandate given us? It was said in last year's Democratic platform "If these problems cannot be effectively solved within the Constitution, we shall seek such clarifying amendment as will assure the power to enact those laws, adequately to regulate commerce, protect public health and safety, and safeguard economic security." In other words we said we would seek an amendment only if every other possible means by legislation were to fail.

When I commenced to review the situation with the problem squarely before me, I came by a process of elimination to the conclusion that short of amendments the only method which was clearly constitutional, and would at the same time carry out other much-needed reforms, was to infuse new blood into all our courts. We must have men worthy and equipped to carry out impartial justice. But, at the same time, we must have judges who will bring to the courts a present-day sense of the Constitution—judges who will retain in the courts the judicial functions of a court, and reject the legislative powers which the courts have today assumed.

In 45 out of the 48 States of the Union, judges are chosen not for life, but for a period of years. In many States judges must retire at the age of 70. Congress has provided financial security by offering life pensions at full pay for Federal judges on all courts who are willing to retire at 70. In the case of Supreme Court justices that pension is $20,000 a year. But all Federal judges, once appointed, can, if they choose, hold office for life, no matter how old they may get to be.

What is my proposal? It is simply this: whenever a judge or justice of any Federal court has reached the age of 70 and does not avail himself of the opportunity to retire on a pension, a new member shall be appointed by the President then in office, with the approval, as required by the Constitution, of the Senate of the United States.

"Two Chief Purposes."

That plan has two chief purposes. By bringing into the judicial system a steady and continuing stream of new and younger blood, I hope, first, to make the administration of all Federal justice speedier and, therefore, less costly; secondly, to bring to the decision of social and economic problems younger men who have had personal experience and contact with modern facts and circumstances under which average men have to live and work. This plan will save our national Constitution from hardening of the judicial arteries.

The number of judges to be appointed would depend wholly on the decision of present judges now over 70, or those who would subsequently reach the age of 70.

If, for instance, any one of the six justices of the Supreme Court now over the age of 70 should retire as provided under the plan, no additional place would be created. Consequently, although there never can be more than 15, there may be only 14, or 13, or 12. And there may be only nine.

There is nothing novel or radical about this idea. It seeks to maintain the Federal bench in full vigor. It has been discussed and approved by many persons of high authority ever since a similar proposal passed the House of Representatives in 1869.

Why was the age fixed at 70? Because the laws of many States, the practice of the Civil Service, the regulations of the Army and Navy, and the rule of many of our universities and of almost every great private business enterprise, commonly fix the retirement age at 70 years or less.

"Applies to All Courts."

The statute would apply to all the courts in the Federal system. There is general approval so far as the lower Federal courts are concerned. The plan has met opposition only so far as the Supreme Court of the United States itself is concerned. If such a plan is good for the lower courts it certainly ought to be equally good for the highest court from which there is no appeal.

Those opposing this plan have sought to arouse prejudice and fear by crying that I am seeking to "pack" the Supreme Court and that a baneful precedent will be established.

What do they mean by the words "packing the court?"

Let me answer this question with a bluntness that will end all honest misunderstanding of my purposes.

If by that phrase "packing the court" it is charged that I wish to place on the bench spineless puppets who would disregard the law and would decide specific cases as I wished them to be decided, I make this answer—that no President fit for his office would appoint, and no Senate of honorable men fit for their office would confirm, that kind of appointees to the Supreme Court.

But if by that phrase the charge is made that I would appoint and the Senate would confirm justices worthy to sit beside present members of the court who understand those modern conditions—that I will appoint justices who will not undertake to override the judgment of the Congress on legislative policy—that I will appoint justices who will act as justices and not as legislators—if the appointment of such justices can be called "packing the court," then I say that I, and with me the vast majority of the American people favor doing just that thing—now.

"Always Had Power."

Is it a dangerous precedent for the Congress to change the number of the justices? The Congress has always had, and will have, that power. The number of justices has been changed several times before—in the Administrations of John Adams and Thomas Jefferson—both signers of the Declaration of Independence—Andrew Jackson, Abraham Lincoln and Ulysses S. Grant.

I suggest only the addition of justices to the bench in accordance with a clearly defined principle relating to a clearly defined age limit. Fundamentally, if in the future America cannot trust the Congress it elects to refrain from abuse of our constitutional usages, democracy will have failed far beyond the importance to it of any kind of precedent concerning the judiciary.

We think it so much in the public interest to maintain a vigorous judiciary that we encourage the retirement of elderly judges by offering them a life pension at full salary. Why then should we leave the fulfillment of this public policy to chance or make it dependent upon the desire or prejudice of any individual justice?

It is the clear intention of our public policy to provide for a constant flow of new and younger blood into the judiciary. Normally every President appoints a large number of district and circuit judges and a few members of the Supreme Court. Until my first term practically every President of the United States had appointed at least one member of the Supreme Court. President Taft appointed five members and named a Chief Justice—President Wilson three—President Harding four, including a Chief Justice—President Coolidge one—President Hoover three, including a Chief Justice.

Such a succession of appointments should have provided a court well balanced as to age. But chance and the disinclinatoin of individuals to leave the Supreme Court bench have now given us a court in which five justices will be over 75 years of age before next June and one over 70. Thus a sound public policy has been defeated.

I now propose that we establish by law an assurance against any such ill-balanced court in the future. I propose that hereafter when a judge reaches the age of 70, a new and younger judge shall be added to the court automatically. In this way I propose to enforce a sound public policy by law instead of leaving the composition of our Federal courts, including the highest, to be determined by chance or the personal decision of individuals.

If such a law as I propose is regarded as establishing a new precedent—is it not a most desirable precedent?

Like all lawyers, like all Americans, I regret the necessity of this controversy. But the welfare of the United States, and indeed of the Constitution itself, is what we all must think about first. Our difficulty with the court today arises not from the court as an institution, but from human beings within it. But we cannot yield our constitutional destiny to the personal judgment of a few men who, being fearful of the future, would deny us the necessary means of dealing with the present.

This plan of mine is no attack on the court; it seeks to restore the court to its rightful and historic place in our system of constitutional government and to have it resume its high task of building anew on the Constitution "a system of living laws." The court itself can best undo what the court has done.

Reasons Explained.

I have thus explained to you the reasons that lie behind our efforts to secure results by legislation within the Constitution. I hope that thereby the difficult process of constitutional amendment may be rendered unnecessary. But let us examine that process.

There are many types of amendment proposed. Each one is radically different from the other. There is no substantial group within the Congress or outside it who are agreed on any single amendment.

It would take months or years to get substantial agreement upon the type and language of an amendment. It would take months and years thereafter to get a two-thirds majority in favor of that amendment in both Houses of the Congress.

Then would come the long course of ratification by three-fourths of the States. No amendment which any powerful economic interests or the leaders of any powerful political party have had reason to oppose has ever been ratified within anything like a reasonable time. And 13 States which contain only 5 per cent of the voting population can block ratification even though the 35 States with 95 per cent of the population are in favor of it.

A very large percentage of newspaper publishers, Chambers of Commerce, Bar Associations, Manufacturers' Associations, who are trying to give the impression that they really do want a constitutional amendment would be the first to exclaim as soon as an amendment was proposed: "Oh! I was for an amendment all right, but this amendment that you have proposed is not the kind of an amendment that I was thinking about. I am, therefore, going to spend my time, my efforts and my money to block that amendment, although I would be awfully glad to help get some other kind of amendment ratified."

Two groups oppose my plan on the ground that they favor a constitutional amendment. The first includes those who fundamentally object to social and economic legislation along modern lines. This is the same group who during the campaign last fall tried to block the mandate of the people.

"Making Last Stand."

Now they are making a last stand. And the strategy of that last stand is to suggest the time-consuming process of amendment in order to kill off by delay the legislation demanded by the mandate.

To them I say—I do not think you will be able long to fool the American people as to your purposes.

The other group is composed of those who honestly believe the amendment process is the best and who would be willing to support a reasonable amendment if they could agree on one.

To them I say—We cannot rely on an amendment as the immediate or only answer to our present difficulties. When the time comes for action you will find that many of those who pretend to support you will sabotage any constructive amendment which is proposed. Look at these strange bedfellows of yours. When before have you found them really at your side in your fights for progress?

And remember one thing more. Even if an amendment were passed, and even if in the years to come it were to be ratified, its meaning would depend upon the kind of justices who would be sitting on the Supreme Court bench. An amendment like the rest of the Constitution is what the justices say it is rather than what its framers or you might hope it is.

This proposal of mine will not infringe in the slightest upon the civil or religious liberties so dear to every American.

My record as Governor and as President proves my devotion to those liberties. You who know me can have no fear that I would tolerate the destruction by any branch of Government of any part of our heritage of freedom.

"Play Upon Fears."

The present attempt by those opposed to progress to play upon the fears of danger of personal liberty brings again to mind that crude and cruel strategy tried by the same opposition to frighten the workers of America in a pay-envelope propaganda against the social security law. The workers were not fooled by that propaganda then. The people of America will not be fooled by such propaganda now.

I am in favor of action through legislation:

First, because I believe that it can be passed at this session of the Congress.

Second, because it will provide a reinvigorated, liberal-minded judiciary necessary ot furnish quicker and cheaper justice from bottom to top.

Third, because it will provide a series of Federal Courts willing to enforce the Constitution as written, and unwilling to assert legislative powers by writing into it their own political and economic policies.

During the past half century the balance of power between the three great branches of the Federal Government, has been tipped out of balance by the courts in direct contradiction of the high purposes of the framers of the Constitution. It is my purpose to restore that balance. You who know me will accept my solemn assurance that in a world in which democracy is under attack, I seek to make American democracy succeed.

You and I will do our part.

Folks act like they've found a Long Lost Friend
—the way they're making so much of us and this Family Recipe of ours!

I never yet saw folks get so much pleasure as out of this personal recipe of us distillers. It just seems there's nobody anywheres that ever samples a lick of it, but what they like it just fine.

My brother-in-law was just remarking to me the other day. Harry, he said—it looks like folks had found a long lost friend, the way they're acting about our Family's whiskey! And I guess in a way you might call The Wilken Family Whiskey a long lost friend at that! For our family has sure been at it a long long time—making whiskey for three whole generations. But we never put up this personal Family's Recipe of ours for everybody to enjoy till only just lately.

And folks are taking to it like as if they'd never found a really mild and tasty whiskey in their whole life.

And judging from little bits of conversation I've picked up here and there, I guess the neighborly price being asked for our Family's whiskey is pleasing everybody pretty much too!

Professor Lists Plans to Better Court System

Dr. Wright Urges 'American Way' as Solution to Judiciary Reform.

In answer to Harry Hopkins' recent radio address defending the President's court proposal, Dr. Herbert Wright, head of the department of polit' s at Catholic University, last night urged the "American way" as a method of solution.

Dr. Wright, who spoke at Alexandria, Va., before the Holy Cross Alumnae Association of St. Mary's Academy, said the problem can be solved in the following ways:

By more careful drafting of legislation, with the idea of bringing such legislation into harmony with constitutional powers of Congress.

By providing prompter reference to the Supreme Court of all cases where the constitutionality of an act of Congress is questioned, so Congress may have opportunity to try redrafting the legislation.

By providing for voluntary retirement at full pay of justices over 70 after ten years of service.

By amendment or amendments to the Constitution extending powers of Congress to cover matters upon which legislation is desirable.

"This is the American way," Dr. Wright concluded.

Most of the professor's talk was made to refute statements made by the WPA administrator in his radio talk.

About Hopkins' assertion, "No, those who oppose this plan are not afraid for democracy. They are afraid of Democracy," Dr. Wright stated:

"Such an appeal comes with poor grace at a time when affairs are not in nearly so critical a condition as they were two or three years ago. It ill becomes one to prate of democracy, when the opportunity to submit such an issue to the people themselves was available six months ago and remained unused.

"If we could afford to wait six months before proposing the issue, can we not now, when conditions are improved, afford to wait a few months longer, in order to settle the issue in the American way, by submission to the people themselves."

He continued:

"Mr. Hopkins says that the very thing a dictator tries to do is 'to curb and stifle the legislature—the Parliament or Congress elected by the people' and that 'the President, in his proposal, is not trying to throttle Congress.'

"And yet one of the most ardent supporters of the President's proposal, Dr. John A. Ryan (a colleague of Dr. Wright at the university) is unwilling to support the normal method of meeting the crisis, namely, by increasing the powers of Congress by constitutional amendment, because, he says, such an amendment 'is extremely unlikely to command the assent of two-thirds of the members of the Senate and of the House of Representatives.'

"In other words, there is a disposition to distrust the representatives of the people who were elected at the same time that Mr. Roosevelt received such an overwhelming vote from the electorate."

Dr. Wright made it clear he is not opposed to social security legislation, to improvement of working conditions or to the amelioration of many other conditions which have been "the avowed objects of New Deal legislation."

"My point is," he said, "that an end, no matter how good and desirable, does not justify a means which has been operating satisfactorily for the past century and a half."

Navy to Open Bids For Copper Supply

Bids on 15,000 tons of copper for use of the five Navy yards, will be opened this morning, the Navy Department announced yesterday. It will be the department's third attempt to procure copper under the Walsh-Healey act, whose wage and hour restrictions have also paralyzed steel, electrical equipment and tools and gears needed by the Navy.

That acceptable bids would be offered for a large part of 15,000 tons, if not all, was indicated last night, with reports that at least two companies have indicated privately they will bid for the contracts. It is likely, however, that bids will be only for copper already produced, and hence exempt from the terms of the Walsh-Healey bill.

Two lots, one of 600,000 pounds and the other of 1,000,000, are destined for the local Navy Yard. Previously it has been reported the Washington yard would be seriously handicaped if additional copper was not secured by May 1. Some of the metal, already being processed here, has been obtained from other Navy yards where the situation is less critical.

Roosevelt Nominates 2 for U. S. Judgeships; Cummings to Testify Before Senate Today the President's nominating message, and the names were referred on arrival to the Senate Judiciary Committee.

There are two vacancies in the Illinois Seventh Circuit, one of which had been pending since November, 1935, and the other since May, 1935. The Missouri Federal judgeship was created by Congress in June, 1936, and had since been unfilled.

Major, a Democrat, who had been a member of the Sixty-eighth, and Seventieth to Seventy-third Congresses, was appointed by President Roosevelt in 1933 to be judge of the Southern District Court of Illinois. His nomination to the Circuit Court of Appeals is in the light of a promotion. Senator Dieterich is said to have informal assurances that J. Leroy Adair will be nominated to the district court judgeship which Major will vacate.

Dieterich Backs Plan.

Senator Dieterich, a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee, has been regarded as "doubtful" on the court issue until his speech in Buffalo Thursday night, when he treated the President's plan sympathetically.

"I do not want to embarrass myself with any premature statement, nor do I want to become partisan upon any matter pertaining to such legislation," Dieterich said in Buffalo, but added: "When all the hysteria has passed away and our people begin to understand what was contemplated by the President's message, there will be quite a difference in attitude concerning the same by all fair-minded citizenship." He said there "is nothing to be excited about in this whole matter," and advanced the Administration argument of crowded court dockets.

Collet, nominated to the Missouri district judgeship, has displayed liberal leanings as a member of the Missouri supreme bench. Previously he had served as chairman of the State public service commission.

Senator Clark first espoused Collet's nomination, and later Truman joined his Missouri colleague. Clark has committed himself against the court plan, but Truman left no further doubt that he favors it when in Thursday night's speech he urged infusing "new blood" into the United States Supreme Court.

Since the President's judiciary plan was laid before Congress, the Senate already has approved two other Federal judges nominated by Mr. Roosevelt. Harry E. Watkins was confirmed United States dis was confirmed United States dis1 Virginia on March 2, and on February 25 Alfred P. Murrah was confirmed Federal district judge for the Eastern, Northern and Western District of Oklahoma.

As the President's court program neared the first public hearing, Labor's Non-Partisan League concluded a two-day session here last night in support of the plan with a statement by Maj. George L. Berry, league president, that the fight for the plan will be carried into individual Congressional districts.

Cites Labor, Farm Backing

Declaring the league's convention had "demonstrated a unity of labor and farmers" for the court plan, Maj. Berry announced last night:

"Our membership from coast to coast and from Canada to the Gulf will now carry the campaign into every Congressional District so as to facilitate the registering of public opinion with members of Congress."

Berry also disclosed that convention delegates have made a "person to person" canvass of members of Congress, but would not make known the names of members visited or how they were pledged.

"We find more friends than we had looked for and we find a considerable number who are giving the matter honest and sincere thought and who, we are convinced, will be found voting with the President and for the people when the vote is cast," Berry said.

Labor's Nonpartisan League spokesman said the convention here was in fulfillment of "the wishes of 27,000,000 voters" to "carry through the New Deal program in all of its aspects and without any nullifying patchwork." He predicted the court's "veto power" would be "nullified" by a complete victory for the President's plan.

Postmaster General Farley, in speaking for the court plan in North Carolina yesterday, chose the home territory of Senator Josiah W. Bailey, one of the outstanding Democratic opponents of the judiciary program.

At no time did Farley mention Bailey's name, but he took much of his time in answering those who say that while they are still "true to the party," a "higher duty" impels them to vote the other way.

"Straining at a Gnat."

"It seems to me that members of my party who refuse to go along with the President in his effort to continue the policies that have been so overwhelmingly indorsed in every election since his advent to the White House are straining at a gnat," he said. "I say this without questioning the sincerity of their position."

Raising the question of "where politics ends and patriotism begins," he said that "while loyalty to the party is essential, the welfare of the Nation is pre-eminent."

Farley went out of his way to pay tribute to Representative Robert L. Doughton, of North Carolina, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, in discussing the question of age of Supreme Court justices. He said age was a matter of relativity, that some men are "stand-patters at 35" and live the rest of their lives in the past. He added: "Your own distinguished Bob Doughton will never grow old." Doughton recently had been reported disturbed at the emphasis laid on age in the court program.

Farley recalled that Senator William E. Borah, Idaho Republican, in debating the appointment of Charles Evans Hughes as Chief Justice, had warned against the Supreme Court becoming the "economic dictator" of the United States. He said three Democratic Senators now opposing the court plan had expressed similar views—Senators Glass, of Virginia; Wheeler, of Montana, and Connally, of Texas.

The Postmaster General, apparently pointedly, listed Chief Justice Hughes among the court "liberals," and said he "did not come up to the wicked eminence attributed to him." He said that "if there had been one additional justice whose viewpoint was that of Chief Justice Hughes, not to mention Justices Brandeis, Stone and Cardozo, we would be further along the road to total recovery than we are today."

No "Adequate Alternative."

Farley said none of the Senate opposition has advanced "an adequate alternative to his constitutional proposal." He denied a constitutional amendment would serve the purpose, advancing not only "the element of long delay" but the "difficulty of framing an amendment that would reach the trouble."

Discussing the court again, he said "that five of our nine Supreme Court justices have a different philosophy from the other four; a philosophy that is not in accord with the majority sentiment that is supposed to govern the policies of the United States. Perhaps this is a heritage, at least of some of them, from their days as practicing attorneys. Then they had great combinations of wealth as their best clients. It is not remarkable that a lawyer who has devoted most of his life to protecting such interests carries his habits of logic into his later years. His task has been to construe the law as his clients would have it construed. In any close point it is natural for him to give the benefit of the doubt to the conservative side."

Georgia House Votes To Keep Dry Law

Atlanta, Ga., March 9 (AP).—The House of Representatives today defeated, 109-84, a bill to repeal Georgia's 22-year-old prohibition law.

The Hastings measure would have provided for sale of liquor in packages at privately owned stores, and sale by the drink in hotels, clubs and dining cars.

14,000 men) which was sent to to the Madrid front.

Italy, with 26 other nations on the international neutrality committee, agreed to ban movement of volunteers to Spain February 20.

Officials asserted the divisions were commanded by an Italian general named Pozzi.

Gen. Pozzi's troops, they reported, were held at bay following sharp and bloody actions in seven towns on both sides of the Guadalajara highway.

While this conflict raged northeast of the capital, the insurgents tonight launched an attack on the university city section of Madrid, apparently seeking to determine whether its defense was weakened by reinforcements sent to the Guadalajara front.

The fighting lasted an hour, after which Madrid was quiet except for occasional shells screaming over the highest buildings and landing in the center of the city.

Ship Seized, Not Sunk

By the Associated Press.

Arcachon, France, March 9.—Two men declared tonight they had seen the Spanish government freighter Mar Cantabrico, carrying a rich cargo of war supplies loaded at New York and Vera Cruz, Mexico, steaming yesterday toward an insurgent port convoyed by her captor, the insurgent cruiser Canarias.

A member of the Mar Cantabrico crew and the skipper of a French fishing vessel told stories which flatly contradicted previous statements that the munitions ship was sunk in the Bay of Biscay by enemy shells.

(The British admiralty, quoting reports from British destroyers which hastened to the scene of the encounter, insisted the Canarias sank the Mar Cantabrico.)

Capt. Borel of the French vessel Cameleyre, who rescued a Spanish sailor near the scene of the encounter, said the last thing he saw was the Mar Cantabrico plowing toward Spain "under her own power."

The rescued sailor, Juan Boo, plunged into the sea when he saw the French vessel nearby, and was saved. An Italian companion was drowned.

The rest of the crew of 150 and 17 passengers, including two "North Americans," had been transferred to the Canarias, Boo declared.

"All the Spaniards were shot," he said.

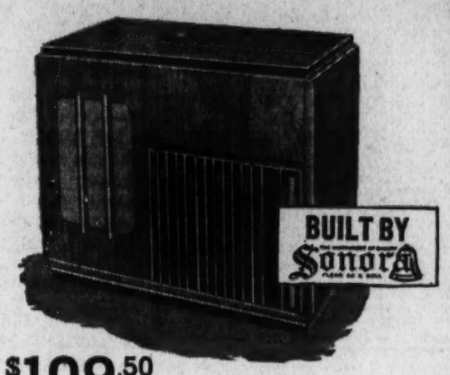

Maritime circles believed the munitions ship, bound from Vera Cruz for government-held Santander before her capture, was being convoyed to Pasajes, near San Sebastian.

Fire in the Mar Cantabrico's No. 2 hold broke out soon after insurgent shells started crashing into the ship, Boo related, and a boarding party was sent from the attacking vessel.

Officers of the British destroyers later corroborated statements made by Boo and Borel.

JAKE KILRAIN Was a Boston Dude
BUT HE COULD PUNCH LIKE NOBODY'S BUSINESS

By "Silver Dollar" Brady

JAKE KILRAIN learned his manners in Boston. He had six tailors and his "handle-bar" moustache was the pride of the Twentieth Ward.
But his bare fists ruled the prize-ring. He could fight a grizzly and let the bear have first punch.
A champion whiskey, like Silver Dollar, has manners, too. It's genial and agreeable-like.
But, pardner, Silver Dollar is no "mollycoddle." Sure, it's gentle-actin'—but that pleasin' glow inside lets you know it's there!
Silver Dollar Bourbon is mellow and tasty. It's distilled the slow, honest way—an' there's 79 years' experience back of it. Then it's aged for 18 months in charred oak barrels, until it's extra smooth with added richness and quality. It's a pleasure to drink it straight or mixed up in fancy highballs.
Try Silver Dollar today, by the bottle or by the drink. You'll like it! This whiskey suits the rich man's taste and the poor man's pocketbook!

The National Symphony.

A lady just back from Boston was at a small tea recently. The conversation had turned to music in general and the latest concert by the National Symphony Orchestra in particular. "My dears," she said, "I went twice to Symphony Hall while I was in Boston. I'd forgotten how altogether superior Boston music is."

Even discounting the self-esteem so characteristic of that city, her point is well-taken. The Boston Symphony is superb. But Boston is a far cry from the Capital. Here there is the National Symphony Orchestra, the members of which would probably be the first to admit the well-matured attainments of the Boston orchestra. In so doing, however, they would be yielding nothing in self-respect.

For the Boston Symphony is a long-established and well-endowed institution. The local orchestra is not. Prior to 1931, Washington—virtually alone among the great capitals of the world—had no symphony orchestra. In seven years, however, great progress has been made to correct this deficiency. The National Symphony Orchestra today has securely achieved a national reputation, as evidenced by the fact that it has been invited to play 40 out-of-town concerts during the current season. More to the point, it provides Washington with a regular musical fare—inexpensive and thoroughly delectable.

Superiority of the "altogether" type will come with time. With proper encouragement, the National Symphony may be expected to develop a finesse challenging even the Boston orchestra. Hans Kindler and his players are asking now for that encouragement. The annual campaign for sustaining funds begins today. The first year only 96 persons contributed to the orchestra's upkeep; the next year 402; the third, 760, and so on until last year more than 1,800 persons combined to underwrite the undertaking.

This year, there should again be more. A city with any pretense to civic pride or cultural interest will not fail a local enterprise so meritorious. And, for a community undertaking such as this, many small sponsors give an encouragement which means more than the same support from a handful of wealthy patrons.

The Raw Materials Committee.

The recently created raw materials committee of the League of Nations is now in session at Geneva, discussing problems growing out of the unequaled political distribution of primary resources, especially in colonial areas. The vital importance of the subject to world peace explains the widespread gratification over American participation in this co-operative effort.

Experts from fifteen nations—twelve League and three non-League members—are represented in the conference. Like the other delegates, Dr. Henry F. Grady, former chief of the Trade Agreements Division of the Department of State, is serving in a personal capacity and is not authorized to sit as an official representative of his Government. But again, like the other delegates, he may be expected to clarify the attitude of his Government toward the issues under discussion as occasion arises.

This small group of experts will not deal with the political aspects of the question referred to them for study and recommendations. Their task is simply that of considering all possible methods of facilitating access to essential raw materials by nations in the position of Germany and Italy. The nonparticipation of these two countries in the Geneva discussion is to some extent disappointing. However, the absence of German and Italian representatives minimizes the danger of acrimonious political debate and may result in a more thorough-going objective examination of issues requiring unprejudiced handling.

The urge of nations to become economically self-sufficient is largely a product of fear that necessary raw materials may not be obtainable in time of war. That fear not only creates serious obstacles to mutually profitable international trade, but also intensifies the desire to strengthen national defenses against economically stronger nations. With the European armaments race running a steadily more dangerous course, it becomes vital to seek a solution for underlying economic maladjustments that stimulate national antagonisms and increase the chances of war.

The raw materials committee can perform a great service by giving a sane direction to public thinking on these matters. It can, incidentally and inferentially, throw light on the political wisdom of opening up colonial areas to less restricted trade. It can do something to teach the simple but forgotten lesson that stabilized prosperity cannot be shut off in separate national compartments in the modern world.

Removal of obstacles to mutually profitable international intercourse will certainly be slow. But it may be assisted by an intelligent understanding of the dangerous futility of the current trend toward an impossible goal of national self-sufficiency. When the nations of the world fully realize that security for the strong as well as the weak is best assured by economic co-operation, countries rich in raw materials will be more disposed to make concessions, and the underprivileged will be less inclined to make impossible demands.

A Johnson Act Boomerang.

The sweeping prohibitions of the Johnson act were plainly intended to ban the buying and selling in this country of bonds floated by nations in default of their war debts. Hence the Treasury can scarcely be criticized for refusing to sanction the appointment of a fiscal agent in the United States to take care of interest payments on the French government's forthcoming loan. To have decided otherwise would have meant condoning a patent evasion of the purpose of the Johnson act, if not outright violation of the letter of the law.

Of course that law must be obeyed, unless or until Congress sees fit to repeal it. But no intelligent person will be misled by the outcries of those who assume that the Johnson act alone prevents rash American investors from pouring out their capital to finance rearmament by nations unable or unwilling to pay us for our contributions to the last great war. It is essential to get at the facts of the present case instead of pretending that we have nipped in the bud a wholly imaginary plot to circumvent the Johnson act and lure American investors into a net spread by the French government.

One fact to remember is that the ban upon the flotation of foreign securities is of little significance so far as the American investor is concerned. It is improbable that any large number of our citizens would purchase French government bonds at this time, even if our markets were open to such offerings. But all those who wish to invest can easily arrange for purchases abroad, as Secretary Morgenthau admits, with little or no danger of detection.

A second important fact thrown into relief by the present incident is that the Johnson act may easily operate to scuttle plans primarily intended to repatriate swollen foreign balances in the United States. By offering to pay French investors in dollars, it was the hope of the French government to allay fears of its nationals that payment might be made later in devalued francs. There was apparently no intention of soliciting American subscriptions to these dollar bonds.

The United States has been the recipient of huge amounts of capital coming from France and other European countries. During each of the last three years we have acquired in excess of $1,000,000,000 of gold as a result of this prolonged mass inflow of capital. The countries that have lost these funds cannot afford to part with them, and the United States does not wish to acquire them. France's internal financial difficulties in particular have been greatly aggravated by the gold drain.

The United States, on the other hand, has become increasingly fearful that the influx of so-called "hot money" would lead eventually to a disastrous inflationary boom, possibly followed by a sudden withdrawal of funds that would entail a deflationary collapse of inflated values. As a result there has been serious discussion of imposing punitive taxes upon foreign holders of American securities. And we have already taken steps to neutralize gold acquisitions to some extent. For such reasons it is evidently to our advantage to assist France, or any other country in her position, to repatriate a part of the capital that her citizens have sent here.

There is another very strong reason why we ought to co-operate in any plan to help France finance her budgetary deficit by orthodox means instead of inflationary expedients. That is our interest in maintenance of the tripartite monetary pact. The so-called French "defense" loan is not a loan for the purpose of financing armament outlays. It is primarily a loan to create a much-needed confidence among investors. France will, of course, go ahead with her military and other programs. And our contribution to the success or failure of the new loan will not alter her resolve. Failure would, however, hamper the efforts of the Blum government to keep the franc stable.

It is impossible, therefore, to share the jubilation of those superficial observers who envisage the Johnson act as a reliable barrier protecting Americans from financial embroilment in the warlike preparations of Europe. It is equally impossible to believe that this law brings any constructive pressure upon debtor governments to settle their accounts with us. In the present case, certainly, failure of the French loan would definitely weaken the position of the French government. It would probably lead to a tightening of exchange restrictions, thus making even limited payments on war debt account increasingly unlikely. Furthermore, it would add to the strain upon the stabilization funds of the parties to the tripartite monetary agreement.

Since Congress appears to be adamant in refusing to admit the untoward consequences of this legislation, one can only hope that a reasonable settlement of the war debts will be hastened and the Johnson act thereby automatically rendered innocuous.

Japan Changes Course.

For over five years Japan's policy toward China has been one of unabashed imperialism. Unchallenged in effective fashion either by the civilian element at home or by any foreign power, and with China seemingly too weak to resist, the Japanese militarists appeared, until very recently, to be having it all their own way.

The conquest of Manchuria and the establishment there of the puppet state of Manchukuo was followed by further aggressive movements into Inner Mongolia and North China. There seemed no stopping the island empire from achieving its ill-concealed goal of making Japan's will paramount throughout all of eastern Asia.

But the policy of the militarists, a great success on paper, has actually proved a costly failure. Manchuria has turned out to be anything but a new El Dorado. The expense of maintaining order in that region has been heavy. In addition, having antagonized the other powers by its cavalier treatment of solemn commitments, such as those embodied in the Nine Power Treaty, Japan has found it necessary to pile up armaments in a way which bids fair to bankrupt her people.

As a reaction to this program the Russians have concentrated formidable military and air depots in Siberia which constitute a potential threat to Japan's security. Of equal importance, to say the least, is the mounting Chinese determination to give way no further. The United States shows entire willingness to outbuild the Japanese fleet. And, as a final blow, Great Britain has now made it clear that she plans to develop her sea and air power to the point where her wishes will mean something, in the Far East as well as Europe.

For some time the British have viewed with jaundiced eyes the steady downward thrust of the Japanese from Manchuria into North China and their ambitions to penetrate even further. This movement constitutes a real threat to British interests in the Yangtse River. But until now Great Britain has not been in a position to oppose Japan. That situation is in process of being changed, and no one knows this better than the Tokyo government. All this helps to explain why Japan is apparently about to embark on a new course in her relations with China. Throwing overboard the policy of truculence and bayonet-prodding which has obtained until now, the Tokyo government now proposes to treat China as an equal. "Our interests," Naotake Sato, the new Japanese foreign minister, told the House of Peers," will be promoted if we respect those of others and seek peaceful development of our own."

Thus the failure of the policy pursued during the last five years is implicitly admitted and, significantly, by a government in which the dominant element is the very military group responsible for that policy. This change of heart regarding Sino-Japanese relations implies a definite improvement in the Far Eastern situation.

At a time when the war clouds are beginning to dissipate somewhat in Europe it is doubly encouraging that a similar heartening development should be foreshadowed in eastern Asia.

Art Notes.

A Chicago woman has been granted a divorce with alimony because her truck-driver husband, who had taken a correspondence course in art, knocked out one of her teeth. Prior to this rough treatment she had laughed uproariously when, on the first of April last, he showed her a picture he had painted.

This possibly teaches us that artists should provide their wives with correspondence courses in art appreciation, which may possibly be less of a drain on the pocketbook than alimony. Another moral, soon timely, is the need to be highly circumspect on All Fools' Day. Further, it may be concluded that art critics with a strong sense of humor should have equally strong teeth.

On the other hand, it has not been demonstrated that the driver should stick to his truck. Assuredly, the truck driver's first picture made a hit. His possession of artistic temper is scarcely questionable. And that he travels the farthest who travels alone may be as true of the artist as a familiar sign seems to indicate it is of the truck driver: "No riders!"

The attention of sit-down strikers is called to Rodin's "The Thinker," who sat down so long he didn't have any clothes left, and nothing on which to sit but a stump. It's something to think about.

"Traffic cops of Kansas City are to be taught public speaking." For some time the public has been fed up on the usual one-line speech, "Where do you think you're going?"

The oldest joke in the world: "Who was that lady I seen you out with last night?" "That wasn't no lady—that was my wife." The next oldest: "Elect me and I'll reduce taxes."

Pity the poor top-kick in the Spanish revolution who has to learn how to say "squads right" in 24 languages.

Mayor LaGuardia's Remark On Hitler

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the Editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents, brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Citations of merit should be given to Mayor LaGuardia for his suggestion that Herr Hitler be included in a "chamber of horrors" to be exhibited in democratic America. Westbrook Pegler should also be cited for his constant fight against fascism of whatever brand.

The press has been entirely too reserved in regard to Nazi activity in this country. For some strange reason there is an assumption among editorial writers and journalists on the staffs of most newspapers, that because we are not treated to the sight of Brown or Black Shirts marching down Pennsylvania avenue or picketing Jewish shops, there is no evidence of German or Italian fascism in America.

Recently, we have been treated to the ludicrous, but serious spectacle of a second-rate German boxer touring the South, not as a prize fighter, but as the press agent for Hitler. Boycotted and practically ignored above the Mason-Dixon Line, the stupid lout of a fighter has been forced to offer himself as a sort of side-show attraction in regions where only a small percentage of the population are able to read and write. Economic conditions of the area are such that even a foreign demagogue like Hitler is assured of a following among the impoverished, intolerant, and semi-literate lower and middle-classes, who have been fooled so long by local rabble-rousers that they are only too glad to listen to the German fairy tales if there is a promise of 100-per cent Nordic Utopia in the offing.

That fascism can only bring war and starvation, does not deter desperate people from grasping at the Nazi straw, even though that straw hides a baybnet and concentration camps. AMERICAN.

Alexandria, Va., March 8.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The writer lived in Germany during 1933 and 1934, and has at hand clear photographs of an act perpetrated by a band of Nazi youths whose identity was established the following day.

These boys, still in their teens, approached a Jesuit College during the night and wrote with black paint in letters about 3½ feet high "Verreckt ihr Schweinhunde" with accompanying words which covered the entire front of about 300 feet. The literal and figurative translation of the above words (I hesitate to write language of such a foul nature, but circumstances demand it) is "Go to the dogs, you degenerates."

It was impossible to remove the writing, so the prior, having left it there for several days, during which time it was witnessed by the entire town and its neighborhood, had it covered with a wide band of black paint, which ruinous blemish on a new and beautifully light colored building is undoubtedly still there. This was but one minor incident among the countless it was the distasteful privilege of the writer to endure during a year's stay in Germany, for educational purposes. Since the Hitler dictatorship there has been a complete transformation in the Germany the same person had known and loved in residence there 25 years ago.

To say that a man's effigy should be erected in wax in a hall of horrors is not an insult in the real sense of the word, any more than is a caricature in a daily paper which depicts the ridiculous, nonsensical or even the inappropriate. All countries indulge in this expression which does not carry with it the weight of degradation which the word "insult" implies. Will you tell me, however, in just what category you would put such slanderous appelations as those the writer personally witnessed?

Perhaps the German nation, "where courtesy has been inherent for 2,000 years," can find an adjective which adequately covers this type of language not only spoken but written for the full glare of all passers by, on a private building in a beautiful little Rhineland town. Incidents of like type are so unheard of even in our country of bandits and murderers. We seem to fail in possession of a wording which covers a type of crime among civilized persons that as yet, thank God, is foreign to our shores.

TRUTH.

Washington, March 8.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We who are ever mindful of, and desirous to maintain, the tranquillity of our international relations cannot but look with absolute disfavor upon the recent behavior of one of our more fiery tempered public servants of a large Eastern city. In criticizing an international figure, a public servant in this Government must always bear in mind his position, and as such, he must be tactful with his utterances in order to avert his Government the inconvenience and humility of assuming an embarrassing and apologetic position.

Freedom of speech must ever remain one of our dearest possessions but, any public official whose vocabulary does not run above the common and repugnant level of such expressions as, "torturous" "chamber of horrors," etc., would be of more benefit to his Government if he allowed some more able party to do his criticizing.

This most recent incident may be a good opportunity for some level-minded politician to propose a measure which would either curb such intemperate and incoherent babblers or, to at least induce the same to study the finer technique of criticism. JOHN L. BALON.

Buffalo, N. Y., March 7.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Today's paper prompts me to say: Mayor LaGuardia made a general remark about a European fanatic. The shoe seemed to fit Hitler, and his spokesmen newspapers put up a howl. The State Department attempted to dignify the matter by offering an apology for the account of the mayor, who undoubtedly spoke not as mayor but as a citizen. Now Der Angriff and other German papers which are presumed to speak officially for the Nazi government have made definitely slurring and insulting statements—not about an American individual, but about the American system of government and its officials.

Fair enough, we had it coming to us Heretofore our Government has permitted misguided and disgruntled groups of Germans in this country to hold public meetings in which all manner of uncomplimentary things have been said about our officials and our Government and no one seems to have objected on behalf of our country. It is easy to guess what would have happened to these birds had they been in Germany instead of the good old U. S. A. Note the statement of Goebbel's paper that "there is something wrong with the American government system because it cannot control the utterances of American citizens." What do they think of our inability to control the utterances of foreigners who are definitely anti-American.

Again, it is well enough. Let our State Department give its attention to matters worth-while and not toady to every panty-waist upstart who starts whining, and let those people now in America who think Germany is so wonderful wend their way thither. Methinks very few of them would be interested in the trip, and it is entirely possible that those few would be glad to get back to the uncultured U. S. A.

Let Hitler run Germany, but let us continue to run this Government in the American way of good will.

N. G. SHEROUSE.

Washington, March 7.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Hull has a weak-kneed habit of being a very apologetic Secretary of State. Anything said about our dear foreign debtors finds him quite ready to bring out the eraser and rub.

It is too bad that anything or anybody in this country should say Mr. Hitler belongs in a "chamber of horrors." It is also too bad that he officially had to express his regrets about Mayor LaGuardia's statement about Mr. Hitler.

It may be regrettable for an official of our Government, even city, to make the statement. But it is even more regrettable that the statement is true.

Hutchins' Metaphysics.

To the Edtior of The Post—Sir: In the article of February 7, headed, "Hutchins Flight From Reality," Agnes Meyer attacks Mr. Hutchins' views on metaphysical study, accusing the eminent head of Chicago University of advocating "escape psychology" in his recent book, "Higher Learning."

Mrs. Meyer expresses what seems to be the general idea regarding the study and purpose of metaphysics. She quotes fluently from philosophers past and present, and builds up what might be a convincing argument if one did not know facts to the contrary. Her whole article is based on a false premise, the conception of metaphysics, because it deals with invisible forces, as an escape from life rather than the one avenue open to the heart of reality itself; the source of all true knowledge; the fountain of all inspiration.

Even the most materially minded can not deny the origin of ideas as from the elusive self within, call it what you will. In proportion as it digests the great mass of accumulating facts from without, injecting them with fresh inspiration, is there progress in any field.

As Mr. Hutchins states, for such accomplishments, there must be some co-ordinating principle, a common denominator, as it were, which he sees possible in metaphysics. Lost in a sea of multiplicity, what can be so unifying as going back to "first causes?" In knowing more of the basic principles of life, there is a maturing and stabilizing of personality. As Mr. Hutchins implies, a person so grounded has not only the needed facility for making social adjustments and in mastering the technique of whatever trade he chooses, but added power for the enjoyment of life. What greater benefits could accrue from a college course?

Though unfamiliar with the extent of Mr. Hutchins' metaphysical experience, it would seem that in his achievements he might well be cited as a worthy exponent of his own theory of "higher learning." And who are we to tear down?

A WORKER.

Washington, Feb. 27.

Memorial University Urged.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If our departed great could choose their own memorials, I doubt if many of them would select stone obelisks or Grecian temples to preserve their fame. Such, least of all, would be the choice of Jefferson, who believed the test of value lay in utility to man.

Just what his own choice would be, of course, no man can say; but we can guess, from the work to which he devoted his declining years and from the simple inscription he wrote for his own epitaph, where his interests lay. It was to the founding of a great university that his last years were dedicated, and he wished to be remembered for that, and for his part in securing to his fellowmen political and religious freedom.

What memorial, then, could be more fitting than one which would enable others for generations to come to carry on the search for knowledge, which is freedom? It was through universal public education that Jefferson hoped to make democracy effective, and it was to develop leaders that his university was founded.

Instead of spending millions of dollars on another marble palace, why not use the money to create an endowment fund, the income from which should be used to finance the education of American youths in those many fields of thought and activity in which Jefferson himself was proficient. With the interest on the sum now being considered for a Jefferson memorial, between 50 and 100 scholarships could be awarded annually, in government, agriculture, natural sciences; in architecture and engineering; in philosophy and in music. By such means could Jefferson's own work be carried on in his name—a living memorial of utility to man.

Fair Enough

After The Flood.

NOW that the water has gone down the Ohio River nothing more is heard about the flood, because there is nothing dramatic about the worry and individual wretchedness of the thousands of people whose homes stood up to the eaves in water or just disappeared from view. When the river was up and the disaster was apparent as a whole the situation lent itself to writing and qualified as news all over the country.

There were many heroic acts with which to adorn the narrative, none more dramatic than that of a crew of men in Evansville who kept to their work in a well or pit below the river level for days to maintain the water system, knowing that if the walls ever weakened they were just gone. Then, too, there were the excitement and a general spirit of self-sacrifice in which the American Legion, the Red Cross, the National Guard and the local doctors pitched in to lend a hand wherever they could.

But the dramatics and the news ebbed inch by inch with the water, and by the time a town was high and dry again the story was over.

High and dry? Well, high but not dry, because a house which has stood in the Ohio River for a week or ten days does not dry out at once. The people came back to find silt everywhere.

To reduce the problem to simple terms, what happens when a man comes back to a little home that has stood in a flood for a week? Our kind of man hasn't any money, that's certain, because the kind I have in mind are just pay-day people who work when they can get work—and there hasn't been much work these last few years.

The mud is pretty bad, but he and the family slush it out the doors and open windows, if there are any left, to let in the air. Gradually the place and the bedding dry out, but the plaster is bulging. The table and chairs are all sprung, and will have to be put together. The family flivver abandoned in the yard is full of silt, and the engine will have to be taken down and cleaned, piece by piece. If there was a piano, that's gone, sure, and the house doesn't sit square on the fondation any more.

This is not a slum family but a workingman's family, and they did have some little accumulation of treasures, now soggy and filthy from the muck. The place is not exactly a ruin, but it is pretty bad, and money or credit is what the man of the house needs—and a job.

* * * *

Down the river, in the farming country, the small famer comes back to a similar situation, but worse, because his barn and sheds are hopeless and his cow and team are missing. What about him?

What about all of them?

I don't know. I am just asking, because it seemed to me that the flood was more impressive as a disaster after the river went down than while the water was high in the streets.

The widow and the children always suffer most after the father's funeral. Someone might drop around and see how they are doing—just in case they need a dollar.

Final Futility.

"President says courts have made America a no-man's-land of final futility."—News item.

There are rules all through life
For the good of the game
And they cover all super agility;
There are laws, there are codes
Too extensive to name—
It's a land full of final futility!

II.

When the fly ball is caught
Then the runner is out,
Quite regardless of socking ability,
And the catch renders void
Such a well-handled clout—
It's a study in final futility!

III.

There are three on the bags
And one out when a guy
Hits a grounder that echoes senility;
By a quick double play
Three are out, me, oh my!—
Oh, how awful to see such futility!

IV.

At the big football game
There's a touchdown called back
When a runner called "Tuffy" McWhillity
Kicks two men in the face—
Ah, alas and alack!
Is it fair to permit this futility?

V.

Comes the try for a kick
And it goes far askew,
Causing moments of mental debility;
"What? No good!" is the roar
From the kicker so blue—
"No-man's-land, eh, of final futility!"

L'Envoi.

Do the rules say you're out?
Does a law stay your hand?
Do not show your intense gullibility!
Break 'em all as you go
With your own, understand?
And a hoot for such final futility!

A Mid-Week Review of Current Publications

America's Epic Poet

By Irene Holt

WHEN the author of "Spoon River Anthology" writes a biography of the author of "Leaves of Grass" the result is as stimulating as it is distinguished. Both Whitman and Masters are poets. Both are essentially American. Both brought original ideas and a highly individual style to American poetry, and both in their respective ages were extravagantly praised and roundly berated for their masterpieces.

Walt Whitman was an iconoclast. Unfortunately there can be no real appreciation of him without first understanding his times. America was in a state of democratic ferment. Jeffersonian doctrines, the principles of free trade, expansion and slavery were all burning issues. Culture was smug and complacent; liberal ideas just beginning to escape the smothering influences of prejudice and self-interest.

From this chaos of conflicting influences Whitman emerged as a definite voice and creed. He is the one established epic poet of America, although he professed to feel about literature as Grant did about war: "He hated war. I hate literature . . . it is a means to an end." For more than 30 years he was the stormy petrel of American letters, refusing "to play in with the literary gang" and discarding all recognized rules of art for art's sake. The controversy he inspired still flourishes on both sides of the Atlantic, and it is of more than passing interest that he and Emerson and Poe, the three American writers acknowledged as having a unique influence in world literature, lived and wrote at much the same period of national development.

* * * *

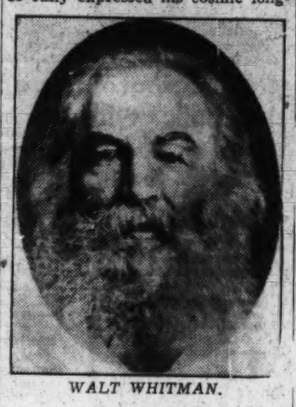

OTHER biographers have emphasized certain aspects of Whitman's genius; his friendship with Peter Doyle, the Anne Gilchrist affair. Traubel has left us verbatim dialogues of those years when he played Boswell to Whitman's Dr. Johnson, but Masters has given us a well rounded study done with consummate skill and understanding. The book is not merely another Life," on a literary market already glutted with "Lives." Perhaps none but a poet could have done it. What was said of Traubel could be equally well applied to Masters: "* * * the good friend, the better for being a poet himself and thus akin to W." He does not let his admiration for the man's natural greatness blind him to his human shortcomings: slovenly and disorderly habits of mind, a faculty for telling "whoppers" when it suited his convenience, petty vanities and self-conceit, and the vast egotism that grew upon him in later years.

To a certain extent these very failings enabled him to withstand with more or less equanimity the avalanche of abuse that raged about him when "Leaves of Grass" first appeared in 1855. In a day and age when the facts of life were discussed in whispers, if at all, Whitman's pantheistic tendencies, his "limber, lasting, fierce" words and images caused readers and critics alike to lift their voices in pharisaical protest.

IT is not necessarily legitimate privilege to use such brutal and ugly words as he uses in some of his poems, even today editors might object, but it is doubtful if any critic would be so moved as the distinguished London gentleman of that period who wrote that "Walt Whitman is as unacquainted with art as a hog with Latin," or the "powerful uneducated" policeman who referred to him as "that old gas bag." He was essentially a poet who challenged the whole world with his power and richness, but in so challenging laid himself open to charges of sensuality and fleshliness that Homer and Virgil and Dante, and certainly Shakespeare, encountered in their own ages and times.

Whitman's youth was a varied one. In a rapid age he developed slowly and without impatience, profoundly influenced by the forces of a country expanding about him. His formal education lasted only six years, but after that there was the fascination of change and experience. Laborer, printer, teacher and life at sea. Working in a newspaper office and later establishing a paper of his own. But no romance. He never married. He liked masculine associations and found sufficient emotional outlet among members of his own sex, and in all his poetry there is only one love poem that could conceivably have been written to a woman. Even that is doubtful. His association with Peter Doyle, young driver of a Washington horse-car, might be likened to that of "Michelangelo and Tomasso Cavalieri, Virgil and the young Alexander, or Sappho and her friends." John Addington Symonds considered him more Greek than any man of modern times, and his dual nature displayed a sharp cleavage between the transcendentalism of Emerson, who influenced him tremendously, and his own materialism. In a "life immense in passion, pulse and power" perhaps no writer has ever so fully expressed his cosmic longings and had it so rudely interpreted by a vulgar world.

WALT WHITMAN.

HE could not rest while trying to put all of America into poetry and, as is so often the case with prophets in their own land, the first real recognition of his greatness came from abroad. In America he had "a stumpy row to hoe." His intelligence was insulted, his morals were impugned with unwarranted rancor, and in exasperation he pretended to have six children as a badge of respectability. Such "whoppers" Masters handles with tolerant amusement as part of the lively imagination that frequently failed to distinguish fact from fancy and proved a considerable source of embarrassment to everybody but himself.

In prosody without metre or rhyme he sang the drama of the new world, and his literary mind had that rare faculty for seeing as it sang. To American letters he brought a sweeping vision seldom parallelled in literary annals. His was a Homeric figure and at the same time a profoundly human one, and Edgar Lee Master's "Whitman" is a grand book—a real tribute to the father of America's literary rebellion.

Petticoats and Participles

Drawn for the Encyclopedia Britannick by Erte...

Critic's Contention Not Substantiated by These Books.

By Bett Hooper.

Along about this time last year Catherine Fullerton Gerould shook the hands that held the teacups by her contention that feminine writers were more absorbed in what their characters wore than what they felt. In other words, it mattered not to them that languishing ladies in literature still wore their heart on their sleeves. The only thing that did matter was whether or not it looked chic there. And it's true in three cases out of four. When a Cinderella puts her best foot forward in fiction these days, two to one there will also be a line about the sheerness of her hosiery or the cut of her slippers. Sleeping Beauty's negligee takes up as much space as her reactions to the kiss.

I must say that Mrs. Gerould's article made me extremely self-conscious in my reading. Every time I'd come to a bit of description—whether of home or heroine—I'd pounce on it like a cat on a rat. And it was amazing how it interfered with the continuity of the plot. It even got me to the place where I'd pray for an unhappy ending just so I wouldn't have to read about ten more yards of tulle and satin. So when three books came to my desk recently and all of them by women, I decided that I'd review them from the standpoint of modes rather than manners. I'd show up all the lady novelists who preyed on their readers' sympathy with a well-placed ruffle! But I hadn't reckoned on my novelists.

Exhibits 1, 2 and 3 are Fanny Heaslip Lea's "The Four Marys," Dorothy Speare's "The Road to Needles" and Ramona Herdman's "Today Is Forever." Quite a few points they have in common. All three deal with modern men and women and their relationship to each other; all three have a working woman as their pivotal point; and all three are told in the third person. (They say Margaret Mitchell is responsible for all this objectivity floating around.) And all three have a happy ending. That is, if you've got the kind of mind that can accept anything short of a clinch as a happy ending.

As a matter of record and to clear my own skirts (that's my contribution to fashion-writing) Miss Lea does not get beyond two sentences before dragging in a "broad transparent brim" of a picturesque hat. Shades of Vogue and the New York Woman! Here indeed was a star in Mrs. Gerould's crown. But in all fairness to the author, this book about three generations of women living under the same roof is much more than a mere clotheshorse on which she has draped her phrases.

And even in the climax where the youngest Mary faces a situation which makes an adult of her in a few hours, the sympathetic handling by the author is not spoiled, though she takes time out to expatiate on "a mink coat with gardenias at the collar." It is no easy job to sublimate a mink coat to anybody's sensibilities no matter how fine they may be.

"The Four Marys" is an excellent novel dealing with one woman who is content to view life in retrospect though still gingerly keeping a finger in the pie of the present; with another woman who finds with Prof. Pitkin that life begins at 40 (if the family doesn't interfere); and with the young girl in the house who doesn't know black from white and still isn't satisfied with compromising on gray. Obviously written in woman's magazine style, it has a brittleness which will keep it from offending those who prefer The New Yorker.

"The Road to Needles" is about a dumb woman, but she's the kind of dumb biddie that the Lord looks after. Lorelei Lee was probably the first dumb heroine, but she was dumb and keen. Martha Storey, Miss Speare's character, is dumb and sweet. She's the sort who reminds men of the cakes mother used to bake. Most males haven't the sense to realize that it's the nuts in it that she's reminiscent of.

Martha and the hero, Norman Phillips, are both writers in Hollywood for the Superart Film Co. Maybe that's what makes them talk the way they do and what enables them to build up to colossal climaxes even before the morning grapefruit. She's Gay and Utterly, Utterly. He takes the part of the hero and is always shooting off about "Shakespeare and that guy Moliere and me." But it's the feminine end of this combine which manages to keep in the top salary brackets and ere many pages, you discover this is because she has ideas and he merely has ideals.

Oh, I know it sounds inconsistent to call her dumb in one paragraph and in the next to say that she has ideas. But that's the point of the whole story—she lives a story-book existence. She can make her Superart characters act sensible and gallant. But when she comes face to face with the same situation in her own life, she goes to pieces on a desert. Luckily there is a red-headed boy who loved her all the time standing around to pick up the little mess that was Martha.

This isn't a very fair picture of the book, but it's the way Martha and Norman would have looked if written up in their own scenarios. It's a little reminiscent of "Young Man of Manhattan" and that, coming from me, is high praise indeed. Miss Speare gives an excellent picture of the awful glare of Hollywood—sunlight and spotlight. She shows how the studios operate and how they bury their skeletons and their hatchets. It's one of the best novels that I have read lately and I think the very best that has been written about Hollywood.

About Mrs. Gerould? Oh, yes, here's her pound of flesh on the very second page: "It made her feel glad that she had worn her brown suit today with the brown halo hat that matched the bands of her parted-in-the-middle hair from which, halfway back on her head, it reared its jaunty frame."

If Miss Herdman's book, "Today Is Forever," had been written ten years ago, it would have been called a novel about a girl in search of herself. Today it is inevitable that some reviewer term it a "psychological study of an introspective girl bordering on something or other." Probably both would have been correct. Sidney Lane in Paris suddenly discovers that she must leave this gay new life she has found and journey back to America and her sources. The memories she returns to must perforce be sad—her childhood having been spent with a neurotic mother and the bright colors of her girlhood having been grayed by early marriage to a narrow-minded college professor. But it was as if she hoped to go back along familiar roads and pluck up by their roots all the extraneous matter that had cluttered her life.

After going back to the little town of her birth, marking the changes, reliving the puzzled unhappy days when she was torn between loyalty for her grieving mother and hatred of her father who had deserted them; after visiting her divorced husband and finding him as intolerant and phlegmatic as ever; and after looking down at the grave of the woman who had started her on a successful theatrical career. Sidney at last feels that she has bridged the long day between the present and the past—that truly "today is forever."

"She was free now and her life was all her own. She saw it as a small plot of ground, neatly clipped around the edges. A plot with a high fence over it." That was what she had thought she wanted and that was what she thought she had attained. And even when she finally fell in love, she decided that "she would not let it hurt too much."

This is a superb story of a girl who was so intent upon classifying her emotions and reactions; so bent on determining what each person she brushed in passing had contributed to her life that she never realized until too late that "she had never given anything to anyone." The character of Sidney Lane is so well drawn that not until I found a description of her on page 250 did I realize that the author had not given it before. In this book, Mrs. Gerould, you must admit to a count of ten. Well, at least to nine.

Dorothy Charques, a young Englishwoman, has written a book called "The Tramp and His Woman" . . . The publishers describe it: "The background of rural England is portrayed with such skill that one feels the cold of the rain, the heat of noon, and the quiet green of the countryside" . . . A most uncomfortable feeling, I would say . . . Too bad the author isn't quite good enough to give you a sunburn, too . . .

I have always wanted vaguely to be an all-round man of letters on the eighteenth-century plan, which allowed or commanded a man to write essay or poem, novel or play, just as he pleased . . . This is good fun, but it may not be good business . . . If you want to play for safety, keeping the career on a steady course, you will do the same thing over and over again—painting two cows in a field, two cows in a field—until at last they write, for the school books, 'nor can we omit a consideration of the leader of the two-cows-in-a-field group' . . ." This suspicion seemed to be confirmed when a gleam of recognition came into the beggar's eyes and he spurned a coin which Maugham offered him . . . Next day the incident was repeated except that Maugham gave the weatherbeaten old tramp a ten dollar bill . . . which he had the effrontery to tear up . . . Before Maugham could question him, he loped off . . . All inquiries as to his identity were futile . . . There isn't any ending to this story, Mr. Simmons assured me . . . Memo to myself: Put down name of Don Gallbraith Price as potential book reviewer . . .

Strike for Mr. Graves

By Don K. Price

IF you are one of those who think that stamp-collecting is a proper diversion for great minds, you may take it as almost a personal compliment that Robert Graves has chosen this hobby as the central theme of his latest novel, "Antigua Stamp." If you agree with me that stamp-collecting is the least amusing of the many pleasant ways of wasting time, you will think it appropriate that Mr. Graves, while taking malicious shots at everything inconsequential in modern life, chose this as the bulls-eye of his target. In any case you will want to read 'Antigua Stamp" once for its polished jests and its extravagant characterizations, and again to appreciate its delightfully intricate plot.

When Samuel Butler wrote "The Way of All Flesh" he battled with sincere sarcasm against the serious hypocrisy of Victorian family life. If Mr. Graves had taken himself nearly as seriously his book would have something of the same flavor. But it is a comedy of manners rather than of morals, and it pokes fun at the "old school tie" instead of family ties. Perhaps the public school even in Butler's (and "Tom Brown's") day had more to do with English smugness than did family life, but an author cannot shock his audience nearly as well if he leaves fatherhood alone and ridicules school traditions.

This book does not crusade. Its leading man "bore a remarkable facial resemblance to the Knave of Spades, except that the moustache he affected was not quite so twiddly." The leading lady, his sister, became famous by organizing a theatrical troupe out of the psychopathetic wards of Dr. Marcus Permesan, and dictating to them the public personalities which they were to assume for purposes of advertising. Nobody will feel that there is any moral or economic issue involved in the characters of this pair, nor the objects of their respective affections: Miss Edith Whitebillet, the lady scientist with spectacles and a starved soul, and the Marquess of Babraham, the peer with a cockney accent.

ROBERT GRAVES.

* * * *

THIS novel, you see, is distinctly not a story involving a social problem. In one of his beautifully relevant digressions, the author comments on certain fiction as "sickening . . . problem themes shot through and through with the most refined ghastly comic relief." There are three ways, he explains elsewhere, for a man to write. The first is the method of the public entertainer, the second is the method of the conscientious eccentric, and the third, which "both the intellectual reader and the ordinary vulgar reader will unanimously despise," is "the sort that tries to feed the public what he thinks the public will think it ought to like because it's just a little superior." Mr. Graves, it is plain to see, wants to be a public entertainer, and few people could be simultaneously more charming and more literate.

If you want to find a novelist who deliberately tried and succeeded in doing the same thing, you may have to go back to the man who wrote the following: "An author ought to consider himself, not as a gentleman who gives a private or eleemosynary treat, but rather as one who keeps a public ordinary, at which all persons are welcome for their money . . . Men who pay for what they eat will insist on gratifying their palates, however nice and whimsical these may prove; and if everything is not agreeable to their taste, will challenge a right to censure, to abuse and to d—n their dinner without control." Those, by the way, were the opening lines of "Tom Jones."

* * * *

MR. GRAVES refuses to undertake to educate the public up to flights of pure literature, but on the other hand he avoids the other fashionable extreme, the fad of self-conscious simplicity. "Antigua Stamp" records an enmity between brother and sister, and might easily have been a very dull record of primary passions. The author parodies what the result would have been in two paragraphs, using his heroine's secretary, Miss Hapless, as an object lesson. Here are parts of the paragraphs:

"'I'm afraid I wasn't much good, as a kid, at turning the other cheek. In fact,' Miss Hapless admitted shyly, 'I never enjoyed anything so much in the whole of my childhood as the feeling of my teeth well fixed in by brother's leg. But we were the best of friends after that.' . . . The above conversation has been recorded to forestall the foolish objection that there are no nice, natural, straightforward characters in these pages . . . Here, then, we offer Miss Hapless. What's amiss with her? Miss Hapless behaved as naturally and straightforwardly as anyone could wish; but what's her story worth? Nothing . . . Yet we are pleased to incorporate it as the didymous dermoid growth in the main body of this fully developed story, just to show that we are not prejudiced."

* * * *

WITH this beautifully workmenlike point of view toward his art and his characters, Mr. Graves proceeds to put together and then disentangle a plot that any detective story writer might boast of. The movie fan who tells his companions what's coming next has no worse manners than a reviewer who would synopsize the story of "The Antigua Stamp." The plot is not left bare like a problem in algebra, but it is decorated with local color and literary practical jokes, and brightened with old rural English traditions, the feud between the Maharaja of Ophistan and the Chinese War Lord Li Feng, and ironic parodies on the courtroom scene manner of the times.

Once in a blue moon a reviewer meets through a book a literary personality so entertaining that he wants to introduce him without qualification. The introduction may be unnecessary if you have read any of his previous works, two of which dealt with the Emperor Claudius. As for myself, I hate historical novels, but since becoming acquainted with Mr. Graves, I think that even a Roman emperor might be entertaining in his company. Will anyone lend me his complete works?

"THE ANTIGUA STAMP," by Robert Graves. (Random House, $2.50.)

First Person Singular

Willie Ethridge Writes About the South and David Burnham Turns to the West.

"AS I LIVE AND BREATHE," by Willie Snow Ethridge. (Stokes, $2.50.)

Even in my slate-and-pencil days, I always had a sneaking notion that Burns' poem to a mouse should have been titled "Much Ado About Nothing." There is, of course, a place for everything, and I always thought it would have been much better if that "timorous beastie" had never got tangled up with either Mr. Burns' plow or his poetry. And when the poet expressed concern for the panic in its "breastie," it always embarrassed me a little as do fat women who prattle baby talk.

Willie Snow Ethridge's first book, "As I Live and Breathe," puts me in the same half-ashamed predicament. Not that the book as a whole isn't well written and interesting, but some of the chapters made me want to hurry past with my head averted. But that may simply be because I never was the sort of person who liked to look in on a family who has forgotten to pull the shades down. They're all too utterly defenseless. And then to have the mother of the household standing at the window, pointing out to passersby the faults, however, lovable, of each member of the family, is, as the authoress herself would put it, a "wee" shame. She might even call this "wee" carping. And perhaps it is. Because there are some parts of this unvelling which are exquisitely and movingly expressed.

Briefly, this is the story of a newspaperman and his family during 12 months of their lives in a small Georgia town. As such, it is excellent. I cannot think of any novel at this moment which so nearly portrays the typical social life of those living below the Mason and Dixon line. The book itself is done on the plan of a county fair; each chapter is a booth exhibiting with pride the best products of that area. Here is the Writer's Club getting nowhere very fast; here the flower show, in which Mrs. Ethridge proves that she can arrange her sentences as gracefully and showily as the Cherokee Heights Garden Club arranged their roses and shastas; here the Tuesday dances of the Lions Club, and over there, deserving special praise, Christmas Day in the South with its merry rounds of eggnog, fruit cake and tinselly good will.

The chapter "A Lot for My Money" is, indeed, that for the person who pays $2.50 for this book. It is all that can be asked for in the way of words. Flowers actually bloom on these few pages; "wild azaleas casting up pink fountains of bloom in the morning light" will bring a nostalgic twinge to anybody who has ever seen a similar sight. There are several highly amusing anecdotes about darkies, and Mrs. Ethridge does these with a sensitive, understanding pen.

You'll find this road through the South a grand sightseeing tour, with enough beauty, fun, suspense and pathos to make the trip worthwhile. But when you get to chapters XXIV and XXIX, detour! The country around those parts is decidedly sparse and much more than a "wee' monotonous.

"WINTER IN THE SUN," by David Burnham. (Scribner's, $2.50.)

David Burnham, in his new book, "Winter in the Sun," has accomplished a difficult task in sustaining interest through an almost intangible love story, with no melodrama and almost no declaration of love. The strugglers in the strange affair are Deborah Hunt who has come to Arizona from the East to find herself disillusioned in the love she had left; and Jimmy Eaton—"I" in the story—who has taken the West to himself while recovering from a serious illness.

From the beginning there is an instinctive antagonism between them, the girl afraid and mistrusting everything, and the boy resenting her ability to go hardshelled through it without showing what she feels. Through a series of colorful Western scenes, "bailes," races, hunts and horseback excursions the tension grows in each of them, drawn together more by, than in spite of, the conflict between their spirits. The arrival of the Eastern lover forces the issue.

The narrative has the disarming directness of a personal journal, and yet a conscious address to the reader. There is a customary denial that anything in the story is real, but the incisive sketching of characters and the acute perception of descriptive details are testimony if not of actual events then of a very clear and tough brain. The brain is not quite so sure when explaining motives of the affair for the reason that as the hero, it may not be so. The mental analyses, having none of the elegance of Proust, waver occasionally on the edge of tedium, but they have an earnest probing as of a surgeon digging in tissues.

However, to say the book lacks a certain Proustian quality does not mean that it is not well written. It is simple and yet vivid, which is a considerable achievement in itself. In spite of the static condition of the love story during most of the book, there is a great deal of exterior action, interesting in itself and by something a tour de force, carrying the larger story along on each episode.

Tovarich

"TOVARICH," by Jacques Deval, adapted by Robert E. Sherwood (Random House, $2).

In October, 1933, Jacques Deval's "Tovarich" first brought the now famous pair of aristocratic Russian emigres, Tatiana and Mikail, to the stage in Paris. Since then they have played for 800 performances in Paris, braved the English Channel to captivate London, and at long last, in October, 1936, arrived at the Plymouth Theater in New York, where capacity houses have applauded them.

Although Robert E. Sherwood adapted the play in English (purging a few of the grosser elements of French physiolocal realism from the text), he admitted that he can offer no rational explanation for its universal popularity, and only ventures a guess that such universal acclaim may be due to the fact that "Tovarich" ("Comrade") tells the meaning of its title—or, more simply, because "perhaps we're all crazy."

Although the treatment is feather light, Monsieur Deval does not shrink from such philosophical profundities as the determination of the one point on which Capitalism and Communism agree: "the idealists must be drowned." By the end of the play, Soviet Commissar Gorotchenko stands self-condemned as guilty of the most unpardonable of even "perfidious Albion" has been neatly scored.

(Tatiana: "We may take back that which belongs to France, or to America. But no one has ever taken back anything from England.")

If this is madness, there is delightful method in it, and either the reader or the play-goer may learn Nitchevo ("It doesn't matter") as well as Tovarich to add to his vocabulary.

Dude Ranch

"DEATH ON A DUDE RANCH," by Francis Bonnamy. (Doubleday, Doran, $2.)

To the growing group of Washington authors is now added the name of Audrey Walz, who uses the name of Francis Bonnamy in writing mystery novels. The first of these was "Death by Appointment."

Much the same qualifications apply to mystery novels as to the general run of fiction; but, sadly enough for those readers who especially enjoy this type of material, those standards are too seldom attained. Deaths plus unknown murderers plus omniscient detectors comprise a prescription which is continually used as an opiate to deaden any appetite one might have for other components. Francis Bonnamy can be congratulated on having joined that small group which has no traffic in this quack drug.

The consistency of events, ever important in mysteries, is handled with care and forethought, so that happenings are not out of focus with the background and other occurrences. The circumstances of the death of Persis are unique but not illogical. Further, the murderer is not a character dragged in at the last minute and hitherto unknown to the reader, always a mean advantage to take.

None of the strange happenings on the Maxwell or Kinsman ranches taxes one's credulity nor does the story lag. The writing is pithy and the language properly oriented where necessary. Several of the characters, particularly Fraulein Neumann, Dr. Campion and Carolyn Blake, are developed in such a manner that several unanswered questions are left in one's mind, like the doctor's advising one to leave the dinner table slightly hungry

RAE LEWIS.

Farewell to Kipling

Devotees of Rikki Tikki Tavi and Mowgli Are Carried Back to Old Days.

"SOMETHING OF MYSELF FOR MY FRIENDS, KNOWN AND UNKNOWN," by Rudyard Kipling. (Doubleday, Doran, $2.50.)

Although he had been almost out of sight and hearing since the Great War, Rudyard Kipling's poems and tales are probably more widely known than those of any modern English-speaking writer. The great variety of his work, extending from "Soldiers Three" and "Barrack Room Ballads" to the "Jungle Book" and "Just So Stories," establishes him in the affection of all present generations. In any general intelligence test, what group of literary characters would be more generally recognized than Gungha Din, Kim, Stalky and Mowgli? The movies have not yet distorted him, but the radio has brought "Mandalay" and "Danny Deever" to many ears that might not otherwise have known them.

To real Kipling devotees, like those of us who read "Rikki Tikki Tavi" when it first came out in St. Nicholas (circa 1894), the Kipling Autobiography comes as a message from a friend whose voice we had thought was silenced forever.

Written at the age of 70, it is full of the whimsical sparkle of the younger Kipling. One thinks of the tender affection of Bagheera for Mowgli, the "little frog," as Kipling paints his earliest Bombay memories, "daybreak, light and color and golden and purple fruits at the level of my shoulder. . . . Meeta, my Hindu bearer, would sometimes go into little Hindu temples where, being below the age of caste, I held his hand and looked at the dimly seen, friendly Gods. . . . Evening walks by the sea in the shadow of palm groves which, I think, were called the Mahim woods." (Those same woods we sang about in "The Gipsy Trail.") "When the wind blew, the great nuts would tumble, and we fled—my ayah and my sister in her perambulator—to the safety of the open. . . . Always I have loved the voices of night winds through palm or banana leaves, and the song of the tree frogs." How this brings back flashes of "The Brushwood Boy," the urchin Kim in the market place, Nag and Nagiana in the garden and the Bandar Log swiftly moving through the dark forests.

The David Copperfieldian sufferings of his early days in England seem quite inexplicable, in view of the general intelligence of his parents, as emphasized throughout the book. The glimpses of his Uncle Burne-Jones and his pre-Raphaelite cronies are delightful. "Stalky & Co." fans will relish every word of the recollections of the days at "Westward Ho" School, and of the Head, a progenitor of Mrs. Chips.

Then, the thrilling first years of newspaper work in India. "I found myself at Bombay where I was born, moving among sights and smells that made me deliver in the vernacular sentences whose meaning I knew not. Other Indian-born boys have told me how the same thing happened to them." Apparently he did work, "to which I added for a while chronic dysentary. Yet I discovered that a man can work with a temperature of 104, even though next day he has to ask the office who wrote the article." This period of his early twenties produced "six paper-backed books," which included "Plain Tales From the Hills" and "Departmental Ditties."

Those who feel great affection for him can only wish that Kipling could have risen above some of the petty irritations of his later years.

And now, in truth, we have heard for the last time the voice that intoned "Look well, oh wolves" at the Council Rock. Let us hope that the old artist is following his own prediction:

"We shall rest, and, faith, we shall need it—lie down for an aeon or two,
Till the Master of all Good Workmen shall set us to work anew!
And those that were good shall be happy; they shall sit in a golden chair;
They shall splash at a ten-league canvas with brushes of comets' hair;
They shall find real saints to draw from — Magdalene,
Peter and Paul;
They shall work for an age at a sitting and never be tired at all."

"Safety instruction is one of the things we need most if our efforts are to be rewarded," said Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer yesterday.

"The Post is doing a fine job of arousing public interest in traffic safety and it is our hope that the public, in turn, will join wholeheartedly to support every movement toward reducing our fatality toll."

The coming visit of Lieut. Franklin Kreml, Evanston, Ill., safety expert and winner of the $5,000 C. I. T. safety award, was lauded by Dr. Neyhart, one of the university instructors. Lieut. Kreml will visit Washington as a guest of The Washington Post. Dr. Neyhart said:

"I have known Lieut. Kreml for many years. His outstanding work in traffic safety is recognized throughout the country. He can render valuable assistance to Washington and I hope to be here to help receive him."

Treasury Department Beneficial Association members last night were requested by H. G. Kaiser, president, to study The Post's daily traffic stories. He pointed out that two Treasury Department employes were among pedestrians recently killed in traffic mishaps.

"It is suggested," said Kaiser, "that you study the daily traffic articles being published in The Washington Post and that when you are a pedestrian you avoid crossing in the middle of the block or walking against red lights, and that when you are driving you recognize the pedestrian's right of way when walking at a cross-walk or with a green light; and all other traffic rules particularly intended to prevent accidents."

3 Firemen Hurt

A fire engine, speeding to a small brush fire, struck a taxicab, sideswiped a telephone pole and plowed into a clay bank at Thirteenth and Irving streets northeast yesterday afternoon, injuring three firemen, at least one of them seriously.

The injured were Sergt. Vernon C. Richardson, 28, of 2811 Myrtle street northeast, who, it is feared, suffered a skull fracture and internal injuries; Private William H. Carter, 38, driver of the engine, and Private Victor Jacquot, 34, of 2925 Seventh street northeast, who suffered cuts, bruises and shock.

Richardson was crushed between the fire engine and the phone pole. The others were thrown from the truck by the force of the collision with the taxi. All the injured are members of No. 17 engine company.

Another engine company quickly extinguished the fire.

Bernard Brown, 23, of 3105 Fourteenth street northeast, driver of the taxicab, was arrested, but early last night no charge had been placed against him.

Meanwhile, a coroner's autopsy disclosed auto accident injuries rather than pneumonia, as originally supposed, caused the death of Stewart Johnson, 66, of 4331 Forty-fourth street northwest.

Johnson was the city's thirty-third traffic victim of the year. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said the man's death in Gallinger Hospital Monday night was due to chest injuries.

Before his death, the circumstances of which were being investigated by police last night, Johnson said he was struck by a hit-run driver at Sixth street and Constitution avenue about two weeks ago. He thought nothing of the incident and made no report of it to police. Sunday night he became ill and was taken to the hospital.

The Army's giant Boeing Bomber, the first of a fleet of 13, landed at Bolling Field at 2:50 p. m. yesterday, flying here from Langley Field, Va. The plane will remain until tomorrow morning. Members of House and Senate Military Affairs Committees and appropriations subcommittees will inspect the flying fortress.

Ten days ago it was announced the ship would not be flown here, due to inadequate landing fields. The decision to visit Washington was made after the field had been inspected thoroughly and wind conditions closely observed.

9 Men Are Convicted In Black Legion Plot

Detroit, March 9 (AP).—A former Mayor of Highland Park and eight other men without previous criminal records were ordered to prison today by a municipal judge who convicted them of a Black Legion murder plot.

Recorder's Judge John V. Brennan, who heard the case without a jury, sentenced the men to terms of 1 to 5 years each. He found them guilty a week ago of conspiring in 1933 to shoot Arthur L. Kingsley, newspaper publisher of the suburb.

Yale Collegians Ask Support for 'King Franklin I'

New Haven, Conn., March 9 (U.P.).—A group of Yale students today sought new members for their "Roosevelt-for-King Club," an organization advocating a monarchy headed by King Franklin I.

A lengthy resolution published in the Yale Daily News advocated an early coronation in the National Capital, "Roosevelt, D. C." It urged that the Supreme Court be stuffed and placed in the Smithsonian Institution, "leaving the new Supreme Court Building free for conversion into a fitting place for the royal family," and that "the press be abolished and the people informed only of what is good for them through fireside chats with his Imperial Majesty."

'Lord's Wish' Causes 12 Story Leap; Man Lives

Detroit, March 9 (AP).—Jesse Johnson, 26, leaped today from a twelfth-floor window of a department store and lived to tell about it.

"I have been on the welfare," Johnson told police. "I'm tired of living and the Lord told me to jump."

George James Funeral Is Set For Tomorrow

Former Member of Reserve Board to Be Buried in Memphis.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow in Memphis for George R. James, former member of the Federal Reserve Board and a leading public figure in the South, the Associated Press reported last night following his death early in the day.

The 70-year-old merchant and financier had been ill for more than a year. He had resigned because of his health after 12 years of service on the reserve board.

A Democrat, he was appointed to the board by President Harding in 1924 because he had revived "busted businesses" in his home State, where he had operated banks, sold dry goods, farmed and built wagons.

Picturesque Figure.

A big man, several inches over 6 feet, he was a picturesque figure in the capital, where he lived at 4917 Rockwood Parkway. An attribute for which he was noted was his penchant for wearing "store clothes."

Never friendly to New Deal legislation, although his views seldom were expressed openly, James in June, 1935, opposed before a Senate sub-committee the adoption of the Administration bank bill.

"My experience as a member indicates to my mind that there are very distinct limits to what can be accomplished by the Federal Reserve Board through raising or lowering rediscount rates and through open market operations," he said at that time, declaring the bill was unnecessary. He also blamed the banks themselves for most of the difficulties they had been experiencing.

Left D. C. Last April.

He returned to Memphis last April after having spent the major part of his last years in Washington. James was optimistic over the South's economic future.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Lorette Boyette James; a son, George R. James, and two daughters, Mrs. Huntley Child and Mrs. Martin Dunscomb.

James served as chief of the cotton and cotton linter section of the War Industries Board in 1918 and as a member of the Industrial Board of the Department of Commerce in 1919. He was a trustee of Peabody College for Teachers of Nashville.

Jaw Fracture Cases Common, Dentists Told

Coat Hanger Treatment Is Explained by Dr. Ashton.

A sterilized coat hanger, unpainted, can be used to keep teeth and other parts of the mouth in place in jaw fracture treatment, it was explained yesterday at the second session of the Five State Dental Clinic being held at the Wardman Park Hotel.

The talk, treating the responsibility of the dental surgeon in cases of fracture, was given by Dr. John T. Ashton, of Alexandria, Va.

"Fractures of the bone and face are becoming increasingly common," said Dr. Ashton, "due principally to the increasing use and speed of the automobile."

Dr. Ashton, who is chief dental surgeon on the staff of the Alexandria Hospital, declared that most of "these injuries, due to the terrific impact which causes them, are of the crushing type."

Later yesterday morning, Dr. U. Garfield Rickert, president-elect of the Michigan State Dental Society, discussed the "Dental Medicine Cabinet."

Of the 2,000 drugs already considered by the Council on Dental Therapeutics, 25 may be selected, he said, which, if intelligently used, will answer most of the dentist's needs.

At 2 p. m. Dr. Oliver C. Applegate, a director in the School of Dentistry, University of Michigan, dealt with the problem of partial dentures.

Following Dr. Applegate's talk, Dr. Arthur P. Young, assistant professor of operative dentistry in Harvard University, suggested the larger use of the radiograph in diagnosis and treatment planning.

The clinic gave a dinner dance at the Wardman Park last night, for which entertainment was provided by local hotels and night clubs.

Evelyn Chandler -:- Daring -:- Lovely -:- Wing-footed -:- Skating Marvel

HELLO! Evelyn Chandler—America's Queen of Figure Skaters—leaps into the camera's range. In ice carnivals everywhere—this attractive Brooklyn miss brings spectators to their feet cheering her breath-taking skill.

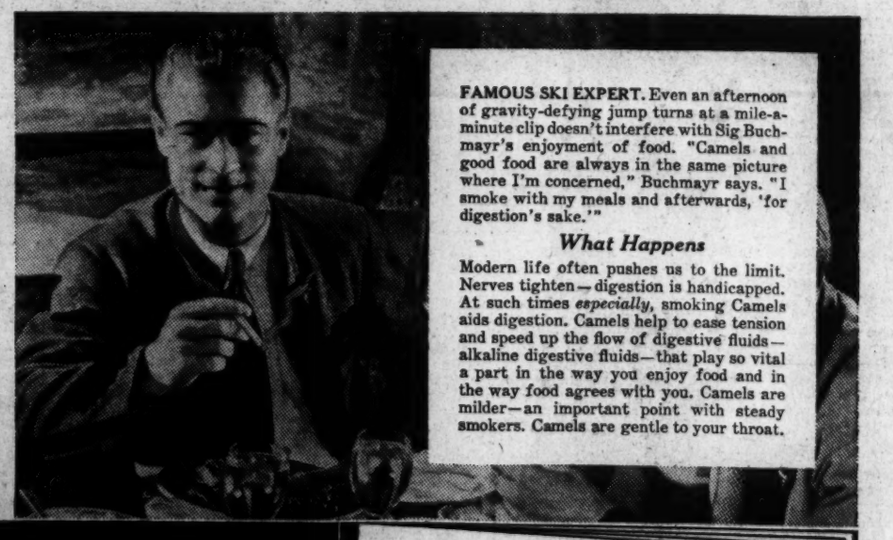

THE ARABIAN CARTWHEEL—a somersault without touching the ice. Evelyn is the only one who has mastered it. It takes healthy nerves! So she smokes Camels. "Camels don't jangle my nerves," she says.

INTO A SPIRAL. Such balance is the result of constant training and good physical condition. About smoking, she says: "I smoke as many Camels as I please—every day. Camels never interfere with my physical condition."

HIGH INTO THE AIR at break-neck speed. There's plenty of vitality behind this swoop through the air. In Evelyn's own words: "Acrobatic skating is strenuous and exciting. It takes a digestion in tiptop shape and stamina to spare. After the tense strain, I like to light up a Camel and get a bracing 'lift' in energy. And I make Camels an important part of my meals too. They help me enjoy my food and give me a sense of well-being."

STARTING 19 DIZZY SPINS in rapid succession. Another time when smooth-working digestion stands Evelyn in good stead. "Camels set me right," she says. "The flavor is so mild—couldn't be improved."

WHY HEADLINERS IN WINTER SPORTS MAKE IT CAMELS

FAMOUS SKI EXPERT. Even an afternoon of gravity-defying jump turns at a mile-a-minute clip doesn't interfere with Sig Buchmayr's enjoyment of food. "Camels and good food are always in the same picture where I'm concerned," Buchmayr says. "I smoke with my meals and afterwards, 'for digestion's sake.'"

What Happens

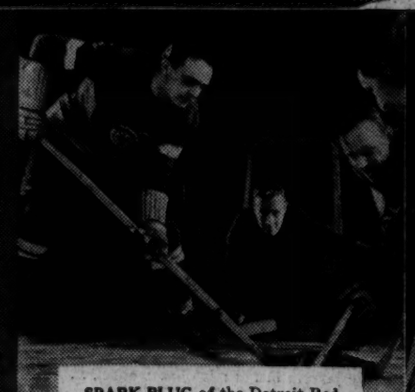

Modern life often pushes us to the limit. Nerves tighten—digestion is handicapped. At such times especially, smoking Camels aids digestion. Camels help to ease tension and speed up the flow of digestive fluids—alkaline digestive fluids—that play so vital a part in the way you enjoy food and in the way food agrees with you. Camels are milder—an important point with steady smokers. Camels are gentle to your throat.

COSTLIER TOBACCOS

A fact of interest to smokers: Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS—Turkish and Domestic—than any other popular brand.

SPARK-PLUG of the Detroit Red Wings is Herb Lewis. A big steak is his first thought after a game. "I keep an eagle eye on my digestion," Herb says. "Camels top off a good meal to perfection."

"STREAKING DOWN a bob-run at 60 m. p. h.—demands nerves of steel," Raymond F. Stevens says. "I enjoy the pleasure of smoking to the full, knowing Camels never bother my nerves."

Bob Burns Says

The real value of a thing entirely depends on how much we want it. We all have a lot of things we just take for granted because they've always been there. We'd appreciate 'em a lot more if we'd jest stop every once in a while and try to figger what in the world we'd do if we didn't have 'em.

It's like the winter that we had the big blizzard down home. Snow piled up to the second story windows. Everybody was marooned in their homes. My uncle was lookin' out the second story window of his store. There wasn't nothing but a sea of snow as far as the eye could reach. Not a sign of life. Suddenly, on top of the hill, where Main street dips down to Lick Skillet, he saw snow flyin' up in the air. It kept gettin' closer and closer. On down the middle of Main street came this flurry of snow sailin' up into the air.

Finally it reached underneath my uncle's window and he could lean out and see what it was. It was a little old man with a long gray beard, shovelin' a trench. My uncle says "Where in the world did you come from?" The little old man says "I dug my way here from 40 miles back in the mountains."

My uncle says "You must be desperate to dig your way all this distance through the snow." And the little old man says "Yes sir, we've been out of nutmeg for two weeks."

Plums and Pocahontas.

Royal C. Steadman, Agriculture's chief scientific illustrator, is a conservative-faced New Englander who wears bold neckties to match the rainbow. The tie colors might have been squeezed from the twisted paint tubes on his desk, and while you stand there, thinking of all this, Steadman will tell you: "My life is full of color."

Certainly his office is full of the rainbow, at its best. The walls are covered by painted bunches of grapes and other fruit and there are landscapes.

"Those grapes," people say to the illustrator, "they'd fool the very birds; look as though you could pull one off, and, having pulled it off, find it very good to eat."

"The painted apples fooled the rats, the rats that were so plentiful in the old building," Steadman will say. "The rats swarmed one night on a painted apple and ate the seeds away." . . .

• • • • •

"Come out to my home in Lyon Village, Clarendon," Steadman will say if his keen New England eye fancies you, "and see the work I'm doing in my off hours. Already I've worked 364 hours at it . . . nearly finished now, but I dread taking it down to the McLachlen Bank; hauling things is so messy, you know, besides it might get damaged. Let me tell you about it before you see it.

"It's a copy of Ferris' 'The Abduction of Pocahontas;' six and one-half by eleven feet I've made it; you must have heard the story?"

• • • • •

"Well, it is said that Pocahontas, in 1610—being then about 15 years of age—was married to a chief named Kocoum. At any rate, in 1612, Capt. Argall found her with the Potomac tribe, and with a copper kettle bribed its chief to connive at her abduction. She was inveigled aboard Argall's ship and taken to Jamestown as a hostage for the good behavior of her father, Powhatan.

"Here she met John Rolfe, then a widower, and an affection sprang up between them. Her first marriage does not seem to have troubled the pai . . . According to Indian notions, the contract could be terminated at the pleasure of either party.

"At any rate, Rolfe's scruples were set at peace by baptizing her a Christian and changing her name to Rebecca. The governor, Sir Thomas Dale, seized the occasion to renew his alliance with Powhatan, and the marriage was solemnized in April, 1613, in the church at Jamestown in the presence of an amicable company of Englishmen and Indians" . . .

One looks at the canvas in the attice of Steadman's home to find the face of Pocahontas an entreaty, the face of Argall a villain's laugh and the faces of bystanders a so-what?

• • • • •

But before you leave for Steadman's home in Clarendon he will show you drawings, paintings of fruit and wax reproductions of fruit and vegetables that would fool an orchardist and charm a foodhuntnig rat. There is fidelity to detail and amazing delicacy of coloring. Only occasionally is such pretty fruit on the fruit stands. Not being able to raise such pretty fruit is a farm problem. Steadman's wax and painted fruit are exact copies, even to the weight, and serve purposes of identification and illustration.

• • • • •

Fingering through his files, one will come upon two submitted designs for postage stamps. One bears a naval orange; the other a clustered fruit. "I submitted them to . . . what's his name? The Postmaster Genefal? . . .

"Farley," we said.

"Yes, Mr. Farley," said Steadman, "but they didn't pass."

Steadman, a man free of guile, never imagined that the clustered fruit he subbitted might have carried to Farley's heart a suggestiveness of political plums.

Fred B. Rhodes Testifies Today In Fidelity Case

Former Bank Head Slated to Deny Accusation of Irr Forgery.

Fred B. Rhodes, former president of the Fidelity Building & Loan Association, will take the stand in District Court today to deny he forged the signature of Desire A. Irr, a depositor in the institution, to a withdrawal slip calling for the payment of $1,500.

That was indicated yesterday when Defense Attorneys William E. Leahy and William J. Hughes, jr., after having been overruled in a motion for a directed verdict of not guilty, placed several character witnesses on the stand and then announced they would place Rhodes in the witness chair today.

In their motion, the attorneys claimed the Government had failed to make out a case against the banker-lawyer and that he should, because of the constitutional provision that a man was presumed to be innocent until he was proved guilty, be acquitted of the charge. Declining to rule on the sufficiency of evidence, Justice Peyton Gordon said he would prefer to let the jury pass on the question.

Meanwhile, John J. Wilson, assistant United States Attorney in charge of prosecution, predicted the case would be submitted to jury today. He said he had little rebut a short time, it was believed many of Rhodes expected to take buttal testimony, and the the testithe case would be "sent in" by mid afternoon.

The charge against Rhodes is that he forged the signature of Irr to a withdrawal slip. It was alleged yesterday the writing on the slip was that of Rhodes. It was contended that Irr, a substantial depositor in the association, had authorized the making out of the slip.

Saito Invites Teachers to Japan's Parley

Washington's school teachers yesterday were assured the hospitality of the Japanese if they attend the seventh annual convention of the World Federation of Education Associations next summer in Tokyo.

Hirosi Saito, the Japanese Ambassador to the United States, addressing an audience of teachers in Central High School, said "Japan is honored that you are coming, and a warm welcome awaits you." Three hundred teachers representing five local professional organizations affiliated with the World Federation, participated in the Japanese program, and heard, in addition to Ambassador Saito, Dr. Shio Sakanishi, curator of the Japanese section of the Library of Congress, and Dr. James W. Crabtree, office manager of the World Federation. Selma Borchardt, Roosevelt High teacher and a director of the Wold Fedeation, was chairman.

Dr. Crabtree described Japan as one of the most advanced nations educationally in the world. "Recent surveys," he said, "show that there is less illiteracy in Japan than in any other country."

Japan's progress in developing a national educational program was reported by Dr. Sakanishi.

The Tokyo convention, a biennial meeting, will take place August 2 to 7, 1937. The United States, according to Dr. Crabtree, is planning to send a delegation of several hundred. Good will among the educators throughout the world is the federation's principal objective.

AAA Worker Held After Wife Falls From Automobile

Max Prentice, 32, of 3000 Connecticut avenue northwest, was released under $1,000 bond by Maryland State police last night after his wife, Mrs. Naomi Prentice, 30, had been injured in a fall from their automobile on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard near Dorsey, Md.

Officer Carroll C. Serman, of the Laurel, Md., State police substation, was unable to explain how the accident happened. He said he was notified by a motorist that "a woman had fallen out of an automobile."

Prentice's arrest by Baltimore police followed a few minutes later after a lookout had been posted for the car. Police said he had taken his wife to Franklin Square Hospital in Baltimore, where her condition was said to be serious.

Justice of the Peace J. I. Trobaugh, of Jessups, Md., ordered the man released under bond pending the outcome of his wife's injuries. No charges were placed against him.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Prentice are employes of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

Roberts to Help In Setting Value Of Transit Firm

Former People's Counsel Offers Assistance to Utilities Body.

William A. Roberts, former people's counsel, yesterday offered his services to the Public Utilities Commission at coming valuation hearings of the Capital Transit Co.

Although no date for the hearings has been set, Roberts appeared at the office of Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman of the commission, yesterday, and agreed to act in an advisory capacity.

During his three-year service as peoples' counsel, Roberts was active in valuation matters. Keech did not indicate whether his services would be accepted.

The transit company at present is operating without a definite valuation of its holdings, P. U. C. officials pointed out. Public hearings will be held in an effort to fix a set amount on the company's system.

Following the valuation meeting, it is expected the commission will call for fare hearings. Recent elimination of the $1 street car pass has aroused considerable resentment, and this issue, it is understood, will be presented to citizens at a second public hearing.

Roberts has been instrumental in securing agreement to the hearings. He is now conducting a private law practice.

Jury Action Waited In 'Torch' Murder

Charleston, W. Va., March 9 (AP). The State postponed William B. Read's second robbery trial today, awaiting action by a grand jury in another county on indictments charging Read and two others were connected with the "torch" slaying of W. Earle Dollman.

Read, 25-year-old resident of Four Corners, had been scheduled to go on trial on a charge of robbing Harold Casto, Charleston filling station operator, but the case was postponed until April 12.

Read was convicted yesterday of the robbery of Paul P. Wilson, Charleston banker.

2 Veterans to Broadcast Dire Need Story Tonight

Two veterans of the World War, men who are employable but without work and who are in dire need, will tell their stories over WJSV at 7:15 o'clock tonight. This will be the fourth broadcast on the "Help Wanted" program being staged by the Columbia Broadcasting System with the co-operation of the Community Chest, the Board of Public Welfare and their affiliated agencies.

Symphony Campaign Preceded By 'Rehearsal Party' Today

Hans Kindler and his National Symphony Orchestra, just back from a concert tour of the South, will stage a "rehearsal party" in Constitution Hall this afternoon to start off the campaign to raise a $110,000 sustaining fund for the symphony.

The volunteers who expect to carry the drive during the next eight days into every section of the Capital will sit in on a practice session beginning at 4 p. m., and see how the symphony aggregation acts when it gets down to work. Invitations to the "party" were sent yesterday to more than 700 "guests"—the corps of workers.

Dr. Kindler and his men will go into rehearsal for two important concerts in their Washington schedule. The first, next Sunday afternoon, presents Ethel Bartlett and Rae Robertson, the noted English duo-pianists. The second will be a week from tonight when Paul Whiteman will conduct a combination of his own ensemble and the National Symphony.

This is the first time in the five-year history of the orchestra that Dr. Kindler has conducted a rehearsal before an audience.

The workers also will be given final instructions at the rehearsal session. Corcoran Thom, president of the National Symphony Orchestra Association, will speak, and other talks will be given by Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, general campaign chairman, and Harold A. Brooks, vice chairman of the drive.

Actual work of presenting the appeal for financial support of the orchestra begins tomorrow morning. With their organization of workers nearly completed, campaign leaders expect to reach the $110,000 goal before the final date, March 18, arrives.

Thom has announced $110,000 is necessary to meet the minimum requirements of the orchestra for another year, if the price of concert tickets is to be kept at the present level.

Jacobs Fiscal Plan Assailed As Too Costly

House Unit Spokesman Says U. S. Will Pay More Than Ever.

Author of Proposal for D. C. Financial Aid Takes Stand.

By James D. Secrest.

A prediction that the Jacobs three-point fiscal formula will cost the Federal Government more than the former lump sum system was made by a member of the House sub-committee on District appropriations after an all day examination of J. L. Jacobs, director of the $50,000 fiscal relations study.

"Why this formula would cost the Federal Government $20,000,000 a year in a few years," one of the sub-committee members stated, "because the more the District Government spent the more the Federal Government would have to contribute."

The sub-committee members who stayed throughout the testimony of Jacobs expressed themselves as dizzy with the complications of the plan for dividing costs between the Federal and District Governments.

Would Need Einstein.

"You would have to have Einstein for an assistant, be familiar with the fourth dimension, and have to approach the subject upside down to figure out the Federal payment each year," the member, who asked to remain anonymous, said.

He added that the task of keeping track of the 69 Governmental services and the comparative taxes of Washington and the 17 cities used in the survey would require a gigantic staff.

"An organization like the Social Security Administration could do it, I guess," he added.

The sub-committee challenged Jacobs' deductions in several instances, it was learned, because of the inadequacy or inaccuracy of his primary facts.

One of these was that though the investigators had compared the District tax rates and assessments with the corresponding figures in the 17 comparable cities they had failed to obtain reports on actual collections.

Jacobs told the sub-committee that the report on actual revenues derived by the cities was not available.

Sub-committee members pointed out that the taxes paid could not be compared with fairness to the District until these figures are known because of the possibility of fraud in the other cities.

Another instance on which Jacobs was challenged was his charging of the District with $55,000 for maintenance of the Library of Congress because Washingtonians use it as a reading room.

Can Hardly Get In.

"Doesn't he know," one of the members asked, "that a resident of the District can hardly get in the library unless he has specific research work to do?"

The calculation as to the eventual cost to the Federal Government of the fiscal formula was based on the third point under which the National Capital Planning Commission would allocate the costs of Capital improvements between the Federal and District Governments.

The sub-committee members pointed out that the District would be expected to undertake large building programs if the formula were adopted in order to obtain greater Federal payments.

As enactment of the tax measures proposed by the Jacobs committee would presumably place the District on a taxation par with the 17 cities named in the report, the Federal Government would have to pay the difference between the District revenue and the annual budget.

Even for this year this figure might be considerable as District officials estimate that all of the proposed tax measures will not produce over $6,000,000 and the anticipated deficit is $11,000,000. That would leave a difference of $5,000,000, which is exactly the amount paid last year by the United States under the lump payment plan.

The sub-committee will continue to question Jacobs today as the examination was not concluded yesterday. George McAneny, chairman of the advisory committee, had to leave the hearing yesterday, but both he and Jacobs will return, probably next week, to appear before the legislative sub-committee headed by Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland.

Job Hunters Told To Stand on Merit

Job hunters were advised to forget "letters from Congressmen" and approach prospective employers on the basis of their individual merits by C. Melvin Sharpe, of the Potomac Electric Power Co., principal speaker at the last of four occupational guidance lectures at the Y. M. C. A. last night.

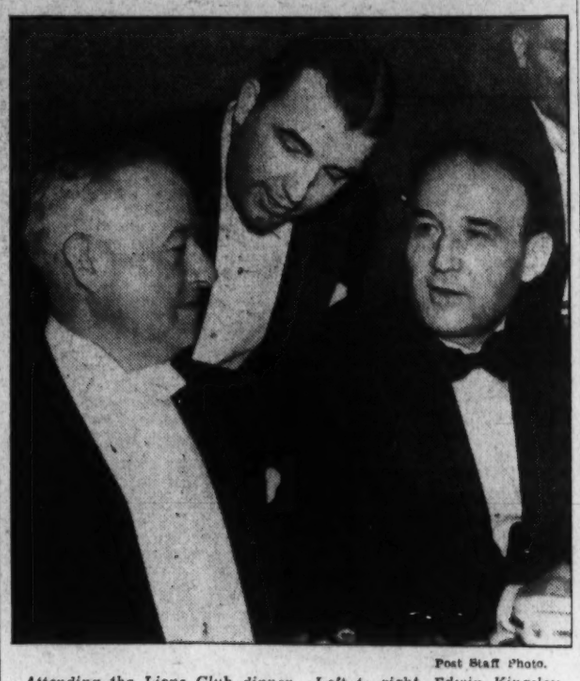

Other speakers included Miss Dorothea de Schweinitz, of the National Youth Administration, and Miss Jane Palmer, of the Children's Bureau.

Faith Healers Topic Debated By House Unit

Medicine vs. Religion Is Argued in Hearing on Doctor's Bill.

A controversy over the respective roles of medicine and religion yesterday enlivened a House subcommittee hearing on a bill to prevent blindness in infants.

The debate grew out of an amendment placed on the bill in 1935 by the Senate upon request of Senator Copeland (Democrat), former health commissioner of New York City.

The bill, which has been before three sessions of Congress, requires any physicians, midwife, or other person attending a childbirth to administer immediately upon delivery a drop of silver nitrate solution in each of the infant's eyes.

Provision Omitted.

The measure was drafted by the District Health Department in collaboration with the District Medical Society. It did not originally, however, contain a provision exempting faith healers from a section stating that none but a registered physician might treat inflammation of an infant's eyes.

This amendment reads:

"The provisions of this section shall not be construed to apply to persons treating human ailments by prayer or spiritual means as an exercise or enjoyment of religious freedom."

William G. Biederman, of the Christian Science committee on publications yesterday appeared before a sub-committee headed by Representative Wood (Democrat), of Misouri, and asked that that amendment be retained.

Loophole Is Seen.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland, together with spokesmen for the District Medical Society and the District Society for Prevention of Blindness, insisted that the amendment be stricken on the ground that the law would be futile if the loophole were retained.

"I have the highest regard for religion," Dr. Ruhland said, "but religious belief does not prevent illness."

The sub-committee decided to report the bill with the Senate amendment deleted after listening to other witnesses, including Dr. Charles B. Campbell, of the District Medical Society; Mrs. W. H. Wilmer, of the District Society for Prevention of Blindness, and others.

Ruth Ann Oden, 3, Dies of Infection

Ruth Ann Oden, 3, who refused to cry because "only sissies cry" when her hand was caught in a swinging door at her home several weeks ago, died Saturday at Gallinger Hospital, it was learned yesterday.

Ruth lived at 515 Florida avenue northeast. She was playing in her home last month when she caught her hand in the door. Her mother couldn't remove it. And while they waited 15 minutes for the fire rescue squad, Ruth took her mother's counsel "to be brave" and didn't let a tear escape.

The child succumbed to an infection which resulted from a bruised hip. The hip was injured some time ago but she did not complain about it until a week ago. Physicians were unable to save her life.

Fight Begun Over Shrine To Jefferson

Architects Group Hits Selection Without Competition.

Seeks Aid in Congress; Ellenbogen Favors More Designs.

Rumblings of a movement in Congress to delay, and possibly prevent, construction of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial, under the plans approved by the memorial commission, were heard yesterday.

Representative Henry Ellenbogen (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, confirmed reports that a group of architects has requested him to call the attention of Congress to the fact that the commission selected an architect without holding a competition for the award.

The same group, whose members Ellenbogen declined to name, is also believed to have asked the intervention of other Representatives and Senators.

The memorial commission, headed by Representative John J. Boylan (Democrat), of New York, announced last month that John Russell Pope would be the architect at the same time that it revealed final approval had been given Pope's plans for a marble monument to be erected south of the Tidal Basin in Potomac Park.

"I thing the commission should have considered the designs of more than one architect," Ellenbogen said.

He would not say, however, whether this was the only criticism of the project voiced by the group that visited him. Since the commission announced its plans last month numerous objections have arisen to the conventional character of the memorial and to the site chosen for it.

The Pennsylvanian would not say whether he will attempt to block appropraitions for the memorial. Congress has authorized the expenditure of $3,000,000.

Called "Senile Sham."

New York, March 9 (AP).—The American Sculptors Society joined today with several modern art groups in criticizing the chosen design for the Thomas Jefferson Memorial in Washington, which it called "a senile sham."

Copies of a letter of protest, members of the society's executive board said, were sent President Roosevelt, Postmaster General Farley and members of Congress and the Federal Memorial Commission, which selected a design by John Russell Pope, New York architect.

The letter, written by Milton Horn, chairman of the society's cultural commission, called Pope's design an "imitation of a weak imitation of a culture, which even the first imitators did not understand; an effectation which will mark for all time a sense of the superficiality rather than the truth Jefferson sought and which will remain a disgrace and a blot on this generation."

It demanded that Congress "lift this curse" and authorize a competition "open to all architects and sculptors."

Lion President Asks Fight to Aid Youngsters

Finds Scout Troops Effective Character Building Agency for Boys.

Edwin R. Kingsley, international president of the Lions Club last night urged local Lions to fight juvenile delinquency through a program of club work among underprivileged children.

Speaking at a dinner in his honor given at the Mayflower by the Washington Lions organization, Kingsley declared that it was time Lions everywhere did more to help children who live on the wrong side of the tracks.

Elsewhere, he said, the creation of Scout troops had been found of especial value in decreasing the juvenile delinquency rate. Kingsley also asked the Lions to do their best to aid character-building programs in schools and churches.

The international president praised the organization for its work in creating good will among men in widely separated parts of the country and in the eight nations where the Lions Club has branches.

Eventually, he said, he hoped the Lions could band together to fight war, disease and crime on a huge international scale.

Kingsley was introduced by Representative Jennings Randolph, West Virginia Congressman and Lions Club member. Other speakers were Robert L. McKeever and Adam Arnold, who presided. Representative Clyde L. Garrett, successor to Thomas Blanton in the Seventeenth Texas District, met with rousing cheers when he was introduced.

Randle Highlands Unit Backs 2 Bills

The Randle Highlands Citizens Association last night gave its approval to a bill pending in Congress which would provide that local police be trained in the use of small arms. It also approved another bill to regulate sanitary conditions in beauty shops in the District.

The association voted to ask the postoffice to speed up mail delivery in the Randle Highlands section and to ask the National Capital Park and Planning Commission to construct a proposed public auditorium in the Southeast.

On motion of Mrs. F. T. Burgess, the association adopted a resolution indorsing W. L. Peak for general superintendent of the District penal institutions.

The Brookland Citizens Association, meeting at St. Anthony's Hall, appointed a committee to consider improvement of property in the section. The committee members are E. W. Turner, E. C. Saltzman, Dr. Frank O'Hara, Dr. George R. Ellis, Mrs. Margaret Doran, Daniel Masterson, Charles Ries and Martin Ries.

Committee Favors Two District Bills

A House sub-committee headed by Representative Palmisano (Democrat), of Maryland, yesterday decided to report favorably two bills after brief hearings.

One of the measures gives authority to the joint board of the District Commissioners and the Public Utilities Commission to enforce its traffic orders.

The other raises the minimum amount of property involved for a grand larceny charge and makes a jail sentence mandatory. The sub-committee declined to approve the jump in the minimum from $35 to $75, however, but agreed on $50.

A group of taxi drivers appeared before the sub-committee and appealed for a law which would enable them to collect fares from patrons who refuse to pay.

Paris Deputies Pass Billion Defense Loan

Debate Disrupted by Women in Gallery; Bill Now Goes to Senate.

By the United Press.

Paris, March 9.—The Chamber of Deputies tonight passed the billion-dollar defense loan bill by a vote of 470 to 48 after an argument among women in the gallery, including the wife of Premier Leon Blum, disrupted debate.

The chamber defeated, 368 to 228, an amendment by the Nationalistic Republican Federation which would have created a parliamentary control committee over expenditure of the loan.

The vote came after long debate climaxed by a vigorous argument in the galleries between Mrs. Blum and Mrs. Fernand Bouisson, wife of a former premier.

Session Suspended.

The women created such a disturbance that the session was suspended. Premier Blum, who had been speaking, went to the gallery and quieted the women.

Earlier he refused to enter any political controversy regarding the loan and asked the chamber to vote as speedily as possible. The brief bill contains three short articles and a preamble, which stated that the loan may be issued in several amounts, equal to the total national defense requirements for 1937.

Article one authorizes Finance Minister Vincent Auriol to issue the loan with a payment guarantee or a currency option.

Abolishes Control Rules.

Article two stipulates that articles 8, 10, 11 and 12 of the October 1 monetary control law are abolished.

Article 3 empowers the finance minister to pay those persons possessing receipts for gold or foreign exchange delivered to the Bank of France, the difference between the sum they received and the average gold price on March 8, 9 and 10.

The bill now goes to the Senate.

Warnings Issued On Forest Fires

Baltimore, Md., March 9 (AP).—With the spring fire season at hand and destined, if past performances are an indication, to result in over 600 forest fires in Maryland, State Forester F. W. Besley issued warning today to picknickers and farmers to watch their fires.

Three simple precautions were propounded by the forester as most effective in reducing cause of fires in the woods. They were: Do not start fires where hazards are prevalent (where loose leaves, grass and other rubbish abounds), rake way all inflammable materials from the vicinity of your fire where a wind-blown spark might catch it, and be sure that your fire is completely extinguished when you leave it.

Doctor Describes How Mother Reversed Life to Die as Infant

Struggled to Keep Young With Children, Became Progressively Girlish, a Child and an Infant.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Richmond, Va., March 9.—How a 61-year-old mother's second childhood relentlessly retraced time and carried a Southern "gentlewoman" back to the lifeless oblivion whence life begins is disclosed in the current issue of the Virginia Medical Journal.

Dr. Beverly R. Tucker, one of the South's most eminent psychiatrists, describes the weird case of the queenly mother who tried so hard to be youthful for her children's sake that her mental and physical powers walked life's path backward until, at more than three-score years, she died with her body curled up in the fashion of an unborn child.

"She must have been beautiful when young.

"Her husband himself did for her all the chores. He provided for her a house, servants, comforts and what luxuries he could afford. He relieved her from all responsibility, smother out her annoyances and managed her personal affairs, even to details. She told me that she had never bought a railway ticket. Her husband assisted her in picking out her hats and her dresses and that, in fact, he had been an ideal husband.

Longed for Youth.

"Then, in life's prime, he died and she was faced with handling the estate and directing the three, then adolescent, children. This situation seemed appalling to her although the estate was ample and the children all that could be desired.

"She began to feel that she should be younger in order better to understand the children and be more companionable with them. So when the usual period of mourning was over, she dressed and decorated herself as a younger woman would. She sought the companionship of young married couples and attempted to take up their activities.

"Finding that this still did not compound her with her children she soon became as a young unmarried woman, but always, of course, deporting herself with decorum. She then entered into her children's lives, went out with them, adopted their friends and dressed as her daughters dressed.

"But her children grew older. One of her daughters married and her son went to another State in business. However, she lived with her daughters and her son-in-law, although they managed the house, attending to the finances and looked affectionately and dutifully after her every comfort; she became dissatisfied, for she found she could not grow older with her children. Still she must belong to them and be as close to them as possible.

"It was not long before she gave the children considerable anxiety by becoming herself an adolescent and they had to direct her goings out and comings in, to try to persuade her that her clothes were entirely too youthful for her and to induce her to converse less flippantly. But the mother continued to get younger at the rate of a year or so every few months.

"Mentally the patient sent to me was 6 or 7 years old, although her actual age was 61. My associates and I worked arduously in an endeavor to set back the hands of her perosnality clock.

"She was a nice little girl in short dresses rocking in her chair. She read simple things, but rather badly. She craved attention. She laughed sometimes and at others she would cry. She talked childishly pleasant or was mischievous and delighted in trying to play jokes on or fool the doctors and nurses. She would play with objects as if they were toys. When her children came to see her she would act as if she were their child.

Reached Infancy.

"Despite our efforts to the contrary, in a few months she was 3 or 4 years of age. Her enunciation became less distinct, she was careless with her spoon, spilling food, and had to be assisted with her feeding. She had ceased to read and would have crawled around on the floor had the nurse so permitted.

"In several months more she was in bed, moving her hands and feet aimlessly, often whimpering and crying like a very young child, and the only articulation one could understand was her frequent calling for 'mamma, mamma,' although her mother had passed to the great beyond some 30 years before.

"The patient would take a towel or any cloth, roll it up and hug it to her as if it were a rag doll.

"She now required liquid nourishment because she could not chew, and soon she had to be fed liquids with a spoon, taking them with a sucking movement. She also would suck the corner of her gown or sheet. She would eat, sleep, make peculiar noises and cry. She liked to be fondled and handled by almost any one. Her only recognition of her family was an expression of delight when they came to see her.

"At about four months of age she left the sanitarium, much to our regret, for this infant had become the pet of the nurses and doctors.

"However, we kept in touch with her and she continued to regress until she assumed the foetal posture, breathing gently being her only movement. At this time she was sent to a State hospital where soon she was gathered into the womb of her Mother Earth."

Too Scotch; No Scotch.

Strathpeffer, Scotland, March 9 (U.P.).—The village council has voted down a proposal to give every elderly inhabitant among this village's 427 residents a free drink of Scotch whisky to toast the health of the King and Queen on coronation day.

Reich Cabinet Moves to Seize Alien Property

Will Retaliate for Any Foreign Expropriation of Germans' Lands.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, March 9.—Seizure of foreign property in Germany in retaliation for expropriation of German-owned lands abroad was authorized by the German cabinet today.

Although a communique issued after the meeting gave no details, informed persons said they believed the measure was aimed at neighboring countries which might expropriate property owned by Germans close to the German border in compliance with defense laws.

(Presumably the law was directed particularly at France, which has authorized expropriation of land along the Franco-German frontier in cases where the property might be used for war purposes—secret gun emplacements, munitions dumps and the like.)

The law authorized the minister of the interior to take whatever measures are necessary in certain districts—particularly border areas—to insure security of the Reich's boundaries and its territory.

The text was not made public, but the communique indicated the law gave sweeping authority for retaliatory action against foreigners.

"The Reich's minister of interior," the statement said, "further is authorized to take retaliatory measures against citizens of a foreign state and against their property insofar as that state enforces against citizens of the Reich or their property any measures which, under German law, are not applicable to citizens of that state or their property."

Whether "their property," meant bank accounts, credits and so forth, as well as real estate, was not stated.

High German officials said the cabinet might consider tomorrow an answer to Great Britain's request for Germany's ideas on a new Western European security agreement.

Bill Banning Sit-Downs Offered in Wisconsin

Madison, Wis., March 9 (AP).—Introduction of 41 amendments and a substitute measure forbidding sit-down strikes forced the Senate today to postpone action for a week on the labor disputes bill.

The complete substitute, proposed by Senator Harry W. Bolens, Democrat, besides forbidding employes to take unauthorized possession of an employer's property, would require licensing of a labor union in order that it be considered a "bona fide labor organization" under terms of the bill.

Use of Poison Gas Suggested By Confederate in Civil War

Hand Grenades Also Urged; Limitations of Manufacture Defeated Plans, Research Reveals.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 9.—Poison gas would have been introduced as a weapon of modern warfare in 1864 instead of 50 years later had science been able to supply the demand of a Confederate general for "stink shells" with which to bombard an entrenched Union Army.

Official records of the Union and Confederate armies in the War of the Rebellion disclose that on June 19, 1864, Brig. Gen. W. N. Pendleton, chief of artillery for Gen. Lee's Army of Northern Virginia, expressed the intent to shell his enemy with certain "suffocating bases" which would make their position "intolerable."

Col. Adelno Gibson, chemical warfare officer for the Second Army Corps Area, said today that except for the failure of science and industry to produce the desired shells, Gen. Pendleton would have anticipated the Germans, who unloosed the first gas attack at Ypres half a century later—on April 22, 1915.

Suggested Grenades.

Gen. Pendleton also suggested that hand-grenades, first used effectively in the World War, be prepared for use on the Union entrenchments.

"The chief of ordnance was unable to furnish Gen. Pendleton with the 'stink shells' because science and industry were then unable to produce them," Col. Gibson said. "Thus it was left for Prof. Haber, dean of German scientists, to introduce gas as an agent of war."

Prof. Haber used chlorine gas on the Ypres front to break a long deadlock, but Col. Gibson said the German troops failed to take full advantage of the temporary breach the surprising attack made in the allied lines.

Since that time the use of chemicals as agents of war has been recognized as a fact by the entire world, and the League of Nations reported it impracticable to make effective the prohibition of chemical warfare.

Concentrate on Gases.

Future wars, Col. Gibson predicted, will see scientific concentration on the development of known gases.

"The trend is not toward production of some 'rain of death' which would kill great masses of people, both civilian and military, but toward the production of great numbers of comparatively light casualties, such as would be inflicted by the commonly known and used gases," he said.

Col. Gobson said he failed to see any possibility of the use of bacteria in wars to come, as has been suggested by fiction writers, "because of the danger to the users.

"I have been asked about secret death rays. The only ones who have information on this subject are those who live by selling their imaginative writings. No scientist of reputation has furnished any data or even speculation on this subject. No military man or authority has intimated its possibility. The reasonable conclusion is that there are too many real factors to be dealt with in warfare to make it suitable to worry over the imaginary death ray," he concluded.

Chemical warfare, the Army expert said, will be an important weapon in any future war, but "the mathematical possibilities are against the discovery of new and more powerful chemical agents."

Union Labor Split In Aircraft Dispute

Los Angeles, March 9 (AP).—Union labor was divided against itself in organizing the aircraft industry here today.

The International Association of Machinists, aeronautical section, announced the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation had agreed to recognize it as the sole collective bargaining agency for its employes. The association is an American Federation of Labor affiliate.

Previously the Northrop Corporation had agreed to recognize the United Automobile Workers, aircraft division, as the bargaining agency of U. A. W. members. The U. A. W. is a Committee for Industrial Organization affiliate.

At the Douglas Aircraft Corporation factory, largest in the world, the U. A. W. and the Douglas Employes Association, a company union, each claim to have strongest support.

"On the Avenue," Previewed by Critics Yesterday, Again Demonstrates Berlin's Wizardry as Tunesmith

New Picture, Coming to the Palace on Friday, Boasts Hit Tunes and Stellar Cast to "Sell" It to the Public; "Nancy Steele" to Be Unwound Today; the Postman Rings Several Times; News and Gossip of the Current Amusement World.

IRVING BERLIN'S celebrated ability to write hit tunes was never better demonstrated than in his new picture for Twentieth Century-Fox, "On the Avenue," which was previewed by the drama desks in the private projection room of the Fox Film Exchange yesterday afternoon.

BELL.

Berlin has contributed six melodious numbers and the lyrics to a back-stage story that was contrived for the celluloids by Gene Markey and William Counselman. Seymour Felix staged the dances. To those who know their theater that should be about all that is necessary in the matter of recommendation of this particular item.

Out of the six Berlin songs, I should say that he has a batting average of at least .500. Three of them fall into the hit class by any man's ear for music. Beyond the appeal of the tuneful music, "On the Avenue" has the advantage of a coherent story, in which romance plays no small part, and the services of a cast that comes close to marking the top in this line of cinematographic endeavor.

One might cite the fact, for example, that the leading roles are played by Dick Powell, who sings the best of the Berlin songs; that Madeleine Carroll points the romantic interest of the play; that Alice Faye sings others of the Berlin compositions in her deep-throated voice and that the Ritz Brothers are at their amusing best in a succession of crazy interpolations that give them an opportunity to be a great deal funnier than they were in their recent short-reel, "Hotel Anchovy."

In addition to all of these are Cora Witherspoon, George Barbier, former member of the Columbia Players, Washington's most popular stock company in the past quarter-century; Alan Mowbray, Walter Catlett, Stepin Fetchit, who hasn't as much to do as he should have, and Sigmund Romann, that admirable actor who is remembered for his work with Ethel Barrymore and Katharine Cornell on the legitimate stage, so-called.

Needless to say, "On the Avenue" traces a course of opulent splendor. Many of its scenes are embellished by the most ornate of settings and costumes and there is a chorus of beauties who add no little to the general appeal of the whole.

By and large, I suspect that when "On the Avenue" opens on the screen of Loew's Palace Theater on Friday it will be enjoyed by a tremendous number of people, whether they be avowed addicts of lilting music or not. It is that kind of a picture.

• • • •

Today, to make the drama desks' week complete, compact and complex, the Loew interests are screening "Nancy Steele Is Missing," coming to the screen of the Capitol day after tomorrow. This is a matter in which the principal role is played with his usual vehemence by Victor McLaglen, the best two-fisted slugger the cinema ever has known. In this subject, Vic has a part that is right down his alley, as the saying goes. It probably will be right down yours, too.

• • • •

If one had to acknowledge his private correspondence in cold print, he would be apt to mention the fact that he had received cordial letters from Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., Marilyn Marlowe, the exceptional young tap-dancer appearing with "Red" Skelton on the stage bill at Loew's Capitol Theater this week, and Lela Moore, creator of the "Dance of the Lovers," presented recently as a featured act on the stage bill at the Earle.

Miss Moore writes from her cabin aboard the Norddeutscher Lloyd Line S. S. Bremen and states that she is on her way, or was, to Paris to play an engagement at the A. B. C. Theater, whatever that may be.

Nice to hear from all of these companionable people.

• • • •

And then there comes another pretty postage card from Honolulu, from Joe and Mary Morgan, who have been climbing mountains and otherwise disporting themselves between turns on Waikiki Beach and Kaling Molakai. Joe, former general manager of the Crandall interests in Washington, and Mary caught the first liner that sailed from the West Coast after the settlement of the recent maritime strike. Now they are all shook up and nervous, as you might say, by the threat that the strike will be renewed and they will not be able to get back to the United States. Well, that's the way things go.

• • • •

Something ought to be said, right out in public—and it hereby is—to the effect that Ray Kavanaugh does a fine job of directing the orchestra for the pseudo-tragic developments of a musical comedy that is not tragic at all, and that Jack Vinocur and Adam Carroll perform an especially excellent job at two grand pianos, at the National.

These are components of the Dwight Deere Wiman production that may not be overlooked by any observant commentator. The three boys do yeomen's service.

• • • •

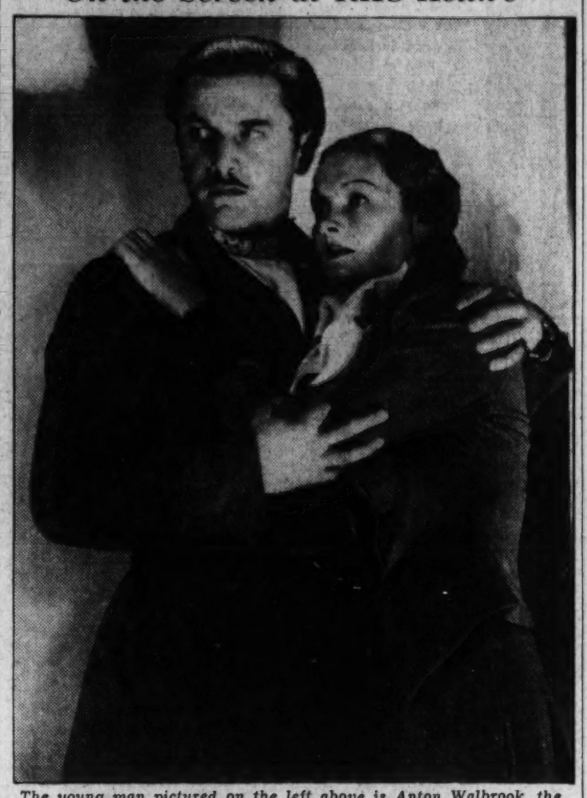

So yesterday morning at 10, which is the middle of the night to any self-respecting newspaperman—and we hope we are one, although there is a reasonable doubt—we did a newsreel "clip" for the Pathe News that is to be shown on the opening night of the Trans-Lux Theater. We are not the only sufferer. All of the other critics of the local press also were impressed into spontaneous service. How we came out, you will have to judge. I have a fear that it all was pretty terrible.

• • • •

Friendly Admonition Note.

Stay away from that Trans-Lux business until we scribes get off the screen. After that, it probably will be all right!

On the Screen at RKO-Keith's

The young man pictured on the left above is Anton Walbrook, the highly acclaimed star of "The Soldier and the Lady," opening on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater today. He appears in the role of Michael Strogoff in this celluloid transcription of the Jules Verne story. In his embrace is Elizabeth Allan. There will be more of this adventurous business in tomorrow's review.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

Hollywood, March 9.—The average star will fight tooth and nail to avoid the very thing half the world imagines he would most like to do. I mean, work in a picture with Shirley Temple, Jane Withers or another child star. I have heard hundreds of people, inside and outside theaters, say, "How I'd love to hug that youngster!" referring to this or that movie kid. Had I straightway asked them which star they would choose to work with were opportunity to present itself, 90 per cent would have named favored child players.

JANE WITHERS.

But seasoned actors draw away from screen children like 1905 horses shied from that new and terrifying apparition called automobile. Wise actors know that kiddies are scene stealers; that when a bright-eyed youngster is on the screen, older players may as well be in the kitchen behind the stove as far as audiences are concerned. Even an ordinary child is a cinch to hog attention, so you may imagine the heart-sink that comes to an adult star when he receives his script and finds himself teamed for scene after scene with Deanna Durbin or Freddie Bartholomew.

Guy Kibbee had a sequence with Shirley Temple ("Capt. January") in which she had to cry and he had to console her. To test his theory that nobdy would be watching him, Kibbee winked broadly in four of the eight scenes. In the studio projection and cutting rooms not one of a technical crew of 14 men and women caught the wink, so engrossed were they in Shirley.

Hollywood is laughing at the antics of Bert Wheeler and Bob Woolsey at Palm Springs. Bert bought a hotel at the desert resort and took over its management between pictures. Woolsey, with a house of his own at the Springs, closed it and moved into one of Wheeler's bungalows, to become the world's worst hotel guest and bedevil the life out of his screen partner. Throughout the night, Bob telephoned "Manager" Wheeler with outlandish complaints, such as "Hey! I ordered ice water and they brought me water with ice in it!" and "What's wrong with the hot water in this hotel? It burns my hand!"

Bert got even next morning. When When Woolsey's breakfast was served, the soft-boiled eggs were in a sugar bowl, the coffee was in a catsup bottle, the toast was tied with pink ribbons and the sausages were strung on a piece of steel wire. And his revenge sweetened when Bob, after a few days, decided to return to his house.

Wheeler vows, by the way, that his partner is the luckiest man alive. He made this remark after receiving news that Bob had turned a neat $100,000 profit in the stock market. "To prove to you how lucky he is," Bert said, "last spring, he and I were eating watermelon in his back yard, and we spit the seeds over the fence. three months later I was there and what do you think? Those seeds had taken root, and Bob had eight of the biggest watermelons I've ever seen!"

Tom Brown rolled to a stop in front of my place this morning in a swanky imported limousine. I poked a head out of a window to volunteer the opinion that he looked as if his oil well had just come in. "Naaahh," returned Tom, "I borrowed this crate to drive around the block and make myself feel important."

J. EDGAR HOOVER revealed this last week . . . Alvin Karpis, who was last year's public enemy No. 1, loved nothing more than to fish. His dream was to accumulate enough money to retire to a Southern seashore resort and indulge his love of fishing for the rest of his days . . . After perpetrating a series of heinous crimes, Karpis went South with his loot and spent every day fishing—before his arrest . . . There he discovered that he could have earned all the money he ever needed—from fishing.

THE PRODUCERS of the forthcoming "Babes in Arms" were anxious to secure fresh, young, new talent . . . One of the youngsters they signed is Wynne Murray, 16—who was directed to go to the photographer's and pose for the necessary photos . . . "Before I take these pictures," the cameraman instructed, "please take off that rouge from your face. It clashes with the lights" . . . The hale youngster touched her cheeks wonderingly and answered: "What rouge?"

THE SPORTING sector of Miami Beach still is arguing over the determination of this wager: Lou Holtz and Ken Kling, neither of whom ever played golf before, wagered that each could outdrive the other on the first tee . . . Kling teed off and hit the ball. It left the ground, hit a palm tree 30 feet away and rebounded—landing three feet behind the tee . . . Holtz then teed off, swung his club—and missed.

FOUR OF US played pocket billiards at Jack and Charlie's the other night . . . Robert Jackson, the Brain Truster, won for his team by running off eight balls . . . John O'Hara, the novelist, was on the losing team—and waited for his partner to make the sportsmanlike gesture. When it was not forthcoming O'Hara stepped up to Jackson and said: "Mr. Jackson, let me be the second to congratulate you!"

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress presents the Coolidge Quartet (William Kroll, Nikolai Berezovski, Nicolas Moldaven and Victor Gottlieb) in the chamber music auditorium Tuesday afternoon. Program: Quartet in A, Op. 18, No. 5 (Beethoven), Quartet in F minor (Pierre Vachon), Quartet No. 6 in B flat, Op. 19 (Sergei Taneiev).

Playing with a felicitous spirit and a suppleness that lent itself to the styles of the composers on the program, the Coolidge Quartet pleased a large audience yesterday afternoon at the seventh of its concerts in the current series. There was no time when the musicians did not seem to have their minds imbued with the tonal poetry which they were reading. It was one of those fortunate days when the mood meets the occasion.

Perhaps the mood was determined by the first work on the program, Beethoven's quartet in A from Opus 18, which radiates such a glow of creative vitality, such a sense of abundant life. Seldom did Beethoven ever again capture the unclouded happiness that makes this quartet a tissue of light. It has the animation of joy untinged by a shadow of regret over lost opportunities or of dubiety about the future. It knows not the passage of time, but remains in a moment that is eternally the present.

One would like to know on what forgotten shelf William Kroll found the F minor quartet of Pierre Vachon, a composer whom I have never encountered on a program. Vachon lived from 1731 to 1802, and wrote music undeserving of oblivion, if this quartet is a fair example of his output. Yet his scores are as unknown today as the poetry, tales and dramas of his contemporary, Francois de Baculard d'Arnaud.

The quartet is not mere pattern-making of a pedantic kind or an essay in formal design, but music of a charming quality, fresh, vivacious and engaging. Melodious, graceful and imaginative, it suggests a programmatic narrative, and vaguely reminds one of the fairy tales of Hans Christian Andersen. If the music is a true projection of the composer's character, Vachon was a man worth knowing for his kindliness, amiability and wit.

Sergei Taneiev, whose B flat quartet closed the concert, was for the greater part of his life a professor in the Moska Conservatory, but his music does not smell of midnight oil. It is robust and virile, redolent of the steppe and the birch forest.

New York, March 9 (AP).—Lightning flashed, snow fell and thunder rolled over Manhattan—all at the same time today.

The brief electrical display high-spotted a day of variety, including intermittent rain, sunshine and chilling wind gusts.

Contract Bridge

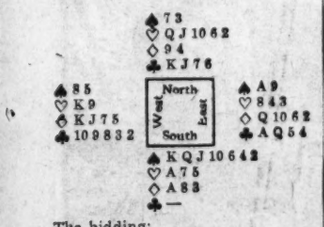

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Rigid Control.

Plays and problems which involve timing are the most difficult to the average bridge player. It must be confessed, indeed, that even experts go astray in this particular department of the game.

Consider declarer's dilemma in today's hand. The crux was to maintain rigid control while establishing a suit for vital discards.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
3 ♠	Pass	3 N T	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened the ten of clubs; dummy covered with the Jack, East with the Queen, and declarer ruffed.

Declarer counted four likely losers in his hand—the Ace of trumps, one heart, and two diamonds. Dummy's doubleton diamond offered the possibility of a ruff, but this was negated by the fact that, if a ruff were attempted in the usual manner of leading out the Ace and another diamond, the defenders could scotch the plan very easily by taking out dummy's trumps. One of them would still hold the heart King and, unless a miracle happened and it dropped singleton under the Ace, they could collect a second diamond trick whenever they took the lead with the heart King.

The problem, therefore, was how to control the diamond suit while establishing dummy's hearts for discarding purposes. Since dummy was entryless, heart establishment could not succeed unless declarer were fortunate enough to find one of the defenders with either the blank King or the King singly guarded. If it were doubly guarded, the holder would merely hold up until the third round.

No attempt to get out trumps in order to safeguard the hearts, if and when established, would be futile. The defenders would merely refuse to win the first trump lead. If declarer then went about heart establishment, West would win and shift to a low diamond. If declarer won this lead, defenders, when they got in with the spade Ace, would be able to cash two diamond tricks. If declarer allowed East's Queen to hold, a third round of hearts would give West a heart ruff.

Finally, declarer saw the light, and led a low diamond from his Ace. Now it was the defenders who were "on the spot." East won, but could make no play to save himself. The Ace and another spade would return the control to declarer, and he could set up dummy's hearts in peace. A diamond return would allow a third diamond ruff in dummy; a heart return, to be won by South's Ace, would permit the same thing.

Thus, the simple play of retaining the Aces as control cards won the contract for the declarer.

Special Doings At the Mayfair On 2d Birthday

Downtown Nightspot Has Gala Program for Anniversary.

This is the gala day at the Mayfair Cafe of All Nations: the second anniversary of this downtown rendezvous with Manager Jimmy Byrd personally supervising every move.

And this is the day that Leo Lisee and Jack Campbell, the Mayfair's perennial comedy team, have been pointing for, with the aid of Evans and Diane, strolling entertainers, and Lady Anez, who finds things of rare interest in her crystal. One of the little things that will set this birthday anniversary off from other days at the Mayfair will be Jimmy Byrd's wine-on-the house policy for luncheon.

And flowers for everyone.

Francis Woods and Billy Bray, now appearing at the Shoreham, are an example of pupil and instructor making a team of it and becoming unusually successful. Helen Keller and her teacher brought happiness and success to one another and Billy Bray (who was an instructor in rhythmic gestures for the deaf) and his pupil, Miss Woods, have made a distinct impression wherever they've appeared.

It's pep and pulchritude at the Raleigh's Pall Mall room this week—just another way of saying Kirk and Nadine, the dance-duo. High spot of their offering is a clever routine to the torrid tune, "St. Louis Blues."

The Hi-Hat management, up thar at the Ambassador, has decided to dedicate each Thursday to recipes. Yessir, the customers ask so frequently for the Hi-Hat's cocktail recipes that they plan to deck out a bartender in white jacket and all and set him up before the mike to describe each and all drinks served. And they're all prewar barkeeps, too.

With one exception, its a brand-new show at the Lotus. That one exception is Joe Wong, the Chinese, whose cleverness and sense of humor made a distinct hit last week. The Elton trio, featuring a comedy act; an unusual rhythm number and a little magic all blend into the new week's floor attraction. Background by the Florenz D'Lovelies—ensemble ladies, to you.

Al Spieldock did a bit of drum stick stuff on the dinner plates of the customers at the Madrillon one night this week. It was a grand novelty until several plates broke under the drumming. That ended the idea. Local musicians swamped the Madrillon last Sunday night for a real old-fashioned jam session. And night before last a frisky guest bathed Helen, the Madrillon's little songstress, with the contents of a syphon bottle. Heigh-ho, such goings-on.

While in Mexico last summer, Porti Portar, interpreter of Spanish and Mexican dances on view at the Carlton's El Patio, watched four native women from day to day as they made the colorful costume she uses in her "National Dance" number. Each sequin was sewed on by hand; the dress required three weeks' work. It weighs 12 pounds with its sequin-encrusted design of snakes, birds, foliage and flowers. Tango music by Sande Williams. Supper dancing from 10.

Dick Richards, the smiling host of Boulevard Farms, announces that the Wednesday night prize waltz contest and the Friday night barn dances are more than successful. The last two nights patrons have been turned away. And that always breaks the heart of the management more than those turned away.

This new show at the Russian Troika is as colorful and complete as you could wish for. It's the Apache number, employing every person in the company for its execution. Nicolina and Lolik open the performance (they're ladies of the evening, tsk! tsk!) taking seats in a Paris cafe. Others of the cast enter; there is a card game, a fight, the King of Apaches enters, more fighting, a dance, a stabbing and the police. What more could you ask for?

Ever hear music in five-four time? No? Just drop in at La Paree and have some of it served up a la Clifton and Woods. The reason is a smart bolero which requires this unusual rhythm. The orchestra is a little groggy after the first show of the day. This week's show is called "Komedy Kapers," complimenting Donald Douglas, emmceeing comedian, and his assistant, Jean Harlan.

Bock Beer time is here again. Brinkley's, the southeast gathering spot, has it.

Auditorium Commission Will Organize Soon

The newly appointed Capital Auditorium Commission will hold an organization meeting within a few days and map a plan for making a study of sites, building costs, and the like, Senator Connally Democrat), Texas, said yesterday following his return to Washington.

Connally said he will confer with Secretary Ickes, another member of the commission, before calling a meeting. Other members are Chairman Lanham of the House Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and the ranking minority members of the Senate and House committees.

Sadler Is Nominated For Rear Admiralcy

Capt. Frank H. Sadler, U. S. Navy, yesterday was nominated by President Roosevelt for promotion to Rear Admiral. He was selected in December, 1935, for promotion, contingent upon vacancies.

A native of Newbern, Ala., Capt. Sadler now is commander of Destroyer Division Six of the Scouting Force. The cruiser U. S. S. Louisville is his flagship. Previous to his present assignment he was a student of the Naval War College advanced course. He entered the Naval Academy in 1899.

Court Aide Retirement Urged in House Bill

A bill to extend the retirement act privileges to employes of the United States District courts and the courts of the District of Columbia was introduced in the House yesterday by Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee, upon request.

The measure, prepared by a clerk in one of the local courts, states that the retirement act benefits may be obtained by clerks, secretaries, law clerks, messengers, librarians, and others of the court system.

New York, March 9 (AP).—Theft of $15,000 in jewelry from Mrs. Lucy Wright, of Dallas, Tex., sister of Justice Alfred H. Townley, of the appellate division of New York, was reported today by detectives.

On the Air Today

The ladies are to foregather tonight to talk over the "Woman's Place in Radio." Of course, to be facetious, it might be said there isn't much place for the ladies in radio. But that is an exaggeration, as we all know. Tonight's discussuion will be the panel type, arranged by Alice Keith, director of the National Academy of Broadcasting, in conjunction with the King-Smith Radio Workshop.

Scheduled to speak are Dorothy Stuart Schott, "Aunt Sue" of the "Aunt Sue and Polly" series heard for many years in Washington; Mrs. Edgar Merrit, radio chairman of the National Federation of Women's Clubs and member of the National Women's Radio committee; Helen Stewart, radio department, Kaufman Advertising Agency; Mary Mason, of the WRC Woman's Forum; Grace Breiner Bradley, specialist in microphone technique for the singing voice, and Hester Walker Beall, who does air-poetry programs.

Miss Keith believes that women, although greatly interested in the quality of programs received in the home, have not lent their names and energies to the various committees, organizations and commissions which have been attempting to guide the course of radio in America.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

For Five Years Girl Has Loved Boy Who Sometimes Calls But Never Takes Her Any Place; Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have known a certain boy for about five years. We have been good friends and have never had an argument. Although he has gone out with other girls he always comes back to me. As he says, I'm his pal and he always turns to me in time of trouble. He is very moody and sometimes I don't see him for months. But in the end he always comes back.

* * * *

I'm very much in love with him and have shown my feelings many times, therefore I believe he must know it. When we go out together he shows affection for me and gives me every encouragement and right to believe he cares. But in spite of this he said if ever I got serious he would stop seeing me. I went with him steady last summer. He was unable to take me places as he makes a small salary, and most of his money went to his family. Yet when he could afford to take anyone out he took some other girl.

* * * *

What am I to do? I dearly love him and I know he cares for me. At least, he once said he did. He is the type who would not say he cared unless he really meant it. But he also said he didn't want to get serious as he doesn't mean to marry for years yet. Yet we have often discussed marriage and related subjects.

One day recently he called for me but I wasn't home at the time. He came back later in the evening but didn't stay, as someone was waiting for him in his car. I asked him to introduce his friend. He refused. It was then I saw the person in the car was a girl. I did not question him and he said he'd see me soon.

* * * *

I saw him three weeks ago. I was returning from downtown and he offered to drive me home. Naturally I accepted. On the way he didn't say a word. He was very moody and had an angry expression on his face. He told me not to pay any attention, as he often gets such moody spells. I haven't seen him since. And I can't understand why he treats me like this. We have always been the best of friends and I have done nothing to offend him, yet I haven't seen him since.

* * * *

He always came to see me in the summer of 1936 and I always stayed home with him or we went for a walk because, as I said before, he couldn't afford to take me places. He told me I was a "swell pal" and that no other girl would ever have stuck by a boy who had no money. And yet when he took other girls places he'd tell me all about his good times although I never asked him.

PUZZLED.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR PUZZLED: In the light of his past actions, I see no reason for attaching any special significance to the boy's most recent spell of indifference. You say you have known him for five years and during that period there have been times when you haven't seen him for months. Yet he always turned up again eventually, as dependent ... ever upon your sympathy, understanding and love.

* * * *

The boy may be very fond of you. He may realize you are one of the best friends he could possibly find, but I am sure he is not in love with you. And that may be largely your fault, through placing so small a premium on your own society. It is well enough to make reasonable concessions to a boy's slim purse, through entertaining him at home and going for walks, if you know he cannot afford to take you places, yet would take you and you only if he could; but it is carrying generosity to foolish excess to tolerate such niggardly treatment when you know he is spending what money he has on other girls. You have acted like a doormat and he has responded by treating you as one.

* * * *

His moodiness can probably be explained on the ground that he doesn't find other girls as meekly and gratefully and cheaply accessible as you. When he comes to you for sympathy and entertainment that costs nothing he is probably suffering from hurt feelings at some other girl's hands. Maybe some other boy took his girl away; maybe the girl on whom he had been spending his petty cash passed him up for a better spender. He probably knows you love him, and, while he doesn't love you, nevertheless he is willing to hang around long enough to have his self-confidence restored, and his hurt feelings assuaged by your undemanding devotion. And it may be the very undemanding quality of your devotion which renders it uninteresting to him. It is human nature not to evaluate very highly that which we can get for nothing.

* * * *

The thing to do is to avoid him. If he comes unannounced to your home, have some member of the family tell him you are out. If he telephones and asks if you will be home, tell him you're sorry but you've made plans for the evening. If he demands to know why you aren't seeing him any more, tell him frankly you are tired of this one-sided arrangement; that you are bored with these talks and walks and rides which lead to nowhere; that you are young and wish to go places and meet people and do things; and that if he won't take you, you expect to keep on looking until you find someone who will. Tell him when you are older and settled down maybe you will enjoy having men friends who just drop in sporadically to pass the time of day; but just now you prefer boy friends you can depend on from day to day or week to week to show you some sort of good time.

* * * *

If he says, "But I thought you loved me and understood—," say, "Yes, I did love you once; but even love can starve to death. And I can't say you have ever given my love for you any encouragement to go on. It seems to be dead now, and I've decided to bury it." There is no other way of handling the situation. If he cares for you more than he realizes, such an attitude will bring him to his senses. If he doesn't care, you ought to know it, as you cannot afford to waste your youth on a false hope.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Black Lace—Feminine and Chic

The importance of lace and net is emphasized in the lovely creation above, designed by Madame Ginette, of New York and Paris, for the International Beauty and Fashion Show being held in New York this week. Bands of Alencon lace on net fashions the gown, characterized by a square front decolletage, backless, with huge, voluminous sleeves of the net. Note the fullness of the skirt in back, starting at the hips—the waistline and hipline being fitted to the figure. The current trend for femininity and elegance is ideally expressed in this striking black gown, equally appropriate for the young woman and the matron.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Glandular Products.

My grandfather was a practicing physician who operated a drug store in a city on the banks of the Ohio river. I remember it as a boy and mostly as a place of roots and herbs, tinctures and fluid extracts. He dispensed mostly what were called Galenicals—vegetable drugs. The crude drugs he probably purchased from such wholesale firms as Squibb, Eli Lilly, Parke Davis, John A. Wyeth, and their chief business was to obtain such products from foreign parts.

It is curious to think that my grandfather never sold a package of serum, or vaccine. The nearest he came to that was smallpox vaccine lymph. He probably never sold such a thing as an antiseptic; in his day the idea of infection was still a theory—the "germ theory." Although undoubtedly he did sell healing applications for cuts and bruises, such as witch hazel, their main virtue being their antiseptic properties.

And the drug firms with which he dealt had no larger scope. They could operate their plants in a single small building, with the employment of a capable botanical pharmacist and a chemist.

Those Days Are Gone.

But those days are all over. A "pharmaceutical manufacturer" no longer deals alone with pharmaceuticals. He must have not only a drug compounding factory, but a farm where he keeps horses, rabbits, heifers, to manufacture serums and vaccines. He has a large plant for the reception of animal organs — endocrines, etc. — from packing houses to turn into organ extracts. He employs botanists, analytic chemists, pharmacists, biologists, bacteriologists and mineralogists.

The very newest kind of preparations are the organ or gland products, and for these the modern pharmaceutical manufacturers must be especially prepared.

If you were to go into one of the plants—for in spite of the highly technical and scientific nature of the work, they are nevertheless just plants—where organ extracts are being prepared, you would start at the storage room of the crude product. This is a refrigerated chamber kept at a temperature of zero. All around are boxes and barrels of frozen glands. They have been removed from the animal and immediately frozen. If kept that way, they lose none of their potency when restored to ordinary temperatures just before extraction.

Dissection Necessary.

With some of the organs a certain amount of dissection is necessary. This is done by hand by a trained corps of people. No machine could do it, and although the dissectors are not trained anatomists, no anatomist could separate the anterior from the posterior pituitary gland with any more neatness and dispatch than these. From the posterior pituitary is made pituitrin, used in certain complications of childbirth and in surgical shock. The anterior pituitary provides several separate substances—the growth hormone, and the gonad stimulating hormone being the most used. Adrenals, ovaries, parathyroids, are dissected in the same way to procure the proper parts.

The organ extracts made on the largest scale are insulin for diabetes and liver extract for anemia; all the others fall away behind these in usefulness. They are used daily by many thousands of people over the world. Next come thyroid extract and adrenal medulla, the latter being used under the names of epinephrine or adrenalin more as a drug in surgical complications, asthma, etc., than as an organ extract.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth McRae Boykin.

JENNY got an idea for her living room from her bright little Tyrolean vest-sweater. You see, Jenny and Jim got married on imagination and set up housekeeping on their nerve. But what a gay domicile it's turned out to be, complete with all the happiness in the world.

Their families contributed odd bits of discarded furniture and they bought some inexpensive unpainted pieces to fill in. Their new home is an attic floor rented for quite a moderate price, providing they do the redecorations which they are, and having the most fun about it. They've papered the walls and ceiling in an all over sprigged pattern with little flowers as near like those embroidered on Jenny's sweater as she could find. Then, because they couldn't afford floor coverings and the floors were pretty bad, they painted the floors very bright vermillion, of all things. The woodwork is vermillion, too. Some of the furniture is painted in Tyrolean green and some in yellow, and the studio couch cover and cushions are Tyrolean green finished with a cute little red and white braid dress trimming. And the curtains are yellow and starched with the same braid for trimming.

The room is as bright as the peasant pottery that Jenny has on the shelves of her painted cupboard. And as much fun as a peasant dance. Jenny is going to make some oval braided rugs for the floor as soon as she can, and, of course, as they get to it, they will collect better pieces of furniture that will go in the house they hope to have some day. But in the mean time, they're having a swell time if anybody happens to ask.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, March 9.

A THEATRICAL EVENT of much importance took place on Broadway a few nights ago. It received considerable publicity, but not as much as I feel it deserves. It was the stage debut of Mary MacArthur.

ALICE HUGHES.

The name means nothing in particular? Or even in general? Then it was the first appearance on any platform of the daughter of Helen Hayes, that glorious little woman of the theater, and Charles MacArthur, her clever playwright husband. If ever the fates of the play-world show bright upon a child, they should shed their rays upon little Mary.

The occasion of Mary's debut (one night only) was a memory and a tradition. It was on her own seventh birthday that Helen had first stepped on a stage—and I think it was that of the Columbia Theater in Washington. At any rate, little Helen Hayes Brown began her own career as a trouper on that day and at that age—so young Mary was permitted to "walk on" during the final scene of her mother's current triumph, "Victoria Regina." What must have been little Helen's thoughts as she saw her own chick step on the stage with her, where she sat swaddled up as old Queen Vic of pious memory!

Some of the men of the theater made an event of it. Alec Woollcott sent a wire and Manager Gilbert Miller a jar of cookies. But Director Bill Howard, if reports be true, topped them all. He sent little Mary a telegram offering her the role of "Scarlett" in "Gone With the Wind!"

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Our set was drenched with tears all last week! Dear Noel Coward was abed with laryngitis, and with his one-act play off the boards, we were hard put to it to spend a smart evening in town! (Oh, yes, we were!)

* * * *

Sometimes it's tough when theaters come in chains. We have such huge ones in New York. One of them here, numbering 38 neighborhood houses, has been having a little trouble—so there's a uniformed cop on duty in each of its houses! . . .

* * * *

Well, they've been at it again. Now it's the lovely Frances Langford, of radio and screen, who has the prettiest figure in the amusement business. This on the solemn vote of our Empire Mannequin School, which teaches girls how to wear sables with an air. The best Marlene Dietrich, Ginger Rogers and Myrna Loy could get was an honorable mention. But the girls will bear up, no doubt . . . Incidentally, Mrs. C. Van V. Smillie, head of the school, says this is the way for a girl to walk—"chest high, not out; stomach up, not in, and shoulders straight." Sounds like Kipling's "If," except that it would end "You'll be a mannequin, my daughter!" . . .

* * * *

Estelle Hamburger, executive of a big shop here, tells me that it will soon be tag day for all merchandise; that more of us all the time are demanding to know all about the material that goes into the things we buy. And not a bad idea! . . . A lot of wan shop-hounds and style-sharks are getting home from Europe these days. The girls say the crossings are the worst they've ever made—and that's suffering! . . .

* * * *

June Hamilton Rhodes, that most vivid of high-powered publicists, has just darted off to Hollywood on behalf of her three pet items—velvet, orchids, jewelry. Never still a minute, that June! . . .

* * * *

Everybody in the business world tries to cash in on the Simpson romance. Now it's a Paris glove firm, with the swell phrase, "The best-gloved woman in the World!"

* * * *

This is a brand-new one on me—a jeweled anklet sewed right on a stocking, saving wear and tear on hosiery for those ladies who go in for anklets. The one I saw was made of silk elastic trimmed with a rhinestone bow, and the stocking was in the shade called "desert sun." Naturally, only one to a pair! Let's be genteel!

Cabbage in New Role As Lenten Dinner Dish

Recipes Submitted in Post's Contest Show Wide Use of This Vegetable as Meat Substitute; May Be Combined With Crab.

By Rebekah Blake.

WOMEN in and around Washington evidently realize the value of cabbage in the diet and its economic value. Most of the recipes submitted in the Cabbage Recipe Contest were for using it as a vegetable course. Many others used cabbage in a salad and some combined it with meat.

Mrs. Eleanor B. Comstock, 4000 Cathedral avenue, Washington, was awarded the first prize, $3, for her recipe for cabbage and crab casserole.

Casserole of cabbage, tomatoes and rice, a recipe sent in by Mrs. Stuart Bennett, 808 Bentalour street, Baltimore, Md., won the second prize, $2. Mrs. Nelle Holmes, 2609 Third street northeast, received the first $1 prize for her recipe for German sauerkraut with dumplings, and Mrs. Nellie B. Meyer, 1501 Sixteenth street northwest, won the fourth prize, $1, for crowned cabbage with golden scepters. Mrs. J. L. Schaeffer, 208 Massachusetts avenue northeast, Washington, won the fifth prize, also $1, for her recipe for spring salad sandwich.

Here is Mrs. Comstock's recipe:

Cabbage and Crab Casserole.

1 pint of milk
3 level tablespoons flour
3 tablespoons butter
1 small head of cabbage
1 large-size can crab meat

Chop the cabbage in fine pieces. Boil for 20 minutes in boiling salted water.

Pick over crab meat and add to cabbage

Make a rich cream sauce first sauteing a little minced onion in butter, before adding flour and milk. Add milk enough to make sauce the desired consistency for baking.

Season with salt, pepper, paprika, a dash of Worcestershire sauce, tabasco and 2 tablespoons of sherry.

Bake in casserole or individual shells, cover with crumbs, dot with butter and brown in oven.

This recipe will serve seven or eight if put in shells.

It can easily be made in the morning and is all ready to serve by just heating in the oven.

Mrs. Bennett's recipe:

Casserole of Cabbage, Tomatoes and Rice.

4 cups shredded cabbage
1 No. 2 can tomatoes
2 tablespoons salt
1 tablespoon granulated sugar
1 tablespoon minced onion
2 tablespoons melted butter
2 cups cooked white rice
½ cup soft bread crumbs
2 tablespoons grated American cheese

Cook the cabbage until tender; drain. Meanwhile, cook the tomatoes, salt, sugar, onions and 1 tablespoon of the butter for 5 minutes. Arrange the cabbage, tomatoes and rice in alternate layers in a 1½-quart casserole. Combine the crumbs with the remaining tablespoon of butter and the cheese, and sprinkle over the top of the casserole. Bake in a moderate oven of 475 F. for 45 minutes. Serves 6.

Mrs. Holmes' recipe follows:

German Sauerkraut With Dumplings.

1 medium-sized onion
3 tablespoons shortening
3 cups sauerkraut
½ cup brown sugar
3 medium-sized apples
1 pound wieners

Dice onion and saute in hot shortening in a heavy kettle until limp but not brown; add the sauerkraut, brown sugar and peeled and quartered apples. Cover and cook slowly for 15 minutes, adding water as needed. Drop the dumplings by tablespoonfuls on gently boiling mixture. Cover and cook for 12 to 15 minutes without removing the cover. Heat the weiners in boiling water for about 10 or 15 minutes. Arrange dumplings around edge of hot platter; fill center with sauerkraut mixture and place the weiners on top. Serves 6 to 8. The dumplings are made this way:

1½ cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
¾ cup milk

Sift the flour; measure and sift again with baking powder and salt. Add the milk all at once and mix only enough to moisten the flour. Follow the cooking directions given in the recipe above for German sauerkraut.

Here is Mrs. Mayer's recipe:

The Crowned Cabbage With Golden Scepter.

Parboil a head of cabbage. When tender, scoop out the center. In the center of the cabbage stuff six long, golden headed carrots (which have already been cooked to a tender, well-done stage). Pour drawn butter over the carrots. Then garnish the huge cabbage head with whole round tender-cooked onions. Place these onions around the base of the cabbage and sprinkle with paprika. In between each onion place a sprig of parsley.

Make a rich white sauce and pour this over the tops of the carrots and down into the heart of the cabbage head.

Using the remaining cabbage, which has been cut out of the center, chop fine and take the cabbage "licker" and add to chopped cabbage, season highly and serve it as a "Cabbage Cocktail" which makes a good appetizer.

Mrs. Schaffer's recipe:

Spring Salad Sandwich.

Toast white or whole wheat bread on one side, allowing two slices for each sandwich.

Place slice of cream cheese, not extending over border of bread, on untoasted side, and melt cheese under broiler until soft.

Prepare enough shredded cabbage as for coleslaw, according to number of sandwiches desired, adding finely sliced celery, green pepper, chopped pickle, minced onion, pimiento, salt and pepper. Mix with mayonnaise.

Place two or three heaping tablespoons of cabbage on top of melted cheese, cover with lettuce leaf and another slice of bread. Place a toothpick through each half of sandwich topped with an olive.

Learn to Paint Furniture

PORCH TIME soon! Let's dress up the old porch furniture in new paint to make it fresh and sparkling as spring itself.

We can borrow a gay color scheme from the garden—daffodil yellow, vibrant tulip red, soft refreshing leaf green.

The table top, alas, shows heat rings and stains from bygone lunches and dinners. So clean off the old finish down to the bare wood with a chemical paint remover. When dry, apply a prepared oil finish and rub, rub, rub. Repeat at weekly intervals for a beautiful heat-and-stain-resistant table top.

Now give chairs and lower part of table a bath of weak suds, a clear rinse and a good rubdown. Let dry 48 hours, sandpaper rough spots, dust off, start painting. A red table edge supplies bright contrast with yellow legs and a bit of red trim. Paint chairs yellow with waterproof fabric cushions in green.

If you've a glider give it a green body with red trim and red awning stripe cushions. And don't forget yellow flower boxes for the porch rail.

One under coat of flat paint and one finishing coat of enamel for furniture that's been painted before. If you have a terrace or open porch, use high-grade house paint for both coats. Then, rain or shine, your furniture will come "smilin' through."

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "How to Paint and Refinish Furniture," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. White plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

'Mother's Boy' Attitude Forces Child's Revolt

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

SAM was an only child. His mother knew nothing about boys since she, too, was an only child and so had missed the liberal education generally given by brothers.

She dressed the baby with all the exquisiteness which should have been bestowed on a girl. When her husband one day took Sam to the barber and brought him home shorn of his golden curls she was heartbroken. But Sam's hair curled naturally even when short, and he was still a picture-book child when dressed in hand-made frilled shirts and pastel colored shorts.

Then, when Sam was 6, his father decreed that he must go to school, and to school Sam went. He seemed to change over night. Within a week he had a reputation for fighting at the drop of a hat. He came home daily with his clothes torn and muddy, his nose bleeding or his face cut.

Of course the phase passed. Having proved his manhood to his own satisfaction, he eventually settled down to the behavior and appearance of the average small boy.

No boy who is worth his salt wants to be looked upon as a "mother's boy" or "soft." The prettier he is, the more he has been dressed up and pampered, the greater will be his revolt when he goes to school boys.

THE MERRY WHIRL

By Marylyn.

Hats off to Ellen Bryden for her pluck! After a spill and crack on the head that would have daunted many more experienced riders, she will be back in her place going over the jumps in the riding hall at Fort Myer this afternoon.

* * * *

Pretty Marjorie Nye walked into her home wearing her new blue and white printed frock and bonnet, which is of straw and silk, with two of her curls peeking out over her forehead. Young brother Robert gave one look and said—"Say, with those two curls sticking out from under that streamlined hat o' yours—you look just like one of the 1937 models of a car, with headlights that pop out just like those curls."

* * * *

It seemed as though half of the younger set chose the Pall Mall Room for their evening's entertainment. Nearby sat Mary Cootes—and a talkative escort—Mary in a sleek black flaring model with a daring scarlet sash, and one of the newer low V-necks. Her hat was a coy little affair of black material, the crown pointing heavenward and on the front an independent little red rose. Not two tables away was Didi Walker in a thistle-colored silk blouse with brown tweeds, the long coat of which (discarded while dancing, of course) was trimmed with lynx.

* * * *

Ruth Dieterich Kalthoff is finding what the world is like on the other side of the fence these days. After months on the radio and singing in concerts (she has a lovely soprano) she is trotting around doing her bit on the Symphony drive now going on. Saw her the other day, and she had on a black pill box hat and a gray and black tweed coat trimmed with an ascot of gray galyak.

* * * *

Mrs. Cary T. Grayson and Anne Carter-Green were talking over their luncheon table yesterday, doubtless on some new wrinkle in the Junior League. Mrs. Grayson was in black, her suit finished with a blouse of canary yellow and a cock-robin hat of black suede. Anne had on a cadet gray suit with a brown suede hat, brimless and close-fitting, trimmed with a long, sleek quill.

Glancing around at Pierre's yesterday, saw Jerry McDowell in green looking very pert and not in the least bowed down by trousseau shopping. Another pretty young person in bright green was Elizabeth Sibley, whose long-coat suit was trimmed with soft lynx, with which she wore a dark brown ribbed sweater and highlander hat of matching green.

Mrs. Wilbur Elliott, stunning blonde wife of Maj. Elliott, was having a bite to eat with a friend. She was in black, with a high-necked frock, mink-collared coat and wide-brimmed felt hat.

West Point seems attractive to Mershon Kessler these days, or so it would seem, judging from her visits to the academy on the Hudson. In fact, with her sister, Alice, she is going there this coming week-end. Another romance, perhaps?

Luncheon, Dinner Honor Philippine President

Mr. Manuel Quezon, Visiting in D. C., Is Entertained by Secretary of State Hull, Congressional Delegation and Newspapermen.

Yesterday was a busy day for Mr. Manuel Quezon, President of the Philippines, who is visiting in Washington. He was guest of honor at a luncheon given by the Secretary of State, Mr. Cordell Hull, and later in the evening members of the Congressional delegation and newspapermen who attended his inauguration last year gave him a large dinner.

Mr. Hull's luncheon was given at the Carlton Hotel, where the Secretary of State and Mrs. Hull make their home. Among the guests was the newly appointed High Commissioner of the Philippines, Mr. Paul V. McNutt, former Governor of Indiana. Mr. and Mrs. McNutt are spending a few days in Washington at the Mayflower and are accompanied by their daughter, Miss Louise McNutt. They will remain in Washington a week or ten days, and will sail April 3 from San Francisco for the Philippines.

Other guests at Mr. Hull's luncheon were Senator Key Pittman, Senator Gerald P. Nye, Representative Lloyd Thurston, Representative Leo Kocialkowski, Admiral William D. Leahy, Chief of Naval Operations; Mr. J. Butler Wright, United States Minister to Czechoslovakia, who is visiting in Washington; Maj. Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Military Adviser to the Government of the Philippine Commonwealth; Mr. Jose Yulo, Secretary of Justice of the Commonwealth, and Brig. Gen. Creed F. Cox, Chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs of the War Department.

Other Officials Present.

Several high ranking officials of the State Department were present at the luncheon, including Mr. Richard Southgate, Chief of Protocol; Dr. Stanley K. Jacobs, Chief of the Division of Philippine Affairs in the State Department.

Other guests were Mr. Benito Razon, technical assistant to the President of the Philippine Commonwealth, and Col. Donald C. McDonald, Assistant Chief, Bureau of Insular Affairs, War Department.

Several hundred Senators, Representatives and journalists who attended Mr. Quezon's inauguration held a reunion last evening at the dinner, which was given at the Mayflower.

Receiving Line Listed.

In the receiving line were President Quezon, Mr. Quintin Paredes, resident Commissioner of the Philippines, and former Senator Harry B. Hawes, who directed the Congressional trip to Manila and acted as official host last evening. The guests were received in the Pan American room of the Mayflower and dined in the Chinese room, which was decorated with the American flag, the Philippine flag and the flag of the Philippine President. In addition to the head table, there were ten small tables decorated with vases of spring flowers in pastel shades.

Mrs. Hawes is in New York for a week or ten days, so was unable to be present last evening, although Mrs. Henderson S. Dunn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hawes, was among the guests. She is the former Miss Peyton Hawes and made the trip to Manila with her family, bringing back an unusual collection of Philippine birds.

Among the guests were the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, Senator and Mrs. Henry F. Ashurst, Senator and Mrs. William King, Senator and Mrs. Warren Austin, Senator Tom Connally, Representative and Mrs. Henry Ellenbogen, Representative and Mrs. Bertrand Snell, Mr. and Mrs. Emil J. Senator Henry F. Ashurst was toastmaster at the dinner and President Quezon made a speech following the dinner.

18 Participate As Riding Club Chases Gray Fox

Mrs. Hundt Acts as M. F. H.; Mr. Owen Is the Whipper-in.

Members of the Riding and Hunt Club Hounds denned a gray fox yesterday afternoon after a swift run of an hour and a half.

The field of about 18 members started from Bradley Farms, on the River Road, near Potomac, Md., where the hounds scented a fox at the start. The chase led through the woods and the quarry was finally denned in Owens woods.

Mrs. L. T. Hundt acted as master of fox hounds in the absence of Dr. Fred Sanderson, who is ill. Whipper-in was Mr. Claude Owen.

Others riding were Mrs. Roland Riddick, Mrs. Edward R. Gookin, Miss Frances Cox, Mr. George Walker, Mr. John Paulding Brown, Dr. Joseph Horgan, Commander W. J. Lee and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carrico.

The hunt will meet again tomorrow and Saturday, starting from Normandy Farms. It will meet again Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday of the next two weeks. The last hunt, which falls on March 27, will be followed by the hunter trials on April 10, to be held at Bradley Farms.

Griffith, Newsom Claim Triumph as Hurler Signs Contract

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 8.

If Messrs Bucky Harris and Clark Griffith were to break down and confess the situation at the Washington training camp here, they would admit that they deem only two of the dozen rookies with the Nats ready for the big leagues. The others are all nice boys, kind to their mothers and sound of wind and limb, but fall shy of major league talents.

POVICH.

The two who are causing Griffith and Harris to play around with the idea that they have come up with something are Outfielder Freddie Sington and Pitcher Dick Lanahan. If both—or either—justify the hopes of the Nats' bosses, then they will be repaid for their outlay of time and expense.

The other rookies in camp here are hardly an impressive lot. Of the young catchers, Jake Early is easily the most impressive, but Harris freely admits that Early is a year or two away from the majors. Chattanooga will be his destination, barring a miraculous improvement that will cause Harris to bring him North as a reserve backstop.

If Outfielder Beverly Ferrell is with the team when the season starts, Harris will be agreeably surprised. Young Ferrell, who came up from the Georgia-Florida class D league, is with the Nats only because he was claimed in the name of the Washington club and, according to a ruling by Judge Landis, must get a tryout with the Nats. But he is ticketed for Chattanooga.

• • • •

Without yet appraising the talents of Wright, Harris is in no mood to consider him a regular off his 1936 record with Chattanooga, where he batted .317. He will be carried with the team, no doubt, because it is Harris' policy to carry five outfielders, but a reserve role at best appears to be Wright's lot.

• • • •

Of the other rookie pitchers, except Lanahan, Harris expects little. Such as Harry Kelley, Bill Phebus and Frank Petticolas do not figure in his 1937 plans and are destined for one of the Nats' farms, while Harris prefers to deal out one more chance to the ne'er-do-well veterans Ed Linke and Monte Weaver, who have the asset of knowing how to pitch.

• • • •

In the infield, the door is closed to a rookie who apparently does merit serious consideration. But Jim Wasdell finds athwart his path to the first base job the imposing figure of Joe Kuhel, the Nats' greatest run-producer and peerless fielder. Wasdell may be carried for pinch-hitting duties, but that is the extent of Harris' reliance on him.

• • • •

In contrast to the dull prospects of the other rookies, Sington and Lanahan have set Harris to bubbling over their bright possibilities. Big Sington revealed in the last month of the 1936 season when he came up with the Nats that he is no longer the lumbering outfielder of 1936. His apprenticeship in the minors has contributed a new smoothness to his outfield play and there never was a doubt that he could hit big league pitching.

• • • •

Sington's performance last season when he averaged one run driven in per game, has caused Harris to enthuse to the point where he is considering placing the lusty-swinging fellow in the clean-up role in the batting order. Harris is staking his reputation as a connoisseur of baseball flesh on the contingency of Sington making the grade.

• • • •

Lanahan, who for two seasons has been causing the Washington baseball writers to withhold that exciting line, "Local Boy Makes Good," will give them license to use it next season or Mr. Harris will be a sadly disillusioned manager.

• • • •

Without the usual qualifications, Harris visions Lanahan as a pitching sensation with the Nats. Privately, he will admit that Lanahan has perhaps more natural talent that any other pitcher on the Washington staff and needs only to keep his arm in shape to blossom as the rookie sensation of the league.

Harris bases his optimism not only on Lanahan's record with Chattanooga last year where the former Eastern High School lefthander won 13 games and lost 1 before he developed a sore arm, but on the beauty of the lad's delivery and phenomenal control—for a lefthander.

• • • •

The Nats' manager is still burning at the recollection of how Lanahan was misused and overworked by the Chattanooga managers last year when they pitched the Washington boy in nine straight ball games. The wonder is, according to Harris, that Lanahan escaped the ordeal with only a transient soreness in his arm.

Air, Pumped Into Knee, Aid for Grid Injury

New Orleans, March 9 (AP).—Plain ordinary air, the kind pumped into footballs, is now being used in the treatment of "football knee," an ailment peculiar to athletes.

Dr. H. Theodore Simon, of Louisiana State University Medical Center, told how it was first used on Abe Mickal, former backfield grid star at L. S. U.

He said air pumped through a hollow needle under the kneecap produced a separation which made it possible to take an X-ray picture with the necessary contrasts to show the cause of the trouble.

Steffen Dies; Was Mentor At Carnegie

Teams of Chicago All-American Twice Beat Notre Dame.

Chicago, March 9 (AP).—Judge Walter P. Steffen, 50, of the Superior Court and advisory football coach at Carnegie Tech, died at his home tonight. He had been in ill health several months.

He had been absent from the court bench since December 15, and had been in comparatively ill health for several years.

Judge Steffen, one of the University of Chicago's all-time football greats, coached at Carnegie Tech last fall. For several years he was a "commuting" coach, assisting in the development of Tech's teams while carrying on his court duties.

He had served as a Cook County (Chicago) circuit judge from 1923 to 1934. He used to leave Chicago in time to reach the place where Carnegie Tech was to play the next day, and made his plans just before the game.

In 1931 he annuonced he was going to resign as coach, after directing the Skibos 18 seasons, and join the "second-guessers" because the strain of football was becoming too strong.

He played football at the University of Chicago in 1906-1907-1908 under Amos Alonzo Stagg and was named on the late Walter Camp's All-America teams in his last two seasons. Steffen, with the late Walter Eckersall, whom he succeeded as Maroon quarterback, and Paul Russell, still rank as three of Chicago's greatest backs.

Two victories over Notre Dame were the high spots of Steffen's career at Carnegie Tech. In 1926 while the late Knute Rockne sat in Soldier Field watching Army and Navy play their thrilling 21-to-21 tie, a well favored Notre Dame went to Pittsburgh and took a stunning 10-to-0 beating. Two seasons later, one of Carnegie's greatest elevens went to South Bend to defeat the Irish, 27 to 7. The defeat wrecked a highly prized Notre Dame tradition, for it was its first and only defeat on old Cartier Field.

During most of his career at Carnegie Tech, Steffen served on a full time basis. However, when he was elected to the bench, he received the title of advisory coach and "commuted" to and from games.

Surviving are his wife and six children.

Jean Bauer Overcomes Minneapolis Girl; Miss Dettweiler Wins.

By the Associated Press.

Belcair, Fla., March 9.—Jean Bauer, of Providence, Rhode Island, defeated Patty Berg, of Minneapolis, Minn., one up here today in the first round of match play in the annual Women's Golf Tournament.

The sensational Patty's unexpected defeat was followed immediately by elimination of the medalist, Jane Cothran, of Greenville, S. C., who fell before Mrs. Lillian K. Zech, of Chicago, 4 and 2.

Kathryn Hemphill, of Columbia, S. C., winner of three major winter tournaments, downed Virginia Guilfoil, of Syracuse, N. Y., 3 and 2.

Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, of Philadelphia, returning to the golfing wars after retiring with titles aplenty, defeated Bernice Wall, of Oshkosh, Wis., 1 up.

Dorothy Traung, of San Francisco, won over Mrs. Mark McCarry, of St. Petersburg, Fla., 3 and 2.

Helen Dettweiler, of Washington, D. C., beat Miss A. B. MacWhitney, of Deland, Fla., 5 and 4.

Goldie Bateson, of Milwaukee, Wis., downed Katherine Foster, of Clearwater, Fla., 3 and 2.

Mary F. Browne, of Cleveland, eliminated Mrs. Scott Probasco, of Chattanooga, Tenn., 6 and 5.

22,000 Pin Stars Open Play Today

4 Teams From District, Maryland to Compete in Tourney.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 9.—The American Bowling Congress, greatest of all sporting extravaganzas from a competitive standpoint, opens an eight-week stand in New York tomorrow night when the vanguard of 22,000 ten-pinners takes to the 28 especially constructed alleys at the 212th Field Artillery Armory.

Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia will roll the first ball to inaugurate the largest and longest tournament in the 37-year-old history of the A. B. C.

All records have been broken for total contestants, entry fees and prizes. The attendance mark of 55,494, made at Syracuse two years ago, is expected to be smashed many times over.

The official entry shows 4,016 five-man teams, 5,881 doubles and 11,773 singles from 31 States and 3 Canadian provinces. New York and New Jersey have the majority of the teams with 2,069 and 732, respectively.

The remainder of the team entries is distributed as follows: Pennsylvania, 409; Ohio, 301; Illinois, 130; Michigan, 127; Indiana, 78; Wisconsin, 52; Connecticut, 22; Mississippi, 21; West Virginia, 16; Kentucky, 11; Canada, 8; Texas, Nebraska, Iowa and Delaware, 5; Washington and Maryland, 4; Alabama, California, Colorado, Massachusetts, Minnesota, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma and Utah, 2; Florida, Vermont and Virginia, 1.

The Keglers, including all defending champions, will shoot at the following all-time records:

Two-man team—1,405 made by Gil Zunker (750) and Frank Benkovic (655), Milwaukee, 1933.

No Two-Time Champions.

Individual—774, made by Larry Shotwell, Covington, Ky., 1930.

All-events—2,060, made by Gil Zunker, Milwaukee, 1933.

The Hi-Bru five-man team of Indianapolis, the two-man combination of Anthony Salmina and Mike Straka, of Chicago; Charley Warren, of Springfield, Ohio, in the singles, and Johnny Murphy, Indianapolis, in the all-events will defend their 1936 titles.

A. B. C. history does not augur well for the defending champions, however. No individual or team has ever repeated in the classic except in the all-events. Barney Spinella and Jimmy Smith, New York veterans, each won the all-events twice but not in succession.

New York teams, representing Pabst Blue Ribbon and the American Bowling Club, will open the competition. New Jersey teams will invade the alleys Thursday. Syracuse entries will bowl Friday and Saturday.

Max and Braddock Wanted by Berlin

New York, March 9 (U.P.).—Steel Importer Dennis Scanlon advanced another plan today for holding the heavyweight title fight between Max Schmeling, of Germany, and Champion Jimmy Braddock in Berlin next summer.

Boxing interests, however, regarded it as so much talk since Braddock's manager, Joe Gould, is against fighting in Germany for any consideration.

Scanlon said that Braddock would be guaranteed $250,000, and that the promoters could get around the German law forbidding export of currency by designating ticket money as "free marks." About four months ago Scanlon announced a plan to hold the fight in Berlin, guaranteeing Braddock's share by selling enough tickets outside Germany.

Dorothy Round to Wed Home Town Physician

London, England, March 9 (AP).—The engagement of Dorothy Round, former all-English tennis champion and international Wightman cup player, to Dr. Donald Leigh Little was announced today.

Notes From Nats' Camp

Manager Bucky Harris let his eyes rove along the generous condicated that his .317 batting average at Chattanooga was indeed, no tours of Rookie Taft Wright today in that young man's first workout with the Nats and then committed him to the tender care of Trainer Mike Martin.

"So that's Wright!" remarked Bucky as he saw a rotund figure, wide of girth and stout of legs, step up to the batter's box and whack a ball against the distant rightfield fence. "Well, 15 pounds, at least, will have to come off of that.

"From what I hear, he's too good a prospect to permit himself to get heavy like that. Down in Chattanooga, Zeb Milan swears Wright's a big leaguer and there does look to be a lot of power there, but there's a lot of flesh, too."

But Bucky was slightly in error, according to young Mr. Wright, himself.

The giant Sington who has had the benefit of a week's training at the Nat's school at nearby Sanford, was another who was solidly thumping the pitchers in his first batting practice. Of course the pitching isn't much to look at yet, but the hitters don't have their batting eyes attuned yet, either.

The lone red-head of the squad has proved to be young Beverley Ferrell, cousin of the more famous Wes and Rick Ferrell, whom the Nats drafted from Thomasville, Ga. Ferrell, in his first workout today, was revealed as the smallest of the outfielders and his reputation as an extra-base hitter has caused Harris to wonder.

The most promising of the rookies—Cathchers Jake Early and Hal Lee and Firstbaseman Jim Wasdell—will never be able to complain that they didn't get a chance to show their ability here. Harris has been keeping the veterans on the sidelines while he takes a long look at his rookie talent.

The Nats performed for the newsreels today and Shanty Hogan asked the movie men to recommend him for the role of Rhett Butler in "Gone With the Wind." "Half of me his disappeared somewhere, and I suspect it's gone with the wind," said Hogan.

The volley ball court which Assistant Trainer Frankie Baxter carefully erects each season, finally got a workout today. The Nats got a great break when they swapped managers two years ago. Bucky Harris, an old pro basketball player, is a fiend at volley ball, and Joe Cronin, if not the world's worst volley ball player, was close to the dubious honor.

The mighty man of the Nats, bearded in his Orlando den, condescends to sign a contract with Clark Griffith for a mere $12,500—and actually to pose in the same picture with him.

I'm a Jolly Good Fellow, (And Very Loyal, Also)

'Of Course,' Explains Mr. Buck Newsom (Himself), 'I Did Ask to Be Traded Once—But That —' But Read This Wringing Tale Yourself.

(Editor's note: Buck Newsom, who feels his loyalty to the Washington club and Washington fans has been questioned during his salary dispute with the Nats, has requested the opportunity to explain his position.)

By Buck Newsom.

Orlando, Fla., March 9.—Never since I put on a Washington uniform in May of 1935 have I had any great desire to pitch for any other club. During my salary argument with Mr. Griffith, I did request that he trade me, but that appeared to be the only way out of the situation.

I did not feel that the Washington team was appreciating my services, and I felt another club would pay me my true worth. I don't want to be a disstaisfied player on any team and that was the main reason I asked to be traded.

But Mr. Griffith and myself today reached satisfactory terms. Bucky Harris never had to look twice in my direction whenever he wanted a pitcher. Whether it was my turn or not, I was always willing to go in there and pitch. Check over the records of every club I've been with and you'll find I've always worked more innings than any other pitcher on the staff.

I've pitched for this Washington Club with a broken leg and a broken jaw and I thought some consideration should be shown for my willingness to work under all conditions.

If it's all right with Bucky Harris, I'll be in that box on the opening day of the season. Newsom always pitches the opening game—that's my motto. In my four seasons in the American League, I've pitched four opening games and I ain't figuring to miss the next one.

The only opening I ever lost was in 1935 against Mel Harder, of Cleveland, when I was pitching for the Browns. And Harder had to go 16 innings to beat me, 2 to 1.

Bucky Harris didn't make a bad choice when he gave me that opening assignment last year against the Yankees. You remember that game. I held the Yanks to four hits and beat Gomez, 1-0, even after I was knocked goofy by Bluege's throw that broke my jaw in the sixth inning. I even made President Roosevelt stand up and cheer.

You oughta see my new car. Coming down here from Hartsville, S. C., I passed one guy in a Packard doing 95 miles an hour. And I was in second gear, no kidding.

About 17 years from now, there'll be another Newsom carrying on in the big leagues. I mean that little guy I left at home with Mrs. Newsome. Only 16 months old but strong as a bear cub. Throws pretty good, too.

Henry Picard, Revolta Enter Golf Semifinal

By the Associated Press.

Miami, March 9.—Henry Picard and Johnny Revolta, two times winners of the international four-ball matches, advanced to the semi-finals of the current event today with a smashing 4 and 3 victory over Gene Sarazen and Jimmy Hines, whom they defeated in last year's final.

Twe up at the halfway and 27-hole points, the defenders—Picard doing the crucial shooting—snagged the thirteenth and fourteenth and halved the fifteen holes of today's second 18 to clinch the match. Picard birdied the thirteenth and his par 4 was good enough to take the next.

The remarkable rookies, Ed Oliver and Sam Snead, who had eliminated Horton Smith and Paul Runyan, 6 and 5, found themselves 2 down to Willie MacFarlane and Frank Walsh when they fired today the last putts of the 18-hole round, which rain interrupted yesterday.

They were unable to match Walsh's par 5 and posted the second 6 of the tournament. Snead was too heavy with a chip shot and Oliver over-estimated the slowness of the green with his putt.

V. M. I. Cadets Seek Return Of Ring Sport

Walker, Ex-Alabama Star, Named Grid Assistant to Pooley Hubert.

By the Associated Press.

Lexington, Va., March 9.—Virginia Military Institute today engaged James Edwin (Jimmy) Walker, of Holt, Ala., as varsity football assistant to Head Coach (Pooley) Hubert.

Walker, like Hubert and two other newly appointed assistants, Carney Leslie and Albert Elmore, is a former University of Alabama football star.

Walker played three years for the Crimson Tide at end and will be in charge of the Cadet wingmen here next fall. Coach Hubert indicated that he would also use Walker as an assistant in varsity basketball.

As captain of the Alabama team in 1935, Walker received recognition on national all-star teams. He was also outstanding as a basketball forward, gaining an All-Southeastern Conference berth for two years and making the Kellogg All-America team his senior year.

After graduation, Walker returned to Alabama to work on his master's degree and assisted Red Drew with the varsity ends. He also coached the freshman basketball team.

The V. M. I. athletic council after approving the appointment of Walker today received a petition from the corps of cadets urging that boxing be resumed as an intercollegiate sport next year.

Action on the petition was postponed until the May session of the council. Boxing schedules at the institute were cancelled early this year when a cadet received fatal injuries in a dual meet.

Bolton, Hill Stand Out in Practice, Threaten Their Rivals' Chances in Battle for Jobs; a Flash! Ossie Bluege Misses Easy Grounder.

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., March 9.—The name of Louis Norman Newsom, affixed to a regulation American League contract, brought a happy family atmosphere to the Washington training camp today after two weeks of haggling and acrimony.

After breakfast this morning, Boss Clark Griffith summoned Newsom from the hotel lobby, bade him a pleasant good morning and led the way upstairs for a renewal of their salary discussion.

Newsom emerged from a descending elevator ten minutes later with a smile that might or might not have been a phony. Anyway, he brought news that he had signed and added:

"You know that Mr. Griffith is not a bad fellow."

Thus Newsom apparently intended to leave the impression that he had won his hold-out battle with the Nats' owner, but Griffith, interrogated a few minutes later, proclaimed himself the winner.

"He signed at my terms."

So it's take your choice.

$1,500 Raise.

Another source, however, revealed that Griffith and Newsom had reached a compromise in their negotiations. Griffith is believed to have raised his offer $1,000 to $1,500, the figure which Newsom accepted, despite his pre-arrival statements in which he declared he would not sign unless his $11,000 salary of last year was increased.

Newsom joined his teammates in practice at Tinker Field during the morning for the first time. And there Bucky Harris talked earnestly with the big pitcher who figures so solidly in the Nats' 1937 plans.

"If the big galoot would settle down and pitch he'd do us a lot of good," remarked Harris later.

At the field, all signs of the pre-signing rift between Newsom and Griffith had vanished. They willingly posed, shaking hands for the photographers, both smiling broadly.

Won't Run Away.

"I'm taking back what I said about wanting to be traded," said Newsom. "The Washington club treated me right. And I'm satisfied."

Always a diligent worker in training camp, Newsom lost half of his 8 surplus pounds in the first workout and pronounced himself ready to pitch in batting practice tomorrow as a result of the pre-season workouts he has been taking at his North Carolina home.

A pair of ball players whose positions with the Nats are being seriously threatened by newcomers began to regain the esteem of Manager Bucky Harris in the long workout today at Tinker Field.

Cliff Bolton and Jess Hill both solidified themselves with a vicious batting display. Bolton, who has been vastly overshadowed by the determined Shanty Hogan in the battle for the No. 1 catching role, today may have caused Harris to revise his estimations.

Against pitching that has become steadily better, Bolton, always a rhythmic hitter and recognized as one of the most natural batters in the big leagues, truly powdered the ball. Line drives rocketed off his bat and his teammates watched in rapt admiration as Bolton strutted his talents.

Bolton, who last year encountered his worst batting season in his big league career, attributed his slump to sinus trouble, which he now says has been remedied.

Hill, who has virtually been ousted from the right field job by Big Freddie Sington, won second honors in the batting display with his consistent slugging to all fields. His performance was most comforting to Harris, who readily acknowledges

Mrs. Jacobs Claims Dead Horse for $2,500

By a Staff Correspondent.

Miami, Fla., March 9.—Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs, wife of Hirsch Jacobs, leading winning trainer for the last four years, claimed a dead horse here this afternoon.

When Character, which she had formerly owned, broke its right hind leg in the second race, the animal had to be destroyed. The claiming price of $2,500 had to be paid to its owner, H. J. Bundscho, who claimed the animal from Mrs. Jacobs during the Hialeah Park meeting. There was no insurance and Mrs. Jacobs technically claimed a dead horse.

G. W. Plans $20,000 Rink, Inter-Collegiate Ice Hockey Team

Plant Would Seat Crowd Of 10,000

Rink Would Be in New $250,000 Gym Now Being Planned.

By John R. Vosburgh.

Ice hockey, among other elaborate features, is being planned for George Washington's new gymnasium, the university announced yesterday. It was also disclosed that the school plans to enter a hockey team in intercollegiate competition.

The ice skating rink, to be constructed with a refrigerating plant costing about $20,000, would be in the main arena of the huge structure seating some 10,000 persons. Plans are far from complete, however, and official sources would not say whether the rink would be ready for use next winter or the succeeding season.

At any rate, it was clear that the university is anxious to give Washington ice-skating facilities such as have been attracting hundreds of local residents to Baltimore all winter.

The new rink would be available for a city professional team as well as a university sextet, according to some sources, with the understanding that the financial profit would help pay the expense of the building.

One Purchase Needed.

The university revealed only one real estate obstacle remains to be cleared to assure an expansive site for the building. Purchase of a tract of land from the Alley Dwelling Authority for $85,580 was announced back in November. The property is located adjacent to the school buildings in an area bounded by Twenty-second, Twenty-third, G and H streets northwest.

At that time it was said construction would begin within a year. Artists' plans for the project will not be ready for a number of weeks, however. It was also hazarded in November that the cost of the building would approach the quarter-million mark.

No intimation that an ice-producing plant was being planned had been given, however, and in announcing its plans in that direction, the university again takes the forefront in further cultivating Washington in the field of sports.

Paved Way for Redskins.

But for the huge financial success of George Washington's smashing football teams, the way would not have been paved for big league professional football here, observers are quick to point out. George Preston Marshall, owner of the Boston Redskins, decided to move his franchise here only after giving close heed to the consistent success of George Washington's dealings with big-time teams and their subsequent success.

It is the university's belief that its venture into ice hockey not only promises to be of value to the school but another step of benefit to the community. Proud of its role in bringing large-scale basketball and football to the District, George Washington believes a brilliant pioneering stroke in ice hockey will be equally worth while.

that the job is Hill's if Sington fails to make the grade.

The 300 Orlando fans who watched today's infield practice saw something that has escaped Washington fans for years: Ossie Bluege missed an easy grounder.

Jack Salveson, who is the acknowledged golf champion of the training camp, and who has since added the ping pong title, today annexed the shuffleboard championship. He also is setting the ladies' hearts aflutter. But Bucky Harris is comparatively uninterested in these items. What concerns Harris is: Can he pitch?

8 Dogs Make Bids In Field Event

Camp Lee, Va., March 9 (AP).—Eight more dogs made their bid for the coveted quail championship of the amateur field trial clubs of America under ideal running conditions here today.

Birds were plentiful, with Virginia R. Boy, a pointer owned by Dr. B. F. Driggers, of New Brunswick, N. J., taking covey-finding honors.

The morning braces were Equity, owned by Virgil Hawse, Staunton; Huff's Lazear Zig and Martez Bill, the property of Dr. E. E. Huffer, Washington, and Dr. Drigger's Boy.

The New Brunswick entry made seven covey finds and handled other birds, but followers reported his groundwork erratic. Equity found two coveys and a woodcock; Bill had three opportunities, handling two acceptably, while Zig failed.

Kenstewmy's Spookie, a setter belonging to C. L. Adams, of Hamilton, Va., and Speckle Ette, pointer, owned by L. E. Alford, Petersburg, were removed from the field before their two-hour time allotment had expired. Spookie found three coveys and pointed a rabbit, and Ette was credited with one bevy.

London to Tangle With Ingram Here

Danny London, New York featherweight, who recently scored a fifth-round knockout over Johnny Pena, conqueror of Washington's Lou Gevinson, will make his bow in a Capital ring at Turner's Arena next Monday night.

London's opponent will be Ray Ingram, a local featherweight, who has been promised a fight with Gevinson which has never materialized because Lou will not fight for another month or so. Ingram was first promised the Gevinson shot for March 1, then March 8, then March 15, and now Matt Twomey, Lou's manager, states that his fighter will not be ready to fight for an indefinite period.

St. John's Five Leaves Today for Court Play

Rousing Demonstration Planned for Team; Western Holds Final Drill for South Atlantic Event; Johnnies May Score Upset.

By John R. Vosburgh.

Eager to start firing against the pick of South Atlantic schoolboy basketball teams, Western High and St. John's polish up on their shooting today in final drills for the South Atlantic tournament opening tomorrow at Washington and Lee University. St. John's, leaving Washington at noon today, works out on the tourney court this evening.

Western's interhigh champions, seeking the title now held by John Marshall High, of Richmond, will be put through a brief practice session this afternoon at Western. The Red team, which has had a four-day rest period after its strenuous drive to the interhigh title, departs at 10 a. m. tomorrow for the scene of action. Both Western and the Johnnies are making the trip by automobile.

A rousing demonstration by the aroused St. John's student body and alumni is planned for this noon as Coach Irving (Horse) Holbrook and his crimson-clad squad start the southward trek. The St. John's band will join in.

Meanwhile, a little delving into the records discovered the fact that St. John's enjoys an excellent prospect of upsetting the champion John Marshall team they meet at 10 p. m. tomorrow. The only Washington school the Richmond team has played this year is Central, which had a 28-26 lead with 10 seconds to play at Richmond.

John Marshall tied the count, however, and won in an extra period, 35-30. Of interest to St. John's is the fact that Central has been beaten by the Cadets.

Of further interest is the superior height of the Johnnies to the diminutive Justices. Such elongated sharpshooters as Jimmy Giebel, Ace Reges, Johnny Swaggart and George Rehkopf should give the Washington team the highly valuable reach. Francis Battista and Joe Gallagher, both starting men; John Burch and George Batchelder complete the squad making the trip. The team has worked out this week on the Catholic University court.

Western's assignment against Monroe A. and M. Prep, of Monroe, Ga., at 9 p. m., finds the Georgetowners favored to win on the basis of the seedings which listed Western No. 3 after John Marshall and Staunton Military among the 16 teams entered from the District, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia.

Coach Cliff Moore is taking a squad of eight men, including Capt. Gerald Burns and George DeWitt, his two All-High aces. The other six primed for the classic are Hugo Schulze, Paul Heil, Rop Lomax, Tom Saylor, Max Needle and Tom Halloran.

The last District team to win the event was Eastern in 1933. The Lincoln Parkers were eliminated by John Marshall in 1935 and by Charlotte, N. C., in 1934.

St. John's is the first prep school from the Washington area to be invited since 1933, when Georgetown Prep went to the semifinals.

Illness to Bench Terp Track Star

Coleman Headley, the University of Maryland's star miler and middle-distance runner, will retire from competition for the remainer of the season because of illness, it was learned yesterday. He will reenter competition next winter and spring. His loss is a severe blow to Coach Geary Eppley, who had high hopes of turning out a formidable relay team, of which Headley was to have been an integral part, this year.

Celtics Win Title.

The Boys Club Celtics won the 85-pound championship of the Boys Club of Washington last night by swamping the Georgetown Boys Club, 12-3, on the B. C. W. court. The game was a play-off for the title. The Celtics led, 10-1, at the half.

Typewriter Girls Win.

The United Typewriter girls' team swamped the Warrenton A. C., 38-12, last night to keep their unbeaten record intact. Virginia Jones, with 20 points, and Anna Honabach, with 18, led the scoring.

Hessick Pin Team Upsets Cools Thrice

Parsons' 392 Set Gives Arcadia Win Over Premier Cab.

Cools' Fountain, leader in the race for the Columbia Heights League title, received a severe jolt last night at Arcadia, losing its three-game match to Hessick Coal. Vincent Barbers, although dropping the odd game to Ben Hundley, moved within one game of the No. 1 position.

The heavy pin-toppling was exhibited in the match between Arcadia and Premier Cab, the former gaining the nod over the Cabmen when Howard Parsons pummeled the maples for a set of 392 to offset Matty Jett's brilliant 160 effort.

Team game honors went to Hessick Coal with a 627 score and Arcadia annexed total pinfall with 1,804.

Genevieve Handley and Myra Hutchinson paired up to win the blind pig tourney held by the Catholic Ladies League last night at the Lucky Strike drives, totaling 578 for their set. M. Mehorne and Margaret Arendes finished second with 574 and Naomi Farrall and Ida Fitzgibbons were third with 569.

A new season record high-game mark was established last night in the Elks League at the Recreation alleys. Vince Fuschini smashing the maples for a 169 score. He finished the set with 416 to aid Brotherly Love's clean sweep over Fidelity. The league leading Tilers boosted their advantage to nine games in blanking the Entertainment five.

Maryland RaceBill Reaches Delegates

Annapolis, Md., March 9.—A bill to allow Maryland's four major race tracks to have 20 additional days racing each year reached the House of Delegates yesterday.

The four tracks—Bowie, Laurel, Pimlico and Havre de Grace—now have 100 days total racing each year. This bill, introduced by Delegate Samuel N. Friedel, Baltimore, would allow a total of 120 days racing and provides that each major track shall not have more than 30 days during the year.

Such an extension of the racing time would mean considerable revenue to the State. The daily license fee alone is $6,000 per day per track, and the additional 20 days would mean $120,000.

'Through Clowning,' Baer Reaches Europe

London, March 9 (AP).—Max Baer, arrived today on the Berengaria, radiating optimism and affirming his intention of taking boxing seriously from now on.

Max, apparently surprised by the flattering attention paid him, posed gingerly for photographers and said:

"No foolin', I'm through with clowning. I can't take any risks now because if I get through here o. k. I'm going to meet the winner of the Joe Louis-Jimmy Braddock fight. Louis will beat Braddock."

Eagles Peril Investigation Five Tonight

Girls' Teams Also in Post Tourney; Typists vs. Aggies.

The Flying Eagles, twice victorious, attempt to stop the advance of the favored Federal Bureau of Investigation five tonight at 8 o'clock in the feature contest of The Post's A. A. U. tournament in the Heurich gym.

Senate Beermen and the Daily News quintets hook up in a 145-pound scrap at 7 p. m. with a pair of girls' games also carded, Rockville A. A. meeting the Stewart Photographers at 9 o'clock, and the Typewriter Girls opposing the Department of Agriculture in the final at 10 p. m.

The 130-pound class will see the elimination of two more teams when the Lone Stars and the champion Northeast Boys Club meet at 8 p. m., and the Boys Club of Washington Fleetwings, foremost challengers, clash with Georgetown Boys Club five an hour later on the Boys Club courts.

The G-Men, fresh from dealing the Baltimore Y. M. H. A. five its worst defeat in several years, are being touted as hot favorites to succeed the George Washington Freshmen as champions, but it will take some of their best brand of basketball to conquer the Eagles, victorious over the Marines and Tennis Shop in previous encounters.

Rinaldi, Aggies, Sport Center Win.

The Rinaldi Tailors' tilt with the National City Christian Church was booked as the feature game of the tournament last night, but the Department of Agriculture's victory over the Naylor's Sea Food in the 145-pound class by scoring 5 points in the last 20 seconds, stole the show as far as the 300 spectators were concerned.

The Aggie lads were victors, 37 to 36, in the feature, the Rinaldi won, 48 to 20, in the unlimited class and the Sport Center 145-pound team won the other game on the program by defeating the Interstate Commerce Commission, 42-15.

Tied at 19-all at half time, the Government lads forged into a 32-24 lead and looked like winners by a larger score, but George Coakley, of the Coakley twins, was inserted and in feeding the ball to Ey, who scored 16 points, the Sea Food five went ahead 36-32, scoring 12 points in succession.

With 20 seconds to play, Alvin Davis, of the eventual winners, made a shot and was fouled. He converted the foul and with the gun in Timekeeper Bertilini's hands, Henry Weigel scrambled for the ball, grabbed hold of it and shot from past midcourt in desperation; the ball went in—and Naylor went out, in the most sensational finish of any tourney game thus far.

In the 115-pound class games at the Boys Club of Washington, Langley Boys Club, 110-pound titlists last year, and the Y. M. C. A. drove impressively into the final round. Langley swamped Police Boys Club No. 4, 20 to 9, and the "Y" tacked a 12-to-9 defeat on the Georgetown Boys Club.

Baxter Finds the Wages of Sin Amount to Something on Mat

LAVERNE BAXTER.

By Bill McCormick.

The wages of sin is a lot of money in the wrestling racket.

The soundness of this axiom of modern mat madness was a long time sinking through the skull of Laverne Baxter, but when the current No. 1 public enemy finally caught on, he started cashing in like a millionaire in a twi-bit dice game.

For Baxter wasn't always the terrible, terrible person who will go to the mat against Jack Hader, who is just a terrible person, at Turner's Arena tomorrow night.

Once upon a time, as the old saying goes, Baxter was a very nice, refined grappler. During this period while Baxter was trying to live up to his first name, the pickings were very scanty, to say the least.

One night right here in Washington came the great change. Laverne had worked in the opening bout, as was then his custom. As was also his custom, he quickly donned mufti and returned to the ringside to watch a couple of real tearers-apart commit mayhem upon each other.

"These mugs can't rassle any better than I can," said the idea to Baxter as it entered the practically virgin territory. "They're working on top because they're giving the customers a thrill. The addicts don't want to see rassling. They want to see rasslers bounced around."

Without telling a soul of his idea—probably because no one would have believed he had one anyway, Baxter waited until his next appearance on the mat. The timekeeper's whistle tweeted and Laverne walked right out and slapped down one of the better villians in the game. He slapped him down several times more—in fact more times than he could get up.

Back in the dressing room, he who got slapped was very irate over the whole business.

"Lissen, you mug," or words to that effect, he told Baxter. "Wha'sa idea of gettin' rough like that, widdout any notice or nuttin'?"

"My frand," answered Baxter in his Southern drawl, "My frand, dees is a toff beezness. Halso, it ees a dirty zeebness. Hall my life Suh, I haff been a nize, clean boy, but dot don't pay in dees game. Dees is a doity racket, und you dun't mek no money hontil you get chust as doity."

Thus was the metamorphosis of the gentlemanly South Carolinian completed.

Old Line Nine Is Seen as One Of Best Ever

Last Year's Roster Nearly Intact; Able Sophs Will Fill Any Holes.

With the 1936 roster virtually intact, one of the most formidable baseball teams that ever wore the black and gold socks of Maryland will carry the Old Line's colors on the diamond this season. Only four men are missing from last year, and they probably will not be missed, so plentiful and capable is the new crop of recruits.

Vic Willis, pitcher and first baseman; Ford Loker, pitcher, graduated; Bill Guckeyson has abandoned the sport to devote all of his time to track, and Jack Stonebraker is ineligible because of participation in a pro grid game, but the other members of last year's squad are back in uniform.

George Wood, star southpaw, and big Dale Patterson, a right hander; "Little Knocky" Thomas, catcher; Mike Surgent and Waverly Wheeler, infielders; Bill Bryant, Charley Keller and Jack Egan, outfielders, are the mainstays left from last summer. Leading talent up from freshmen ranks includes George Knepley, "Shorty" Chumbris, Eddie Johnson and Tommy Scharf, infielders; "Lefty" Chumbris, outfielder, and Charlie Weidinger, pitcher.

Maryland has an attractive 18-game schedule facing it, with a Northern trip after the close of school that will bring it up against Yale, Dartmouth, Vermont and Temple. The complete schedule:

March 27—Vermont.
April 2—Dartmouth; 3—Virginia; Charlottesville; 8 and 9—Cornell; 10—Rutgers; 16—Michigan; 22—Washington and Lee; 23—Virginia; 24—Georgetown, Washington; 28—Navy, Annapolis.
May 1—Georgetown; 3—Duke; 7—Washington College; 11—Temple; 14—Richmond U.; 15—North Carolina; 18—V. M. I. Northern trip, June 10 and 11—Vermont, Burlington; 12—Dartmouth, Hanover; 14—Yale, New Haven; 15—Temple, Philadelphia.

Maryland's squad has put in three days of fine practice, Saturday, Monday and yesterday.

Mount Rainier Scores, Goes To Semifinals

Mount Rainier High School, representing Prince Georges County in the State-wide basketball tournament, yesterday moved to the Western Shore semifinals by chalking up its twenty-first consecutive victory, 23 to 19, over a hard-fighting Catonsville High quint, champions of Baltimore County, on the Coliseum floor at the University of Maryland.

By virtue of the sloppy win, the Mounts gained the right to meet the strong Annapolis High five, titleholders in Anne Arundel County, tomorrow at 3 p. m. on the Coliseum floor. The winner will play the Allegany County contender for the Western Shore title.

Referee—Adkins.

Postgrad By Lewis Atchison

Several proposed changes in rules will be discussed at the National Basketball Coaches Association's three-day conclave, opening Sunday at Chicago, and out of the welter of words may come a change or two that will alter the game's complexion.

Clair Bee, Long Island University coach and recognized as one of the game's shrewdest strategists, has issued a group of three questions to writers for comment, and his replies, it is safe to venture, will be diversified and interesting. The press represents public opinion to no small degree, and, in the past, the public has had nary a whisper, let alone a voice, in welding the rules.

ATCHISON.

Mr. Bee wants to know how we feel about the three-second rule, the center jump and the present elevation of baskets. It is no secret that the customers whose dollars help pay the freight feel strongly about these matters.

We believe the three-second rule has failed of its purpose and should be eliminated entirely. It might have been necessary to keep the foul lane clear in the old days when one official handled the games and found it impossible to keep the boys from shoving, tearing shirts off backs and planting elbows in ribs when he wasn't looking. A change was necessary at the time, and the three-second rule was the best remedy for the emergency.

• • • •

But with two officials keeping their eyes on the little darlings it is hardly necessary. A man can't even glare at an opponent without a warning from the referee, much less stick a friendly thumb in his eye. As for the block play, which caused the rumpus and was supposed to be eliminated by the rule, it is still with us and will be until a better way of executing plays and chalking up points is found. The boys merely moved their tootsies a few inches beyond the no-foul sanctuary, and took up the old business at their new stand. Moreover, they sort of rubbed it in by putting a man on either side of the foul zone and working double blocks.

• • • •

As for the center jump, it is all right to put the ball in play at the beginning of a game, and at the start of the second half, but it slows up action in between and puts a premium on height at this position. If you saw Novak, of Loyola of Chicago, play against George Washington, you have a good idea of a tall man's value at center, although it is true that Novak was a more formidable obstable under the basket, where he nonchalantly deflected almost certain field goals.

• • • •

The elimination of a jump after a successful foul shot speeded up play immeasurably, for the team gaining possession of the ball tried to get the jump on its opponent by long throws to a man downcourt. Consequently the defense had to get back in position at a pell-mell pace or be caught by a sleeper play that completely offset its free throw.

• • • •

Higher baskets, say 11 feet instead of 10, as they are now, would help offset the handicap of height, or the lack of it, but the rules committee would encounter obstacles here. As Paul Menton, Baltimore sports editor, points out, too many schools, clubs and Y. M. C. A. gyms would be unable to make the change, thereby lessening its value and making for confusion in the size of courts.

• • • •

The situation is bad enough now with the rules elastic enough to qualify bandboxes and fieldhouses alike as "official." This condition is understandable, however, for when basketball was invented, modern gyms weren't dreamed of, much less planned. Games were played in every imaginable space, over drugstores, in barns and any indoor space available, regardless of size. Within a decade they may get around to standardizing floors, but until they do it will not be wise to juggle the baskets.

• • • •

One point the committee will not discuss is the four-fouls rule, and this, in our opinion, needs revision. It isn't fair to keep a man out of the best part of a game because he commits four fouls, many of which might be unintentional. Frank Dobson, of Maryland, suggests using hockey's system of time-penalties, whereby a man's absence from the floor is gauged by the seriousness of his offense. This would be particularly adaptable to basketball, where officials differ in their interpretations and a player easily can be victimized by a peculiar ruling.

Mr. Hermie Schmarr, of Catholic University, is particularly interested in this phase of the rules. They got him out of the Rider game after the first seven minutes, which, to Mr. Schmarr's mind, was 33 minutes too soon.

Columbiana Broke Mark, Study Shows

New York, March 9.—Buddy Hirsch's Columbiana broke the American speed record for fillies over a mile and a quarter by running the distance in 2:01 4-5 in the Widener Challenger Cup at Hialeah Saturday, a search of the records discloseed today.

Available information indicates that the previous fastest time for a filly at the distance was 2:02 4-5, raced by Black Maria at Belmont Park in 1926.

Only five colts have bettered Columbiana's mark in America, and the record of one of them is disputed. Whiskbroom II's official world record of 2 minutes flat was disputed by many unofficial clockers who caught his time at 2:02 2-5.

The others were Sarazen's 2:00 4-5, considered the unofficial American record; Discovery, 2:01 4-5; Omaha, 2:01 2-5, and Sun Beau, 2:01 3-5.

Irish Take Bike Lead As Quarrel Halts Nazis

St. Louis, March 9 (AP).—Dissension in the partnership of the colorful German team, Gustave Kilian and Heinz Vopel, sent St. Louis' six-day bike race into a temporary state of confusion late today and enabled the Irish team of Jackie Sheehan and "Cocky" O'Brien to take over first place.

Walsh, Justice Agent, Sets .22 Rifle Record

Tampa, Fla., March 9 (AP).—W. R. Walsh, member of the Department of Justice pistol team, of Washington, broke the national .22-caliber championship record in the national midwinter championship pistol tournament here today. He scored 289 points out of a possible 300, bettering a record of 283 made by E. E. Jones, of the Los Angeles Police Department, last year. Jones ranked sixth today, with 282 points.

Maj. William B. Richards, of the United States Marine Corps, Paris Island, S. C., equaled the national championship record in the .22-caliber slow-fire matches with a score of 188 out of 200. J. J. Engbrecht, of the Los Angeles Police Department, holder of the slow-fire record, ranked thirteenth today with 179.

Conte Takes Tropical Park Feature

Victor Pays $25, Upsets Feature Day

Brandon Prince Is 2d; Genie Palatine Runs in Third Place.

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, Fla., March 9.—A. T. Partridge's Conte, a son of Reigh Count that was left at the post in his last appearance at Hialeah Park, upset calculations here today when he easily won the Angelfish Purse, 1 1-16-mile headliner of an 8-race card. Although last to leave the gate, the 5-year-old gelding ran over the leaders and won by two lengths in the fast time of 1:43 3-5, made over a track still slow from the terrific rain of opening day.

J. D. Norris' lightly weighted Brandon Prince, dropping 17 pounds from his good recent effort, was second by four lengths over the unfortunate Our Reigh, representing Mrs. J. D. Hertz.

Mrs. Emil Denemark's Genie Palatine, the favorite, stopped badly after making the early running. Conte's backers collected at the rate of $25.20 for $2. The dark clouds opened up before this event and it was run in a shower that later turned to a drizzle.

Genie Palatine was away on her toes from the inside. She drew clear of the small field and entered the backstretch daylight before Brandon Prince and Our Reigh. The latter saved ground at the first turn but later was blocked several times. Brandon Prince collared the tiring Genie Palatine before rounding out of the backstretch. Then Jack Westrope swung the slow starting Conte into a threatening position at the top of the stretch and the veteran picked up Brandon Prince to draw away in the last furlong.

Many a straight ticket, as well as daily double pasteboards, had to be torn up after the first race. Scotch Queen, with the efficient apprentice Le Blanc in the saddle, was deemed a standout over the track slowed up by yesterday's downpour, but the filly struck a snag in the $12.50 for $2 shot Sir Rose.

CONTE broke slow, as usual, but began to move up around lower turn and when straightened out in run down backstretch, went up on inside, made BRANDON PRINCE stop and drew away easily at end. BRANDON PRINCE assumed lead midway of backstretch and was next best. OUR REIGH was miserably riden. He was blocked and shut off several times, finally moved up on inside and closed gamely. SANDY BOOT made his bid on turn, but falter badly. GENIE PALATINE had speed for half a mile, then quit. TOP DOG was outrun.

ZEBAR had to be much the best. He had plenty of speed, but when MOLASSES BOB moved up on the outside it appeared as if he was knocked back, but recovered and, closing with a rush on the inside, held on gamely. MOLASSES BOB moved up very fast, appeared to interfere with the winner, was taken a bit wide on turn and made a game effort. THE QUEEN made up ground fast and closed gamely on the outside. CORKER trailed far back, as usual. ODDESA BOY ran below best form.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MINSTRELETTE, $34.10, $11.50, $5.60; AMERICAN BELLE, $7.20, $4.20; BLAKEEN, $3.00.

MINSTRELETTE worked her way up gamely, came around AMERICAN BELLE on turn, assumed command in stretch and was going away at end. AMERICAN BELLE made her move around turn, then tired. BLAKEEN was used up setting the pace. MAKEIT closed a big gap and was a fast-going fourth. TOUCHE ran poor race.

Col. Keppel Cites Social Work Gain

Closer contact of the general public with social welfare work in recent years has brought about a greater appreciation of the service which such workers are rendering, Col. Mary H. Keppel declared last night at a meeting of the Volunteers of America at the relief station, 471 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, in celebration of the forty-first anniversary of the founding of the Volunteers.

Col. Keppel told of the progress of social work during the many years which she has served the Volunteers.

The extension of the Volunteers to scores of cities, after being founded in New York 41 years ago last night by Gen. and Mrs. Ballington Booth, was described by Lieut. Maj. H. Mills Eroh, commander of the Columbia division.

Selections at Tropical Park.

Dear Al:

Rob Jamison, a veteran horse fan, tells this one, recalled by the story of the sale of Court Scandal just before he won the Flamingo Stakes at Hialeah. In 1918, Jamison said, Willis Sharpe Kilmer, knowing little about horses and eager to have his colors in the Kentucky Derby, came to Louisville in search of a thoroughbred. Every Kentuckian is a born hoss trader and dozens of them camped on Kilmer's trail. There was a fellow with a long-legged sorrel he had been trying to sell to Cal Milam for $7,500. Milam finally bought the horse and later sold him to Kilmer for $15,000. After the sale, Milams walked into the Lexington Club, the happiest man in town. "Well, boys, I took him," he shouted and bought drinks all around. Three days later the horse stepped away from the field to win the Derby in a canter. Who was it? None other than Exterminator, one of the greatest horses ever to step on a race track. After that, Jamison went on, it meant a fight each time one of the boys saw Cal Milam and shouted, "Boys, I took him." BILL.

First race—Marfeu has knocked at the door consistently and now appears ready to enter the winner's circle. Wee Colleen has plenty of speed for a nonwinner and is dangerous. Canard has plenty of early lick and is a possible surprise.

Second race—Loyal Son has worked well for this event and should gain a set of brackets. Capt. Greenock is the one to beat. War Jewell has been hiding and could awake with a bang.

Third race—Westy's Hero shapes up well in this juvenile test. Likes the track and I see no reason for mistakes. Spanish Fly and Blue Grotto are fair youngsters and will be ready to battle it out if the top one falters.

Fourth race—Lucky Jean, partial to the Tropical course, is dropping down and needs only to run one of her good races. Aftermath has some excellent efforts to recommend. Lady Day for the show.

Fifth race—Mondorf gets in with featherweight and makes the first start in some time. However, this one works briskly and has excellent early speed. Black River is fit and dangerous. Gay Balko could surprise in the mud.

Sixth race—Seven Star should have walked home in his last, but was the victim of a bad ride. Litzenberger will do the handling tomorrow. Chancer and Silver Fleece for the place and show.

Seventh race—Bugle Call appears to be the best thing of the day. Meeting less formidable company and is ready for the best. Broadway Maid and Legsure should take places in the pay-off circle.

Eight race—Penrill is the class of the day's finale. Claimant won in the mud here opening day. Cellaigh for the show.

Best bet—Bugle Call.

Export Copper, Lead and Tin Continue Rise

Copper 16.80, Lead 7.50 and Tin 63.12 Cents Per Pound.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 9.—The price of lead was lifted $5 a ton today by St. Joseph Lead Co., following a boost of a similar amount yesterday by leading producers. The new price is equal to 7.50 cents a pound, New York, and 7:35 cents, East St. Louis.

At the same time the speculative fever which has been manifest in nonferrous metals, especially in foreign markets, continued as copper for export rose to the equivalent of 16.85 cents a pound from 16.40 cents Monday.

The European armaments race is credited by trade experts with causing the wave of buying, some of it for actual metal to convert into arms, but much of it by speculators hoping to profit from this extraordinary call for metals.

The domestic quotation for copper held at 16¼ cents a pound, to which it was raised yesterday from the 15-cent level, in effect since late February.

Tin was quoted yesterday at 63.12 cents a pound, an increase of 3.12 cents over Monday.

Fundamental Investors Vote 25-Cent Dividend

Directors of Fundamental Investors, Inc., a mutual investment company, have declared a dividend of 25 cents per share, payable April 1 to stockholders of record March 17. As of March 4, total assets, at market value, had advanced to more than $10,900,000.

Youngstown Sheet Resumes Dividend

Youngstown, Ohio, March 9 (AP).—The Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., directors today ordered resumption of common dividend payments of 75 cents, payable April 1 to stock on record March 20.

It was a regular quarterly dividend placing the stock on a $3 annual basis and was the first dividend since July 1, 1931, when 50 cents was paid.

By the Associated Press.

The principal foreign currencies were quoted slightly higher yesterday in terms of the dollar.

In New York, ruling at $4.88¼, sterling was up ¼ of a cent; French francs at 4.56⅞, up .00⅛ of a cent, and Swiss francs 22.82 cents, up .01 of a cent. Guilders also recorded a small gain.

In London the dollar declined ¼ of a cent, closing at 4.88¼ to the pound, against the New York overnight rate of 4.88. In Paris the dollar closed at the equivalent of 4.566 cents to the franc, compared with the overnight New York rate of 4.563 cents.

Business Loans $836,000,000 Above Year Ago

Rise $42,000,000 in Week to a Total of 4.191 Billion.

Commercial loans of banks in 101 leading cities increased $42,000,000 in the week to a total of $4,191,000,000, according to the Federal Reserve statement yesterday. This is the sharpest rise since the seasonal movement began six weeks ago, and the total is $836,000,000 above a year ago.

New York City institutions contributed $20,000,000 to the weekly gain, while Chicago banks added $9,000,000 to the aggregate. At the present level, total commercial loans are $836,000,000 above the corresponding week a year ago.

Due undoubtedly to the fact that Easter falls on an early date this year, March 28, commercial borrowings to finance the spring trade got off on its seasonal movement in the last week of January, just a month earlier than the seasonal upturn last year.

Banks outside of New York City participated in the upturn several weeks before the movement caught hold there, but due to substantial gains registered by local banks recently the increase percentage-wise has been slightly higher in the financial center.

A $59,000,000 increase has been shown in the 100 leading cities outside New York, bringing total commercial loans to $2,695,000,000 on the latest reporting date. In New York City, a $34,000,000 gain has been chalked up since January 7, making the total $1,496,000,000. At this time last year the "other loan" total was $38,000,000 lower in the money center.

Announcement also is made that the subscription books for the current offering of 2½ per cent Treasury bonds for 1949-1953 will close at the close of business Wednesday, March 10, 1937. This offering is open only to the holders of Treasury notes of series B-1937, maturing April 15, 1937.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Metals, Oils, Steels and Commodities Work Higher; U. S. Bonds Decline.

New York, March 9.—Stocks worked irregularly higher, with pronounced strength in a few groups. Trading volume fell to around 2,500,000 shares. Government bonds again weakened. Commodities were higher all around. May wheat rose half a cent to 136½ cents a bushel.

This was a day for the boosters, but on the whole stocks failed to keep pace with commodities. Possibly that was because the prospect of higher profits is tempered with rising costs. Steel scrap was listed another 50 cents a ton to the highest price in 14 years. Copper metal was put up to 16½ cents a pound, the highest in seven years. Lead also was increased, and miscellaneous commodities stiffened. Along with those symptoms of inflation came numerous announcements of wage increases, covering the meat packing and other industries, and more strike news—which means higher wages and shorter hours in the end.

All that may lift public purchasing power, unless old-fashioned theories that real purchasing power is production, but few will argue the side that living costs are not going to take running broad jumps in the next several months. Steel shares were moderately firm, but created no market furore. Motor stocks continued to work under pressure, possibly because it was feared that with so much of organized labor engaged in sit-down strikes fewer people would be available for operating motor cars.

Strength in steel and ore markets are held to foreshadow another rise in oil, possibly 12 to 15 cents a barrel. Oil shares were more active and fairly strong, more likely because of any hints that labor would leave the industry unmolested until it had disposed of other industries.

Tobaccos Weak.

Tobacco stocks were a poor market. American Tobacco common and B shares dropped a half dozen points or so to the lowest levels in two years when the 1936 report was published. It showed failure to cover dividend requirements for the fourth successive year. Earnings of $3.70 a share on the two classes of stock were shown, against $5 payments made last year. Liggett & Myers shares also weakened 3 to 6 points in response to the president's prediction of another decrease in profits this year.

Metal stocks were the best group. American Smelters topped 101 for a gain of more than a point. It was the first time the stock had sold above 100 in years. Other mining shares were higher, aided by the rise in copper, lead and zinc prices. Patino Mines, which has been hanging back, advanced more than a point. Phelps Dodge revived. National Lead jumped more than 3 points and St. Joseph Lead climbed 2 points.

Farm implement shares were well liked by those who could afford to play with them. Deere had no difficulty in pushing ahead half a dozen points. Most of the rails were firm, but they made no spectacular advances. Sloss Sheffield again came through with a rise of 8 or 10 points, but for once the shares found a little selling, just under 200, and settled back a little. Rubber stocks made sharp gains.

Two stocks to give shorts a bad time were American Can and Continental Can. They were pushed ahead several points. Utilities hardened a little in the last hour.

Some brokers noticed a small amount of franc repatriation this morning and the day's volume in foreign orders was lower. In the closing dealings yesterday Europe was a seller, but today buying was in excess of selling. It begins to look as though little French money would be attracted to Paris by means of a dollar loan, by whatever device used to circumvent the Johnson act, nor is any American money likely to go that way. Foreign exchanges were firmer. Sterling and francs both rose.

Borrowings Increase.

The feature of the condition statement of reporting member banks in 101 cities as of March 3 was a $42,000,000 expansion in loans other than security borrowings. As was revealed last Thursday, New York institutions contributed $21,000,000 of this gain and the banks in Chicago $9,000,000. Reserves went down $120,000,000 and demand deposits adjusted $137,000,000. Time deposits rose $56,000,000, reflecting largely deposits of trust funds. Domestic bank deposits fell $158,000,000 and amounts due from domestic banks decreased $151,000,000. All the reporting member banks came through the March 1 date on which the first half of the 33 per cent increase in reserve requirements became effective with only $2,000,000 of additional borrowings. The banks added commercial paper and bankers' acceptances to their portfolios in an amount of $10,000,000, but disposed of $27,000,000 of Government securities on balance.

Silver.

Although the Administration has assured the silver Senators that they need not fear for their investments, if any, in Western silver mines, as the silver purchase act was not going to be repealed, nothing in the silver market has suggested a rise in the price for the metal. On the contrary a sense of the economic fitness of things might some time induce the Treasury to bring down its buying price (now 77 cents an ounce) at least halfway toward the world price of around 45 cents an ounce. Meanwhile the steady rise in most of the silver mine shares probably comes from a belief that the mines stand to make money from their production of base metals. At least that is being talked for Silver King and U. S. Smelting, and it certainly is the main factor in the action of American Smelting and Cerro de Pasco.

Profit.

The principal strictly silver producer is Sunshine Mining. That company, it is reported, is producing at the rate of 1,000,000 ounces a month or better, at a cost over all (and including a 12½ cents an ounce tax) of 31 cents an ounce. Net price after mint charges is 74 cents an ounce, so that the profits under the silver purchase act aren't at all bad. Optimists hope that Sunshine this year will turn out 14,000,000 ounces.

February Record Set By Montgomery Ward

Chicago, March 9 (AP).—Montgomery Ward & Co. reported today that February sales totaled $22,160,565, the largest for the month in the company's history, an increase of 24 per cent compared with February, 1936.

February is the first month of the mail order concern's fiscal year. Sales for the year which ended January 31 were the largest of any year on record.

Foreign Markets.

London, March 9.—Prices were very mixed in today's stock market. The mining and oil groups were heavy under French liquidation and tobacco and rubber shares were also in supply. Transatlantic issues and German bonds sold lower while gilt-edged securities remained steady. Vickers, Ltd., was weak, holders selling when directors announced 10 per cent dividend, which was disappointing, as they expected a larger disbursement.

Paris.—Rentes were firm again today in the bourse, closing with net gains of 25 to 105 centimes. Bank of France shares continued their advance, moving up an additional 255 francs. The remainder of the list was mixed with Royal Dutch losing 59 francs on the day.

Liverpool.—Wheat futures closed ⅞d to 1d higher. Italy purchased two cargoes of Argentine grain and there was a better demand from the United Kingdom for Australian wheat. Heavy realizing in cotton futures offset trade calling and investment buying for distant positions, and the market closed 2 points lower to 4 higher.

Wheat Prices Are Lifted by Export Sales

Argentina Sells Two Million Bushels to Germany.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 9.—Big international export sales, around 3,500,000 bushels, together with word of many dust storms in domestic dry areas, hoisted wheat values 1¾ cents today. The export purchases included 2,000,000 bushels of Argentine wheat for Germany. Some estimates were that 750,000 bushels of Canadian wheat were disposed of today for export.

Although heavy profit-taking on the part of recent buyers led to some reaction from the day's top prices, Chicago wheat futures at the close were ⅜ to 1¼ cents above yesterday's finish, May $1.36⅝@$1.36½, July $1.19⅛@$1.19¼, September $1.16¼@$1.16⅜, corn also ⅜ to 1¼ up, May $1.09⅝@$1.09¾, July $1.04⅞@$1.05, September 98⅞@99, oats ½ to 1 cent advanced, May 47⅝@47¾, and rye showing ½ to ⅝ gain, May $1.06⅞. The outcome in provisions varied from 2 cents decline to 20 cents bulge.

GOLD AND PRICES
The stimulating effect of new gold discoveries upon business activity and commodity prices has been recognized for centuries, yet the effect on prices of the recent tremendous rise in world gold production may be overlooked by many investors. The annual average gold output from 1903 to 1932 was 19,850 million ounces. In the past two years, average annual gold production has been nearly 33,000 million ounces, and is still rising, to the certain advantage of world economic recovery.
